1230. <sup>1</sup> Mac Craith — Joseph.—Much light is thrown on these obits by the plaint made in person by bishop Jocelin and embodied in a Brief of Gregory IX. (Perugia, April 8, 1235; Theiner, ubi sup., p. 30), appointing judges to examine whether the diocese of Ardagh belonged to Tuam, or to Armagh. The archbishop of Tuam consecrated the prior of Inismor (most probably Inishmore—great island—in Lough Gamna, co. Longford) bishop of Ardagh. Afterwards, Joseph (Mag Theichidhain), the archdeacon, who had officiated assuch at the function, falsely represented to the primate L[uke Netterville], that himself had been elected. Thereby he obtained confirmation, caused himself (non sine symonie vitio) to be consecrated by the authority of Luke's successor (Donatus) and was intruded by lay influence into partial possession of the diocese.

The canonical bishop having died, "Magairy" (=Mac Sherraiğ of the text), the new archdeacon, received consecration from the Tuam metropolitan. His death took place within the same year (1230). Whereupon, the intruded obtained total possession and proceeded to alienate the diocesan property. The prior of "St. John's outside the new gate of Dublin" and his fellow judges (appointed ad hoc by the Curia, on the complaint of the prior and canons of Kilbixy (co. Westmeath)) quashed the election of Joseph as uncanonical and unconfirmed by his own (Tuam) metropolitan. The execution of the sentence was intrusted to the primate. He, however (quadam pecunie summa et quibusdam procuratoribus symoniace receptis), for the second time, intruded Joseph.

But the church having been long destitute of a pastor and not free from the danger of an invader, the archbishop of Tuam, to whom the right of election had devolved by lapse of time, consecrated Jocelin, "a monk of St. Mary's near Dublin." (This took place either at the close of 1232, or in the beginning of 1233. For on March 1 of the latter year, Henry III. commanded the justiciary, Maurice FitzGerald, to give such possession of the see to Jocelin, consecrated bishop thereof, as Robert (sic), his predecessor, had at his death (D. I., I. 2018).)

On the other hand, the primate (non sine symonie vitio, ut dicitur) confirmed the election of G[elasius] = Gilla-Isu], a priest of the diocese, said to have been excommunicated (for whom, see under 1237, infra).

A palpable hiatus in the foregoing, namely, the death of Joseph, is supplied by the additional obit of the text. The omission of his demise by the original compiler shows that, in the chronicle from

<sup>2</sup> Ua Tormaidh.—In the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.), his Christian name is given as Gilla-Isu. Having obtained confirmation of his appointment from the primate (1230, note 1, supra), he, according to bishop

Jocelin, collected an armed force and burned the episcopal houses, together with the fort, or close (castrum), of Ardagh church; thereby destroying the stone (round?) tower of the cathedral (quandam eius turrim lapideam).

Then proceeding against the bishop, who was being vested for celebration of the divine offices, Gelasius would presumably have slain him and his, had they not provided for themselves by flight. Thus expelled, Jocelin proceeded chobair], so that they took away many women captive.<sup>1</sup>— [1236] Gilla-Patraic Mac Gillaroid, chief of Cenel-Oengusa, died.

Kalends of Jan. [on 5th feria, 1st of the moon,] A.D. [1237]
1237. The pillaging of Rinn-duin was done by Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobair and there were killed Conchobur the Tawny, son of Toirrdelbach and Tadhg, son of Cormac. And the Justiciary came to the Termon of [St.] Cailfhinn and the town was burned and the church of Imlech-Ua-Rochadha was burned.—The defeat of Cluain-Ca[tha] was inflicted by Feidhlimidh upon the sons of Ruaidhri and on Conchobur, son of Cormac [Mac Diarmata]. —Thomas Ua Ruadhain,<sup>1</sup> bishop of Luighni [Achonry], rested in Christ.—The bishop of Conmaicni [Ardagh], Ua Tormaidh,<sup>2</sup> rested in Christ.—Muircertach (son of Ruaighri) Mac Diarmata, rested in Christ (or, was killed<sup>3</sup>).

to the Curia for redress. The judges appointed by Gregory IX. were the archbishop of Dublin, the bishop of Ossory and the prior of All Saints, Dublin. (Theiner, ubi sup. p. 30-1.) O'Tormey, it seems probable, died before the proceedings were brought to a close, leaving Jocelin in undisputed possession.

On a review of all the circumstances, it seems impossible to acquit Donatus, archbishop of Armagh, of grave dereliction of duty. A question to be decided amicably by canonical process he thrice deliberately submitted to the arbitrament of force.

The total silence of the native Annals respecting a contest of such duration and violence is remarkable.

<sup>3</sup> Was killed.—This, according to the Annals of Loch Ce, is the true reading.

The original of the foregoing I have not found. His death as a Grey (Cistercian) monk and the comparisons, with exception of the first, are given in the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.). Aed, son of Ainmire, was slain in 597(-8), supra.
Conn of the hundred battles, Art Aenfhir (the lonely), his son and Cormac, son of Art [not of Conn, as in D], were kings of Ireland who lived in the second century (A.D.).

The foregoing is apparently expanded from the obit in the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.), in which Donnchadh is called the supporter of the faith and fame of the Half of Mogh and tower of splendour and pre-eminence of the South of Ireland.

Donnchad's zeal once produced an unexpected result. In a Letter addressed to the bishops of Annaghdown and Clonfert (dated Jan. 10, 1244), Innocent IV. appoints them judges in a complaint made by the bishop of Killaloe against the archbishop of Cashel. After his consecration, Richard de Burgh, the Justiciary, retained the regalia, refusing to give them up, except on payment of a sum of money. Whereupon the bishop threatened to excommunicate any one paying the mulct. Verum quia tandem, ipso penitus ignorante, a nobili viro, D. Carbrech, domino Tuadomonie, Laoniensis diocesis, contra inhibitionem huiusmodi dicta fuit persoluta pecunia, et per consequens prefata regalia eidem episcopo restituta, idem archiepiscopus,

The last sentence is the rendering of the textual Tadhg item.

<sup>3</sup> Went into Saxon-land.—The object of this journey appears from a mandate of Henry III. (St. Sever, May 6, 1243) to the justiciary of Ireland. A[lbert], archbishop of Armagh, had lately come to the king in Gascony, demanding, in right of his church, restitution of Drogheda, Louth and other vills, and of the manor of Nobber (co. Meath), this last having belonged to Hugh de Lacy, late Earl of Ulster. Fitz Gerald was commanded to take with him the treasurer of Ireland and the Seneschal of Meath and enquire into the archiepiscopal rights; which the king neither will, nor ought to, subtract from. (D. I., I. 2618).

<sup>4</sup> Hugh de Lacy.—Erroneously given under next year in the Annals of Loch Ce. Henry III. wrote to the justiciary of Ireland (Bordeaux, Feb. 8, 1243) that, by law and custom of Ireland, the king may distrain widows by their lands to take husbands of the king's choice, provided the widows be not disparaged. Fitz Gerald is commanded that, if A[melina], widow of Hugh de Lacy, will not marry Stephen Longespee, as the king had requested her, he shall distrain her to do so, according to the custom of Ireland. (D. I., I. 2600). De Lacy must accordingly have died in the preceding year.

<sup>2</sup> The Justiciary.—On Jan. 30, 1245, Henry III. wrote to Maurice Fitz Gerald that David, son of Llewellyn, late prince of North Wales, broke the treaty of peace with the king, invaded the king's land of Wales, slew his subjects, and tried to seduce the Welsh barons from their allegiance. The king prays the justiciary, magnates and subjects of Ireland (which he wishes to share in his conquest) to join him in revenging such treachery. Fitz Gerald is commanded, amongst other matters, to certify what provision and force he can despatch to the king's aid and to confer with the magnates thereupon (D. I., I. 2733).

<sup>3</sup> Feidhlimidh.—On March 29, 1245, letters of safe conduct for one year were issued for him, in coming to the king. On Oct. 21, 1245, letters of protection, dated from the camp at Gannoc (Carnarvonshire), were granted to him until the king's arrival in Ireland (D. I., I. 2738-78).

This is given in the Four Masters under the present year.

His name was John O'hUghroin.
On the death of Donnchadh in 1244, supra, John, the archdeacon and Thomas O'Cuinn, abbot of Roscommon, were elected by the dignitaries and the junior canons respectively. Both appealed by procuration to Innocent IV., who was then in Lyons. In a Letter addressed to the archbishop of Tuam, dated July 3 (1245), the Pope decided in favour of John and gave a dispensation in the defect arising from his having been de

“Drawne,” C; D renders: executus
fuit per regis ministros,—which is not alone incorrect in the rendering, but a gross historical error. In this
(D) Translation his death is rightly given under 1257.

<sup>4</sup> Was raised.—On Aug. 26, 1246, the royal assent to his election was notified to the archbishop of Tuam (although, it was added, the dean and chapter made the selection without first obtaining the king's license). (D. I., I. 2844.)

entire week, so that they allowed neither Foreigner nor Gaidhel across, until Cormac Ua Conchobair played a ruse in the end. That is, Cormac went with the horse-turned after that upwards, throughout the length of the same plain, to the edge of the morass and went close thereby eastwards, until he reached the Ford of Cuil-

until they saw the great horse-host [advancing] to them, on the side of the river on which they were. And whilst the Cenel-Conaill had their attention upon the horse-host text of C and D.

<sup>2</sup> Raighned.—The apparent inconsistency of this and the final (additional) entry of the preceding year is explained by the Letter, dated Lyons, Oct. 8 (1246), of Innocent IV. directing the Dominican Prior of Drogheda and the Franciscan Guardian of Dundalk to serve citations in the matter of the Armagh succession. When the See became vacant (by resignation of the German, Albert), the Chancellor, against the consent of the rest of the Chapter, postulated

Germanus, bishop of Rathluraigh (Derry). The archdeacon appealed to the Pope, who through the aforesaid Prior and Guardian enjoined all concerned to appear before the Curia on, or before, the next Lecture Jerusalem Sunday (the fourth Sunday of the following Lent, March 10, 1247). (Theiner, ubi sup., p. 45.) The present entry of the Annals shows that the election of Germanus was set aside, and Raighned [Reginald?] made archbishop.

Eachmarcach Ua Catha[i]n, king of Ciannachta and of [1247] Fir-na-craibhe, was killed by Magnus Ua Catha[i]n, on his going upon a foray to the latter, to Airther-muighi in Dal-riatai.—Ruaighri Ua Cananna[i]n took the kingship of Tir-Conaill.—Aedh Mac Conchailleadh, abbot of Cluain-Eois, rested.—Raighned<sup>2</sup> was instituted into the archbishopric of Ard-Macha in Rome.—Murchadh Ua hAnluain, king of the Oirrthir, was killed this year.

Kalends of Jan. on [4th] feria, 2nd of the moon, A.D. [1248 Bis.] 1248. Ruaidhri Ua Cananna[i] was killed by Geoffrey, son of Domnall Mor Ua Domnaill and many other persons [were killed] along with him and Geoffrey took the kingship of Tir-Conaill after him.—Raighnedh, archbishop of Ard-Macha, came from Rome with the Pallium and Mass was said by him in it, on the feast of [SS.] Peter and Paul [Monday, June 29], in Ard-Macha.

A hosting by the Foreigners of Ireland to Cuil-

With respect to the bishopric of Rathluraigh (Rathlurensis), valuable information is contained in another Letter of the same Pope, dated Lyons, May 31 (1247), transferring the See therefrom to Derry. From the time of the delimitation of the dioceses, the See was in Derry. Sed postmodum bonae memoriae Ocophthyg [Ua Cobhthaigh], predecessor eiusdem (i.e., of the bishop who postulated to have the See moved back to Derry) sedem ipsam ad villam Rathlurensem, de qua idem predecessor originem duxerat, illectus natalis soli dulcedine, a Sede Apostolica non petita licentia nec obtenta, transtulit motu proprie voluntatis.

The Ua Cobhthaigh (O'Coffey) here mentioned was, no doubt, the bishop of that name who died in 1173, supra. The foregoing is strong confirmatory evidence that the Bishop's Chair offered to the Abbot Ua Brolchain in 1158 meant the dignity of mitred abbot. It seems incredible that an abbot-bishop of Derry should remove the See from there to Maghera (Rathluraigh).

1248. <sup>1</sup> Craft.—"These were cots, or small boats, which were carried by land on the shoulders of men, to be launched on lakes for plundering islands" (O'Donovan, F. M., iii. 330).

1249. <sup>1</sup> Twelve years and seven hundred years.—This is a material error. In A. D. 537, St. Columba was in his seventeenth year. He passed over to Iona when he was forty two years old. Perhaps, however, as the editor of the Annals of Loch Ce suggests (ad an.), the meaning is 12 years less than 700. (That is, for ocus—and, we are to read o—from.) This would bring the reckoning within a year of A. D. 562, the true date. (See Todd Lectures, Vol. III, pp. 21-2.)

rathain and a castle and bridge were built by them at Druim-tairsech. rathain, so that they built the bridge of the Bann and the castle of Druim-tairsech and the mansion of Druim-[-tairsech]. [1248]

Craft<sup>1</sup> were carried by Brian Ua Neill, [namely] by the arch-king of the North of Ireland, from Loch-Feabhaill into Magh-Itha, past the Termon of [St.] Dabeoc, into Lorc, until he reached Loch-Eirne, so that he took away countless spoil and broke down a castle there.

Kalends of Jan. (on 6th feria, 13th of the moon), A.D. 1249. Twelve years and seven hundred years<sup>1</sup> [have elapsed] since [St.] Colum-cille went to I[ona] to this year.—[Piers] son of Henry [Poer], was slain by Aedh Ua Conchobair, namely, Aedh, son of Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh and David Drew and other Foreign nobles [were slain] along with them.<sup>2</sup>—The defeat of Ath-na-righ [was inflicted] on Toirrdelbach Ua Conchobuir, whereby Aedh, son of Aedh, was killed therein and Brian of the Doire and a great many of the nobles of Connacht [were killed].—A great hosting by the Justiciary and by Fitz Maurice (into Connacht), until they expelled Feidhlimidh out of the country and left Toirrdelbach, son of Aedh, in his stead.<sup>3</sup> [1249]

patrie preda et captiuis ac obsidibus nulla habita resistentia in illa expeditione.

1250. <sup>1</sup> Mael-Muire.—His death, according to the A. L. C. [Annals of Loch Ce], took place “a very short time before Christmas,” 1249. This is confirmed by the letter of the Dean and Chapter of Tuam, about the end of Dec., 1249, praying the king's licence to elect in room of Marianus. The licence was granted to their proctor, Jan. 16, 1250 (D. I., I. 3028-34).

<sup>2</sup> O'Meallaidh.—The election of Concordis (Conchobar ?), his successor, was confirmed by Innocent IV., Jan. 12, 1251 (Theiner, p. 53). The royal assent was given (though the election took place without licence) on May 8 (D. I., I. 3131).

(Maurice<sup>3</sup> Fitz Gerald and Cathal Ua Raighillaigh and Eachaidh Mag Mathghamna went [with] a host into Tir-Conaill and Niall Ua Canannan, namely, king of Tir-Conaill, was killed by them.)

 1251. 1251. <sup>1</sup> Elected.—This is a year too late. Shortly before May 27, 1250, the Dean and Chapter of Tuam wrote to the king that, having obtained licence, they unanimously elected Florence, chancellor of their church and sub-deacon of the Pope. The royal assent was given on May 27 (D. I., I. 3044–5). The consecration took place in Tuam on the Christmas day of the same year (A. L. C., A.D. 1250).

1253. <sup>1</sup>Donatus.—This should be David (see the final additional entry of this year). The choice of his successor, David (Mac Carroll), was ratified by Innocent IV., Aug. 17, 1254. The delay arose from the objection of the suffragan bishops that, having been made by the Chapter and not by themselves, the election was invalid. For the conclusive reply, see the Bull of confirmation (Theiner, p. 61 sq.).

Mac Carroll occupied the See until 1289 (D. I., III. 468). He was succeeded by Stephen O'Bragan, whose election was confirmed by Nicholas IV., Sept. 21, 1290 (Theiner, p. 151 sq.).

The original, which is more pro-lix, forms in the Four Masters a continuation of the account given in the preceding Note. Donal, according to Charles O'Connor, was son of Donal Mor by a daughter of Cathal Red-hand, king of Con-nacht.

In the second century, the Attacots cut off the Milesian nobility, with the exception of the queen,
who was pregnant. She escaped to Scotland, where she gave birth to a son, Tuathal Techtmar, (wealthy). In time he returned;
was received favourably and re-established the Milesian dynasty.

<sup>3</sup> Ua Conchubhair.—On May 29,

1257, Alexander IV. set aside the election of James Ua Lachtnain (1156, note 1, supra) and appointed Walter, Dean of St. Paul's, London and Papal Chaplain, to the archbishopric of Tuam. Walter was consecrated by the Pope, most probably in Viterbo, where the Bull is dated. He died at latest early in the following year. On April 22, 1258, the archbishop being deceased,
a royal mandate was issued to the escheator of Ireland to take the lands and tenements of the See into possession. (D. I., III. 576.)
O'Connor had been bishop of Elphin (ib. 621–2–4). He is called Thomas documents just referred to, and in

Kalends of Jan. (on 5th feria, 15th of the moon), A.D. [1260]
 1260. The battle of Druim-derg [was fought] (in a place which is called Dromma-derg) at Dun-da-leathglas by Brian Ua Neill and Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh [Ua Conchobair], against the Foreigners of the North of Ireland, wherein were killed many of the nobles<sup>1</sup> of the Gaidhil, namely, Brian Ua Neill and Domnall Ua Cairre and Diarmait Mag Lachlainn and Maghnus Ua Catha[i]n and Cian Ua Inneirghi and Donnsluibhe Mag Cana and Concobur O'Duibhdirma and Aedh, his son, and Amlaim Ua Gairmleaghaidh and Cu-Uladh Ua hAnluain. But one [notable] thing [happened]: fifteen men of the nobles of Clann-Cathain were killed on that spot. There were killed of the Connachtmen there: Gilla-Crist, son of Conchobar, son of Cormac Ua Mailruanaigh and king of Magh-Luirg and Cathal, son of Tighernan Ua Conchobair and Maelruanaidh, son of Donnchadh [Ua Mailruanaigh] and Cathal, son of Donnchadh, son of Muircertach and Aedh, son of Muircertach the Fair and Tadhg, son of Cathal, son of Brian Ua Mailruanaigh and Diarmait, son of Tadhg, son of Muiredhach, son of Tomaltach Ua Mailruanaigh and Conchobur Mac Gille-Arraigh and Tadhg, son of Cian Ua Gadhra and Gilla-Beraigh Ua Cuinn and many other persons.—Domnall, son of Concobur, son of Tigernan [Ua Conchobair], was killed by the Tellach-Dunchadha.—Abraham Ua Conalla[i]n, successor of Patrick, rested in Christ.<sup>2</sup>

(Aedh Ua Neill the Tawny was made king over Tir-Eoghain.)

killed by Conchobur Ua Neill and by the Cenel-Eogain in Doire of [St.] Colum-cille, around Conchobur Ua Firghil. Conchobur Ua Neill was, however, killed immediately, through miracle of Colum-cille by Donn<sup>2</sup> Ua Breslen, chief of Fanat.—Cathal Ua Eghra was killed by Foreigners.—A hosting [was made] by Aedh, son of Feidlimidh [Ua Conchobhair], into Breifni, so that he burned many towns and the crops. Complete defeat was given to a force of his routs, so that a great number of them were killed.—John Fitz Thomas<sup>3</sup> and the Barrymore were killed by Finghin Mag Carrthaigh and by the Desmonians likewise and a large number of other Foreigners [were killed].—Finghin Mac Carrthaigh was killed by the Foreigners—Aed Ua Neill the Tawny was expelled and Niall Culanach O'Neill (brother of Aedh) made king.—Niall Ua Gairmlegaidh, chief of Cenel-Moain, died.—Philip Mac Cinaetha, chief of the Cantred, was slain by Gilla-Muire Ua Cairre.<sup>4</sup>

(Patrick (that is, Mael-Padraig) Ua Sganuil, bishop of Rath-both, was elected unanimously as archbishop of Ard-Macha and he defended<sup>5</sup> at the Apostolic See the election made of himself.—Amalgaidh Ua Ruadhagan, king of Ui-bhEathach, was killed by Donatus Ua Cairre and Donatus Ua Cairre was killed on the same spot.)

ragh more occisus fuit per Fynium Makartii et Desmonienses et alios Anglicanos.

The A-text shows that O'Hara (Ua Eagbra) was not killed by John or Thomas; that the slayers in D had no existence; that John Fitz Thomas, as well as Barrymore, was slain by Mac Carthy; finally, that "the other English," instead of assisting to kill Barrymore, were killed themselves.

adversus Niellanum Culanagh O'Neill, in qua non solum multi erant occisi, verum etiam magnus erat numerus captivorum Eoganensium quos O'Donill secum adduxit ex illa victoria, una cum Makawal [Mac Cathmhail], subregulo Generationis Fearaili [Cenel-Feradhaigh].

The original is the final entry of this year in the Four Masters.

brackets. Confirmatory data are set forth under the several years. The textual arrangement has thus been preserved intact. The original dates (placed within round brackets on the margin) are, as a rule, correct in reference to the later items. The additions, namely, were made under the respective years to which they were considered to belong.

Kalends of Jan. (on 1st feria; 7th, otherwise 4th, of the moon), A.D. 1262. A great host [was led] by Mac William [de Burgh] into Connacht, so that much was destroyed by him. Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobuir and Aedh, his son and the nobles of Connacht went to Es-ruadh before them with very great part of the cows of Connacht with them for the war, so that they made peace.—A great foray was made by Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh, on the Foreigners of Sliabh-Lugha and into Ciaraidhe, so that they took many cows away with them and killed many Foreigners.—Mael-Sechlainn,<sup>1</sup> son of Tadhg Ua Conchobair, bishop of Oilfinn, rested in Christ.—Cormac, son of Domnall Mag Carrthaigh the Stammerer, was killed by Foreigners.

[A.D. 1263] Domnall<sup>1</sup> Ua Domnaill killed Donn O'Breislen in the court of the bishop in Rath-both.—David Ua Finn, abbot of the Buill, rested in Christ.—Diarmait, son of Cormac [Mac Diarmata], rested in Christ.—Aengus Ua Clumain, bishop of Luighni [Achonry], rested in Christ.—Thomas Ua Ceallaigh, bishop of Cluainferta, rested in Christ.<sup>2</sup>—Ebdonn,<sup>3</sup> king of Lochlann, died in the Isles of Orc in coming to Ireland.—A hot Summer in this year.<sup>4</sup>—Donnsleibe Mac Cathmail, chief of Cenel-

C and D represent O'Donnell as slain by O'Breslen. This error has been dealt with in the textual note c-c.

<sup>2</sup> Rested in Christ.—The Dean and Chapter of Clonfert wrote for royal licence to elect, Thomas, the bishop, having died on the Epiphany [Jan. 6], 1263 (D. I., III. 742). This goes to prove that the Loch Ce chronology is correct at this year.

<sup>3</sup> Ebdonn.—"According to the Saga Hakonar Hakonarsonar, the Irish had sent ambassadors to king Hakon, offering to submit themselves to him, if he would come and expel the English. See Saga Hakonar Hakonarsonar, c. 322 (Fornmanna Sögur. Kaupmannahöfn, 1835, vol. 10, p. 131) and Munch's Norske Folks Historie, Christiania, 1858, vol. i., part iv., p. 407. The Chron. 1263<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobuir, arch-king of Connacht, the Gaidhel of most goodness that was in Ireland in his own period, died.—Cathal, son of Tadhg Ua Conchobuir was killed by Aedh Ua Conchobair.—Thomas Ua Maicin, bishop of Luighni [Achonry], rested in Christ.<sup>2</sup>

The original is given at 1262 in the Four Masters.

(1262) <sup>1</sup>Morrow of John the Baptist—The Four Masters read in the Octave; which is meaningless here. The Chronicler noted the day, which, being Sunday, was naturally selected for the first appearance of the archbishop in the Pallium.

Gillga[i]n, died.—Friar Patrick O'Sgannail, archbishop of Ard-Macha, held a General Chapter in Drochet-atha this year<sup>4</sup> (the 2nd,<sup>5</sup> 3rd and 4th week-days after the Feast of All Saints). [1265]

(Donn<sup>1</sup> Ua Breslen was killed by Domnall Ua Domnaill in Rath-both in the court of the bishop.—Aedh Ua Neill the Tawny took the daughter of Mac Goisdealbaigh to wife.) (1263)

Kalends of Jan. [on 3rd feria, 29th of the moon], A.D. [1264Bis.] 1264.<sup>1</sup> Domnall Ua Eghra, king of Luighni, was killed by the Foreigners.—Mathgamain, son of Ceithernach Ua Ceirin, king of Ciaraidhe, was killed by Foreigners.—Cumhuidhe Ua Catha[i]n, king of Ciannachta, was taken prisoner by Aedh the Tawny.

The archbishop of Ard-Macha, namely, Mael-Patraic O'Sgannail, made a ditch around Ard-Macha and Friars Minor were brought to Ard-Macha by the same person in this year.

(B)

Friars Minor were brought to Ard-Macha by the archbishop, namely, by Mael-Padraig Ua Sgannail and the same person, that is, Mael-Padraig, made a ditch around Ard-Macha this year.

The original is given in the Four Masters at 1263.

<sup>5</sup> The 2nd, etc.—The interlineation shows that the date was 1265. In that year All Saints' Day (Nov. 1) fell on Sunday. In 1263, it fell on Wednesday.

1267<sup>1</sup>[-9]. The castle of Ros-Comain was built by Robert D'Ufford, Justiciary of Ireland and by the Foreigners of Ireland during the reign of Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobuir. And Aedh himself was in sickness at that time and much of Connacht was despoiled and harried for cella" [Dub-Reclis] of Derry.

The archbishop of Armagh annulled the election of the archdeacon, who proceeded to Rome to prosecute an appeal and died there.
On Dec. 3, 1263, Urban IV. passed over the abbot and appointed John de Alneto, a Franciscan resident in Ireland (Theiner, pp. 92-3). On the 28th April, 1265, John was excused on the plea of incurable infirmity by Clement IV., who reserved the appointment to himself

the present entry.

“had retired into the monastery
some time before his death.”

(David Ua Bragan,<sup>1</sup> bishop of Clochar, who laboured (1267) courageously and faithfully in defence of justice and the right of the church of Clochar during the time of his life, died this year. And he was buried in the Monastery of Mellifont, for he was a monk of its monks before that.<sup>2</sup>)

Kalends of Jan. [on 4th feria, 5th of the moon], A.D. [1270] 1268<sup>1</sup>[-70]. The defeat of Ath-in-chip<sup>2</sup> [was inflicted] by Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh [Ua Conchobair] and by the Connachtmen on the Earl, namely, on Walter de Burgh and on the Foreigners of Ireland besides, wherein was committed slaughter innumerable on the Foreigners. And William de Burgh junior was taken prisoner there and he was killed afterwards in the same captivity. And not greater than it was any defeat, or battle-rout that the Gaidhil ever gave to the Foreigners in Ireland previously. For there was killed Richard of the Wood, kinsman of the Earl, as well as John Butler and many other knights and Foreigners and Gaidhil innumerable. And there were abandoned one hundred horses<sup>3</sup> with their breastplates and with their saddles.—The successor of [St.] Patrick,<sup>4</sup> namely, Mael-Padraig Ua Sgannail, rested in Christ.—

 Armagh, having gone to Henry III., with letters of the Deau and Chapter announcing the death of Patrick, the archbishop, licence to elect was granted (D. I., II. 869)
 in the beginning of May, 1270.

The election of Nicholas, canon of Armagh, was confirmed (Theiner,
 p. 101) by Gregory X., July 13,

1272. (The delay was apparently owing to the interregnum between the demise of Clement IV., Nov.
 29, 1268, and the coronation of Gregory X., Jan. 27, 1272.) The confirmation having been notified to the king by the Curia, the tem-poralities were restored to the archbishop on the ensuing Sept. 25 (D. I., II. 927).

that gave most to the Grey Order,<sup>5</sup> rested in Christ.

Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 20th of the moon], A.D. [1274] 1271 <sup>1</sup>[-4]. Domnall, son of Maghnus, son of Muircertach Ua Conchobuir the Momonian, eminent donor and a general, perfect benefactor to the human race, rested in Christ.—Gilla-na-naem O'Ferghail, the most choice of the chiefs of Ireland in his own time, rested in Christ.—Aedh,<sup>2</sup> son of Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobuir, king of Connacht and future arch-king of Ireland, the man most feared and victorious that was in Ireland, rested in Christ.—Tigernan, son of Aedh Ua Ruairc, king of Breifni, rested in Christ.—Eogan, son of Ruaidhri Ua Concobair, king of Connacht for a quarter [of a year], was killed in the Monastery of the Friars in Ros-Comain (by his own kinsmen).—Aedh, son of Cathal Ua Concobuir the Blind, king of Connacht for a fortnight, rested<sup>3</sup> in Christ. (He was killed by Tomaltach Mag Oirechtaigh and by counsel of Gilla-Crist Ua Birn.)—Cathal Mag Flannchadha, chief of Dartraighe, rested in Christ.—Tadhg Ua Dalaigh (namely, son of Cerball the Tawny, in our opinion), a good master in poetry, rested in Christ.—Cairbre Ua Sguaba, bishop of Tir-Conaill, (rested in Christ and) died in the Curia.<sup>4</sup> feast of the Finding of the Holy Cross. Accordingly, at this year the Annals of Ulster are three years in advance. In 1274, May 3 fell on Thursday; in 1271, on Sunday.

<sup>3</sup> Rested.—Namely, died a natural death. So the two MSS. and the two translations. But there can be no doubt, from the proofs given in the A. L. C., that he was slain. The correction interlined in A is consequently well founded.

the Papal Court. 'Ware (Bishops, ed. Harris, p. 271) states on the authority of the "Annals of Loch-Ke" that Bishop O'Scoba died at Rome; but it is clear that Ware did not quote from the original of the present volumes, as there is no mention of Rome either in this MS., or in the so-called Annals of Connacht.' (Note to A. L. C., i. p. 478.) Ware most probably quoted from C, in which in Curia is interlined over in Christo.

<sup>2</sup> Aedh.—This item is rather a mnemonic note than a historical record. Its brevity is misleading, as well as obscure. According to Mageoghegan's Version of the Annals of Clonmacnoise: "A base son was presented to Felym Mac Cahall Crovederg O'Connor, after the death of said Ffelym a long space, who was called Hugh Moyneagh, because he was nurished and brought up in Munster and came to Connoght from thence.

And as soon as he came and was known to be the son of Felym, Silmoreye [Sil-Muiredhaigh, the O'Conors] and Clann Moyleronie [Sil-Mailruanaigh, the O'Flynn] accepted of him and had him in great accoumpt and reverence."

On being accepted as king, the sons of Toirdelbach (Torlough), Ruaidhri and Tadhg, fled into Tirconnell to O'Donnell. Their coming into the country is the foray mentioned in the first additional entry. They were slain in 1278(= 1275 of the text).

<sup>3</sup> Blood in one vessel.—For the antiquity of this method of covenanting, see L.L., p. 302b (History of the Boruma). The king of Ulster saw in a dream a vat one-third full of human blood, one-third of new milk and one-third of wine, in the centre of his house. The narrative then goes on: *Ót̃ẽoñraic̃ iapum Concobur inn air̃ling̃ḡe r̃in. Ocur ír̃ am̃l̃aḡ at̃connaic̃ l̃aḡin 7 Ulaḡo'má'ñ rãbaḡic̃ a hól. Conchobur saw that vision afterwards. And he saw thus,— the Lagenians and the Ultonians around the vat a-drinking therefrom. And "I know," quoth he, "that is the covenant that was prophesied then. For the blood that was seen [by us] in the vat is the blood of the two Fifths [Ulster and Leinster] a-contending. The new milk is the Canon of the Lord which the clergy of the two Fifths chant. The wine is the Body of Christ and His Blood which the clergy offer."

the A. L. C. under 1279.

<sup>2</sup> Ua Conchobuir.—See 1258, note
3, supra. The text is here three years antedated. About June, 1279, the primate wrote to the king in favour of the Franciscan, Malachy, who, when Tuam lately became vacant by the death of T[omaltach], was postulated by the dean, archdeacon and some of the canons
(D. I., II. 1576).

At the election, five canons voted for canon Nicholas; the dean and the remaining two, for Malachy.
The matter was referred to the Curia. The protracted proceedings that ensued are detailed in the Bull of Honorius IV. (July 12, 1286)
transferring Stephen de Foleburne from Waterford to Tuam (Theiner, pp. 135-6).

1280<sup>1</sup>[-3]. Tadhg, son of Domnall Ua Conchobuir of Irras, was killed by the Luighni.—Aedh Ua Neill the Tawny<sup>2</sup> was killed by Mag Mathgamna (that is, by Brian and by Ua Raghallaigh).

III. 2.) From the date of No. 1999, (Ap. 29, 1282) the year in which they were slain can be inferred.

A. L. C.

Maurice Ua Conchobuir,<sup>2</sup> bishop of Oil-finn, rested in Christ.—Donnchadh Ua Briain, king of Thomond, was killed by Toirdhelbach Ua Briain.—Amlaim O'Tomoltaigh, bishop-elect [and] confirmed<sup>3</sup> of Oil-finn, rested in Christ.—Dubghall, son of Maghnus Ua Baighill chief of Cloch-Cinnfhaclaidh, was killed by the people of Ua Mailgaithi.—“Son of the night” Mac Dorchaidh, chief of Cenel-Luachain (or, -Duachain), rested in Christ.<sup>4</sup>

(Gilla-Isu<sup>1</sup> Mac Tigernain, arch-chief of Cinel-Brenainn, died.—Or, it may be on this year, namely, 1281,<sup>2</sup> [the death of] Matthew Ua Raighillaigh, king of Breifni [ought to be].) (1281)

Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 21st of the moon], A.D. [1285] 1282<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Simon Ua Ruairc, bishop of Breifni [Kilmore], rested in Christ.—Defeat was given by Maghnus Ua Conchobuir to Adam Cusack and to the Foreigners of the West of Connacht at Eas-dara; where were killed many persons and Colin Cusack, his brother, was taken in security, to allow [Adam] himself to go away, after great havoc had been made of his people.—Defeat was inflicted by Philip Mac Goisdeilb on the people of Maghnus Ua Conchobuir on Sliabh-gamh, so that many recruits

[A.D. 1286]. A great host<sup>1</sup> [was led] by the Earl of Ulster [1286] into Connacht, so that he destroyed many of the churches and monasteries. And moreover, he obtained sway in every direction he went and received the pledges of Connacht [and Cenel-]Conaill and [Cenel-]Eogain. And he deposed Domnall Ua Neill (namely, Domnall, son of Brian) and gave the kingship to Niall Culanach Ua Neill.— Maurice Fitz Gerald the Bald rested in Christ.

Kalends of Jan. [on 4th feria, 13th of the moon], A.D. [1287]
1283<sup>1</sup>[-7]. Matthew, son of Maurice, son of Cathal [Mac Diarmata], rested in Christ.—Diarmait the Midian (son of Diarmad, son of Cathal Mac Diarmoda, namely, king of Muinnter-Mailruanaidh) rested in Christ.—Florence O'Gibellain, archdeacon of Oil-finn, distinguished in knowledge and intelligence, rested in Christ.—Gilla-nanog<sup>2</sup> O'Mannacha[i]n, king of "The Territories," rested in Christ.<sup>3</sup>—Mael-Sechlainn, son of Tomaltach Mac Oirechthaigh, was killed by Toirdhelbach, son of Eogan Ua Concobuir, in revenge of his father having been abandoned by the same Tomaltach to the sons of Toir-
Muman, daughter of Ua Catha[i]n, died.

Tuesday,—an incidence devoid of note.

<sup>1</sup>Sons of Toirdhelbach.—The editor of the A. L. C. suggests sons of Tomaltach; because, as the sentence stands, Toirdelbach takes vengeance on Tomaltach for having abandoned the father of Toirdelbach to the sons of Toirdelbach. Perhaps, however, there existed a family feud between Toirdelbach and his father on the one side and the sons of Toirdelbach on the other.

The F. M., as was their wont, omitted the passage containing the difficulty.

<sup>5</sup>Cusack.—He died at the close of the year, as his name appears in a Roll of receipt, Nov. 15, 1287.

And Cathal the Red, his brother, was deposed. And they came to Ath-Slisen, where Cathal was with his force and they fought side for side and Cathal was taken by him and defeat inflicted on his people. And very large part of Connacht was harried on that occasion. And the kingship of Connacht was taken by force by Maghnus.—Donnchadh the Swarthy, son of Maghnus, son of Muircertach Ua Concobuir, rested in Christ.—A house was seized on Maghnus Ua Conchobuir by Toirdhelbach, son of Eogan Ua Conchobuir, in Ros-mor and Maghnus was injured therein and Raghnaill Mac Raghnaill, chief of Muinnter-Eolais, was killed by one shot of an arrow and Niall Ua Conchobuir the Tawny was injured and other persons were killed. And good horses were taken from them.—A host [was led] by Maghnus O'Conchobuir after his healing into Sil-Muiredhaigh, so that he obtained sway over them and [obtained] their hostages.—A host [was led] by the Earl (namely, the Red Earl) to Connacht, until he came to Ros-Comain and to Maghnus Ua Conchobuir, king of Connacht and against the people of the king and Fitz Gerald. And they challenged the Earl to go beyond that and he went not accordingly. <sup>4</sup> Elected.—Having gone to Rome for the purpose, he got his election confirmed by Nicholas IV., May 2, 1289. (Theiner, p. 142-3.) Thereupon, he was promoted from subdeaconship to deaconship and empowered (May 26) to receive priest's Orders from any bishop he should chose (ib. 144). On the same day
 the bishops of Killala and Clonfert were directed, either of them, with two other suffragans, to give him episcopal consecration (ib.).

In addition to being rector of Athenry in Tuam, he held a benefice in Cashel, Killaloe and Killala respectively! To discharge the church debts of Tuam and support the archiepiscopal dignity, he was allowed (Aug. 5, 1289) to retain these four preferments for three years and to receive one year's revenue of every benefice vacated during the three years next ensuing, due provision being made for the cure of souls. The bishops of Lis-rested in Christ.—Cathal, son of Tadhg, son of Cathal [1288] Mac Diarmata, took the kingship of Magh-Luirg.—William Mac Fheorais [Birmingham] was elected<sup>4</sup> to the archbishopric of Tuaim.

Tadhg Ua Flannaga[i]n, chief of Clann-Cathail, rested in Christ.—Matthew O'Sgingin, arch-antiquary of all Ireland, died.—Miles,<sup>2</sup> bishop of Conmaicni [Ardagh], namely, the Foreign bishop, rested in Christ.—Simon Ua Finachta, herenagh of Oil-finn, rested in Christ.—A hosting by Richard Tuit [of Athlone] and by the Foreigners of Meath—and Maghnus Ua Conchobuir, king of Connacht, [was] with him—to [attack] Ua Mail-[S]echlainn, so that a great defeat (namely, the defeat of Crois-sliabh) was inflicted upon them. And Richard Tuit, the great, noble Baron was killed<sup>3</sup> therein, as well as his kinsmen and Jacques Ua Cellaigh, namely, the son of the bishop.<sup>4</sup>—Fiachra Ua Flainn, chief of Muinnter-Mailruanaigh, the best person for hospitality and prowess and protection that was in Connacht, went to make marriage alliance with the Foreigners, so that the son of Richard de Burgh the Fair and Mac William [de Burgh] and Mac Fheorais killed him in treachery.—A great host [was more and Killaloe were to execute the terms of the concession (ib. p. 145).

574), Miles, it can scarcely be doubted, died in 1289. The text is consequently four years predated.

<sup>3</sup> Killed.—From a grant of custody of his lands and tenements issued Sept. 2, 1290 (D. I., III. 764), it may be inferred that Tuite was slain in that year.

multis et diversis doctorum textu-ris elaboratum atque contextum, licet per multa annorum curricula,
in M.CC.LXXX.VI. Anno Domini, Nonis Martii, ad finem usque per-duxit.

The concluding words shew that the person who made the additional entry at this year had the Catholicon
before him.

Erasmus pokes fun at the Catholicon in the Synodus Grammaticorum:
Albinus: Quinam erant [libri]?
Bertulphus: Oh, praeclari omnes:
Catholicon, etc. (Erasmi Colloquia, Amstelodami, Typ. Lud. Elzevirii, 1650, p. 417.)

Its chief interest lies in the fact that it was, according to Trithemius, the first example of block printing. Treating of John of Guttenberg and John Fust, he says (Chron. Hirsaug. ad an. 1450): Imprimis igitur characteribus lit-terarum in tabulis ligneis per ordinem scriptis formisque compositis vocabularium Catholicon nun-capatum impresserunt: sed cum iisdem formis nihil aliud potuerunt inscribere, etc. Six other additions of the work appeared up to 1506.

The Authors of the Histoire Litteraire de la France do not fail to turn his confession to account:
Balbi de Gênes, l'un de plus célèbres grammariens dont l'Italie pût alors s'enorgueillir, avoue qu'il ne sait
pas bien la langue d'Homère: mihi
non bene scienti linguam Graecum [sic] (p. 142).

Kalends of Jan. (on 2nd feria, 27th of the moon,) A.D. [1291] 1287<sup>1</sup>[-91]. Toirdhelbach, son of Eogan Ua Concobuir, the person who was greatest and handsomest and who was best of hospitality and prowess and triumph that was in Ireland, was killed by Niall Ua Concobuir the Tawny.—A host [was led] by Richard de Burgh [namely] by the Earl of Ulster (that is, the Red Earl) into Tir-Eogain, whereby he deposed Domnall, son of Brian Ua Neill and Niall Culanach O'Neill was made king by him. And when the Earl left the country, Niall Culanach was killed by Domnall Ua Neill. And the son of Aedh<sup>2</sup> Ua Neill the Tawny (namely, Brian, son of Aedh the Tawny) was made king, with assent of the same Earl, by Mac Martin and by Mac Eoin. And Domnall left the country.—A host [was led] by the Earl into Tir-Conaill against Toirdhelbach [Ua Domnaill], so that he harried the country, both church and territory. And he came into Connacht to Oil-finn and the Connachtmen gave deceptive pledges<sup>3</sup> to him.—

<sup>2</sup> Son of Aedh—(namely, Brian).—The collocation of the subject (after the agent) has led the authors of C and D astray. C gives: "And was made king after by the consent of the Earle aforesaid by Mac Martin and Mac Eoin Mac Hugh Boy O'Neale." Read "The son [mac] of Hugh Boy [the Tawny] was made king," etc. D has: Bernardus [recte, Brianus], filius Odonis Flauui, regnauit autoritate Comitum et per institutionem Mag Martin et Macke Euoyne, filium Odonis Flauui. Mac Eoin and mac Aedha are here erroneously taken to be in apposition.

A scribal error, which passed unnoticed by the editor, occurs in the A. L. C. (1291). The person who was made king is called Niall, son of Aedh. In the entry of his death at 1295 in the same Annals, he is rightly named Brian, son of Aedh.

<sup>3</sup> Deceptive pledges.—That is, they intended nevertheless to cast off his authority as soon as they could. C makes an extraordinary blunder in this place: "Connaght made him the Feast of St. Brigit!" That is, fel, deceit is taken for feil, feast and braighde, pledges, for Brighde, gen. of Brigit, a personal name. D also errs: Inhabitantes tradiderunt eidem viles tantum obsides. The F. M. omit fel, which is the chief word.

Concobur Ua Dubhda, king of Ui-Fiachrach, was drowned [1291] in the Shannon.—A general muster was made by Cathal Ua Concobuir and by Niall the Tawny and by all the folk that they had capable of rising out, both Foreigners and Gaidhil, to depose Maghnus. And they gave battle in Caradh-Culainn (otherwise, [Caradh]-Chulmaile) and Cathal was injured therein and Murchadh, son of Tadhg Ua Conchobuir and other persons [were killed there]. And many horses were taken from the people of Maghnus and defeat was inflicted upon himself and he went therefrom secretly.<sup>4</sup>—And many preys were made by the people of Cathal Ua Conchobuir and by Niall the Tawny [in revenge] for the wounding of Cathal in Cairpre. And Maghnus<sup>5</sup> O'Concobhair, when the Sil-Muiredaigh came to him and [when] his own retinue and the Foreigners of Ros-Comain [came] to his aid on the morrow after the defeat, he went to the rescue of the preys. On his overtaking them at Srath-in-gherainn and close by the Aenach, all the prey was taken from them and Niall himself escaped with difficulty<sup>6</sup> therefrom. And Thomas Mac Goistelb was killed there and his kinsman, David Mac Goistelb, was captured there and much more of that host, both Foreigners and Gaidhil, was killed there. And Niall came, on peace [being made], into the country and his own land was given to him. Great recrimination and contention [however] happened between them : the direction of the country was assumed by Niall ; a great foray was made by Maghnus on Niall and he was completely despoiled by him.—Aedh Ua Fallamhain rested in Christ.—Conghalach Mag Eochaga[i]n, chief of Cenel-Fiachaidh, died.

Levelled.—See the third original entry of [1293], supra.

<sup>4</sup> Taken prisoner.—At the close of 1294, or early in 1295 (D. I., IV. 191: the Roll referred to by O'Donovan, F. M. iii. 462, note n). According to Clyn's Annals the earl was taken on Saturday [Dec. 12] before the feast of St. Lucy [Dec. 13] 1294. Hence the text is four years antedated.

Kalends of Jan. [on 1st feria, 23rd of the moon], A.D. [1296Bis.] 1292<sup>1</sup>[-6]. Aedh, son of Eogan Ua Conchobuir, were deposed by his own tribe and the Clann-Muircertaigh were brought into the country in his stead and headship and hostages were given to Concobur the Red, son of Cathal [Ua Conchobair]. And the whole country, both church and territory,<sup>2</sup> was destroyed through that deposition. All the district of Cairpre was burned and destroyed by the Clann-Muircertaigh and the churches of the territory were attacked by them. And God and Colum-cille and Mary, the Queen, whose churches they profaned, avenged [this]. —A great host was mustered by the same Aedh of Foreigners and Gaidhil under William de Burgh and under Theobald de Burgh, so that they were four nights in the country and they destroyed the crops and chattels of all the country. And the chiefs of the country came into their house [i.e., submitted] then. They took them with them to the house of the Earl [Richard de Burgh], to make peace with Aedh. And though they promised, they kept not the peace and they united again with that same Clann on returning to their homes. That same Aedh came into "The Territories." O'Ferghail and Mag Raghnaill with their forces he brought with him. And messengers were sent to the Mac Diarmatas and O'Flannaga[i]ns and they returned into the country in consequence of that message. And Conchobur the Red followed and made a foray upon them. They turned upon these, namely, upon the foray force and Concobur the Red was killed by Mac Diarmata, in driving the prey. And Lochlainn, son of Concobur, was taken and Maghnus, son of Tomaltach, was taken and a small number of other persons were killed there. And where that was done is in Cenn-Ceidi of Tir-Tuathail. Aedh Ua Concobuir and Mac Diarmata and O'Ferghail and the allies also made large retaliatory forays on the people of Clann-Muircertaigh the of Elphin, prayed for licence to elect in place of Brother Gelasius [Gilla-Isu], their late bishop (D. I., IV. 322). For the sequel, see [1297], note 5, infra. The text is accordingly four years in advance.

<sup>2</sup> Connor.—In Antrim. Achonry, B, C, D. The true reading is Derry. Henry, a Cistercian, was chosen bishop of the latter see by the primate in 1294 (D. I., IV. 156; cf. ib. 195-7). He died early in 1297 (ib. 371) and was succeeded by Geoffrey Mac Loughlin (ib. 405). The contemporary bishop of Connor was John, elected at the close of 1292, or the beginning of 1293 (ib. 12).

<sup>3</sup> Cluain-mac-Nois. — Forgetting that Clonmacnoise was par excellence the Cluain, the F. M. read Clonfert, an error adopted by O'Donovan (iii. 469) and the editor of the A. L. C. (i. 519). The Franciscan, William O'Duffy, was elected bishop of Clonmacnoise in 1290 (D. I., III. 726-35) and died before Aug. 5, 1297 (ib. IV. 429).

The bishop of Clonfert at the time was Robert, a Benedictine of Christ Church, Canterbury, appointed by Boniface VIII. (Jan. 2, 1279: Theiner, p. 158), in succession to John of Alatri (collector of the papal tenth in Ireland) promoted to the archbishopric of Benevento.

<sup>4</sup> Hosting.—The war in Flanders is intended. Edward crossed over in Aug. 1296 and returned in March 1297. (D. I., IV. p. xvi.)

<sup>5</sup> Went.—According to the F. M. both went (α n-ouḃ aṣaon) and Melaghlin died on the journey. In support hereof, the editor (iii. 468) quotes the A-text, with α n-ouḃ (they went) for α ouḃ (he went)!

But the A. L. C., a reliable authority in the present instance, agree with the Annals of Ulster. Furthermore, amongst the charges

Christ.—Henry Mag Oirechtaigh, bishop of Conniri [Connor],<sup>2</sup> a Grey [Cistercian] monk, rested in Christ (and he was buried in the Monastery of [Mellifont at] Drochaid-atha).—William O'Dubthaigh, bishop of Cluain[-mac-Nois],<sup>3</sup> was killed by concussion, on falling from his own horse.—A great hosting<sup>4</sup> [was made] very courageously by Edward, [namely] by the king of the Saxons, into France and he came without conquest, without sway, therefrom.—Mael-Sechlainn Mac Briain, abbot of the Buill, was elected to the bishopric of Oil-finn and Marian O'Dondobuir, a Friar Preacher, was elected before him and went<sup>5</sup> to Rome to maintain<sup>6</sup> [his election to] the same bishopric and died on that journey.—Cu-Ulad O'Anluain, king of the Oirrthir and his brother and Aenghus Mag Mathgamna and many of the chiefs of his people were killed by the Foreigners of Dun-delgan, in returning to their houses from the Earl.<sup>7</sup>—Derbhfhorgaill, daughter of Ua Floinn of Es[-Ui Floinn], rested in Christ. made against William Birmingham, archbishop of Tuam, by the dean of Annaghdown in person at the Curia, which Boniface VIII. (July 20, 1303) appointed judges to investigate, the following appears: Cumquequondam Frater Marianus, tunc Electus Elfinensis, ab eodem archiepiscopo, pro eo quod electionem de ipso ad episcopatum Elfinensem de eadem provincia canonice celebratam renuerat confirmare, ad Sedem [Apostolicam] appellasset predictam ac eiusdem electionis confirmationem a Sede obtinuisset eadem: prefatus archiepiscopus, horum nequaquam ignarus, in eiusdem Sedis contemptum, Malachiam, tunc abbatem Monasterii de Buellio Elfinensis diocesis, qui nunc pro episcopo Elfinensi se gerit, receptâ propter hoc ab eo quadam pecunie summâ, in episcopum Elfinensem non absque simoniaca labe preficere, quin potius intrudere, non expavit. Sicque, eodem electo, antequam ad ecclesiam ipsam Elfinensem accederet, nature debitum persolvente, predictus Malachias occupavit eandem et adhuc detinet occupatam. (Theiner, pp. 171-2.)

It is somewhat noteworthy to find the (apparently studied) meagreness of the local chronicles thus supplemented from a foreign source.

Kalends of Jan. [on 6th feria, 7th of the moon], A.D. [1300Bis.] 1296<sup>1</sup>[1300]. Theobald Butler,<sup>2</sup> a great, noble baron, died.—John Prendergast was killed by the son of Fiachra Ua Floinn.—Adam Stanton,<sup>2</sup> another great baron, rested in Christ.—The castle of the Hurdle-ford of the Weir was begun by the Earl.—Johnikin Fitz Maurice junior was killed (by Conchubur, son of Fiachra Ua Floinn).—Feidhlimidh Mag Carrthaigh, future king of Desmond, rested in Christ.—Congalach Ua Lochlainn,<sup>3</sup> bishop of Corcumruadh [Kilfenora], eminent in hospitality and piety, rested in Christ.—A general invitation<sup>4</sup> came from Rome in the time of Pope Boniface [VIII.] throughout all Christendom and every hundredth year<sup>5</sup> comes that invitation and the Year of Grace<sup>6</sup> is its name. And a countless host<sup>7</sup> from all countries of Christendom went on that invitation on their pilgrimage to Rome and remission of all their sins was obtained by them.

This Jubilee has been immortalized in the Divina Commedia (Inf., c. 18, v. 28; Par., c. 2, v. 28 sq.).

<sup>5</sup> Hundredth year.—This goes to prove that the present entry is contemporaneous. Urban VI. (Ap. 11, 1389) fixed the Jubilee term at 33 years; Paul II. (Ap. 19, 1470), at 25.

<sup>7</sup> Countless host.—"Innumerable troopes and sortes went and got an absolution of their sinns," C 200,000 is the estimated number.

At the end of this year D concludes with the following Note: Ab hoc anno usque ad annum Domini 1420 nihil reperitur in hoc libro, quia pars libri aliquo fortuito casu ex ipso libro ablata fuit. Ergo nunc historia cessare oportet, quousque illa pars ablata vel ex aliquo alio consimili libro contenta reperiri poterit.

<sup>2</sup> Miles.—The Christian name was Gerald. Formerly archdeacon of Limerick; elected bishop in 1272 or —3 (D. I., II. 943); died apparently in 1302 (ib., V. 59). (No. 779, ib. IV., giving the death in 1301, appears out of place.)

II. 945). The grandfather was probably William Marshall the younger, Earl of Pembroke, who died, without legitimate issue, in 1231 (D. I., I. 1872).

<sup>4</sup> Bishop of Cork.—Robert (called Mac Donnchadha in the A. I. C.), a Cistercian, was elected in 1277 (D. I., II. 1346) and died in 1302 (ib. V.

Anglici enim, nostram inhabitantes terram, qui se vocant mediae nacionis, sic sunt ab Anglicorum de Anglia ceterarumque nacionum moribus alieni, quod non mediae, sed extremae perfidiae nacio propiissime possunt appellari. Ab antiquo enim fuit illis haec reprobata et abusiva consuetudo, quae apud illos nondum desinit, sed quotidie magis invalescit et roboratur: viz. quando invitant ad convivium aliquos nobiles nacionis nostrae, inter ipsas epulas, vel dormitionis tempore, invitatorum hospitum, nil mali suspicancium, sine misericordia effuderunt sanguinem suum: detestabile convivium hoc modo terminantes. Kalends of Jan. [on 6th feria, 2nd of the moon], A.D. [1305] 1301<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Muircertach Ua Concobuir Failghi and Maelmordha, his kinsman and the Calbach Ua Concobhair, along with nine and twenty of the nobles of their people, were killed by Sir Pierce Mac Feorais [Birmingham], through treachery and through deceit, in the castle<sup>2</sup> of Mac Feorais.—The castle<sup>3</sup> of Inis-Eogain was built by [Richard de Burgh] the Earl.—Matthew Ua Raighillaigh Junior was killed by the Tellach-Dunchadha.—Aedh Ua Ferghail Junior [died].—A defeat [was inflicted] by Aedh, son of Cathal Ua Concobuir and by the Clann-Muircertaigh also on the Muinnter-Raghallaigh, so that Philip Ua Raighillaigh and the heir of Clann-Suibhne and Mag Buirree, head of the Gallowglasses, together with one hundred and forty other persons, fell there.—Toirdhelbach, son of Niall Ua Briain the red, rested in Christ.

(Or it may be on this year<sup>1</sup> [the death of] Donn Mag Uidhir should be.) (1301)

ingenuis et valde apud nos nominatis, invitans ipsos ad convivium in festo Sanctissimae Trinitatis [Jun. 13], ipso die, refectione completa, statim cum surrexerunt de mensa, cum viginti quatuor hominibus de sequela sua, crudeliter jugulavit, ipsorum capita care vendens eorum inimicis. Et cum pro isto scelere regi Angliae [Eduardo I.], patri scilicet istius regis [Ed. II.], accusatus fuisset, nullam de tam nephando proditore fecit correccionem (pp. 916-7).

The truth of the foregoing is amply confirmed. On July 2, 1305—within a month after the massacre—a writ was directed to the Treasurer and Chamberlains of Dublin for payment to Peter de Bermengeham of £100 granted to him by the justiciary and council of Ireland, with consent of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, and Geoffrey de Genville [for whom see Grace's Annals, pp. 37, 54], to subdue Irish felons of Offaly, of the race of O'Conoghers and to decapitate the chiefs of the same race. Peter had already sent to Dublin the heads of Morierdagh [Muircertach] and Malmorthe [Maelmordha] O'Conoghers, chiefs of the race aforesaid and also 16 heads of others of the same race and their accomplices. Witness, J[ohn] Wogan, justiciary of Ireland. Dublin. (D. I., V. 434.)

Kalends of Jan. [on 7th feria, 13th of the moon], A.D. [1306] 1302<sup>1</sup>[-6]. Toirdhelbach Ua Briain, king of Thomond, the one person the most distinguished and best in victory and prowess, a man full of charity and piety and of most prosperity that was in Ireland in his own time, rested in Christ. Donnchadh Ua Briain, his son, became king in his stead.—Ferghal Mag Raghnaill, chief of Muinnter-Eolais, was killed by his own brothers and by a part of his sept, in treachery.—Great war [took place] between Aedh, son of Eogan Ua Concobuir, king of Connacht and the nobles of Sil-Muiredhaigh with him and Aedh, son of Cathal Ua Concobuir and many of the sons of the chiefs of Connacht together with the chiefs and septs of Breifni also, along the Shannon for the space of three months or more, until a party of the sons of kings [on the side] of Aedh, son of Cathal, made an encampment in “The Territories” with a strong force, so that they took many preys and spoils. Flann, son of Fiachra Ua Floinn, future chief of Sil-Mailruanaigh and Brian, son of Donnchadh Ua Conchobair the Swarthy, along with many other persons, were killed in the rere of that prey by the pursuing party. Much of the preys was held fast and another part was wrested. These indeed are the best that were there: Ruaidhri, son of Cathal Ua Concobuir and Donnchadh, son of Concobur “of the Goblet,” son of Fergal, son of Donnchadh, son of Muircertach Mac Diarmata, one fit to be king of Sil-Mailruanaigh for felicity, for generosity, for prowess up to that day. This is [what Donnchadh did]: he went forward to the stronghold of Ua Conchobuir and burned the palace of the kings of Connacht, along with the houses of the stronghold. Aedh Ua Concobuir overtakes him and wrests the prey from him and he is killed after.—Donnchadh Ua Flaithbertaigh, bishop of Cell-aladh,<sup>2</sup> most eminent of the Gaidhil for liberality and piety, died in Dun-buinne, in the end of Spring before Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 5th of the moon], A.D. [1308 Bis.] 1304<sup>1</sup>[-8]. A great foray was made by Mailruanaigh Mac Diarmata on the sons of Domnall Ua Conchobuir in the country of Cairpre. Great forays were made by the Clann-Muircertaigh on the same sons, although these<sup>2</sup> had made peace previously with them and had given pledges to them; but they acted treacherously towards them afterwards. And the sons went forward to Slaibh-en and took nothing with them except their steeds and their accoutrements and their [pack-]horses. When that was heard by the Foreigners of Ui-Fiachrach and of Luighni, they assembled their forces and followed them to the summit of Sliabh-en. And the sons of Donnchadh and the sons of Domnall turned upon them, so that the Foreigners fled before them and defeat was put upon them as far as the Flagstone of Es-dara. <sup>8</sup> Maelruanaigh, etc.—See the A. L. C. (ib. 577).

<sup>9</sup> Derborgaill. — According to Mageoghegan (O'D. iii. 509–10) and the A. L. C., the reduction of Sligo and the assassination of Rory were to avenge the slaying of her father (second entry of this year) by Domnall, brother of Rory.

Conchobuir, in Connacht. Castles were burned and broken down.—Aedh, son of Maghnus Ua Conchobuir, was killed by Cathal, son of Domnall Ua Concobuir. Maghnus, son of Maghnus, the son of a king who was best of hospitality and prowess that was of the Connachtmen and Domnall, his brother, were killed on the morrow by the same man. Diarmait, son of Simon of the Strand, was killed on the day on which was killed Aedh, son of Maghnus Ua Concobuir, by the same Clan, in revenge of their father.<sup>4</sup>—A battle [was fought]<sup>5</sup> by the Earl on the one side and by Edward [Bruce] with his force on the other side, so that defeat was given to the Earl and to the Foreigners besides. And William de Burgh<sup>6</sup> and the two sons of Mac-in-Mhilidh were taken prisoners therē.—Mathgamain<sup>7</sup> Mag Raghnaill, chief of Muintir-Eolu[i]s and O'Mailmhiadhaigh, chief of Muintir-Cerballa[i]n and many of Muintir-Eolu[i]s along with them were killed by Maelruanaigh<sup>8</sup> Mac Diarmata. Concobur the Red, son of Aedh [Ua Conchobair] the Brefnian, was killed there.—Maelruanaigh<sup>8</sup> Mac Diarmata and Gilbert Mac Goisdelbh came into Magh-Luirg and forays were made by them. And they took away with them the wife of Diarmait [Mac Diarmata] the Foreigner and plundered all the people of Diarmait the Foreigner.—Aedh O'Domnaill came against the Castle of Sligeach and it was reduced by him. Ruaidhri, son of Domnall Ua Concobuir, was killed by Derborgaill,<sup>9</sup> daughter of Maghnus Ua Concobuir. [The deed was done<sup>10</sup>] for stipend by a band of gallowglasses.

A large host was mustered by Feidhlimidh Ua Concobair and by Mac Feorais [Birmingham] and by the Foreigners of the West of Connacht. They came to the Causeway of Moin-Coinnedha. Ruaidhri Ua Concobuir went against them and they engaged with each other. Ruaidhri Ua Concobuir, king of Connacht, was killed<sup>2</sup> there along with Diarmait Mac Diarmata the Foreigner, king of Magh-Luirg and Cormac Mac Ceithernaigh, king of Ciaraidhe and noble gallowglasses and many other persons. The kingship of the Fifth was assumed by Feidhlimidh again. And a large host was led by him to the assault of Ath-lethan and the place was burned by him. And Slevin de Exeter, lord of the town and de Cogan, the noblest baron that was in Ireland and many other Foreigners were killed by them. And many chattels were got by them. Their fame<sup>3</sup> and their renown went throughout Ireland, so that many submitted to them.—A great hosting was undertaken by Feidhlimidh, together with the nobles of the Fifth [of Connacht] and with Donnchadh O'Briain, king of Munster and O'Mael[-Sh]eclainn, king of Meath and Ual[gh]arc O'Ruairc, king of Breifni (Ual[gh]arc O'Ruairc took the kingship that year) and O'Ferghail, king of Muintir-hAnghaile and Tadhg O'Cellaigh, king of Ui-Maine and Maghnus, son of Donnall Ua Concobuir, tanist of Connacht and Art O'hEaghra, king of Luighni and Brian O'Dubhda, king of Ui-Fiachrach. They went, all those, to Ath-na-righ. The Foreigners of the West of Connacht all assembled against them: to wit, William de Burgh and the Baron Mac Feorais [Birmingham],<sup>4</sup> lord of Ath-na-righ and all the Foreigners of the greater part of the Half of Conn. Battle<sup>5</sup> [1316 Bis ] was engaged in by them and defeat inflicted on the Gaidhil there. Feidhlimidh O'Concobuir (son of Aedh, son of Eogan), king of Connacht, was slain there: the one person on whom the attention of the Men of all Ireland was most directed and who was best in generosity and prowess. Tadhg Ua Cellaigh, king of Ui-Maine, was slain there and eight and twenty of the Clann-Cellaigh that had right to kingship [of Ui-Maine] were slain there. Art O'hEghra, king of Luighni was slain there. But [for] one thing, there was not slain in this time in Ireland the amount that was slain there of sons of kings and of chiefs and of many other persons in addition.—Ruaidhri, son of Donnchadh, son of Eogan Ua Concobuir, was [then] made king by the Connachtmen.—A hosting [was made after that] by William de Burgh into Sil-Muiredhaigh. O'Concobuir and the Connachtmen, with the exception of Mac Diarmata, made peace.<sup>6</sup> Mac William [de Burgh] came into Magh-Luirg. Great preys were brought by them from Ath-in-chip and from Uachtair-tire and the whole country was burned and pillaged by them. They went from out the country afterwards. The same Ruaidhri was deposed by Mac Diarmata<sup>7</sup> after that.—Derborgaill,<sup>8</sup> daughter of Magnus Ua Concobuir, died.

Kalends of Jan. [on 7th feria, 15th of the moon], A.D. [1317] 1314<sup>1</sup>[-17]. Toirdelbach, son of Aedh, son of Eogan [Ua Conchobair] was made king by the Connachtmen.—Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, came to Ireland<sup>2</sup> along with many gallowglasses in aid of Edward, his brother, to expel the Foreigners from Ireland.—Meyler de Exeter, lord of Ath-

Amlam Mag Uidhir.—The Baron [Richard] Mac Feorais
[Birmingham] died.<sup>4</sup>—William [de Burgh] the Grey, son of William Mor, died.

1320<sup>1</sup>[-3]. Cairpri<sup>2</sup> O'Mael[-Sh]eclainn was slain.— Jenkin O'Fergail was killed by the sons of John O'Fergail.
—O'hEaghra was killed by Ua Connmaca[i]n<sup>3</sup> in that

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria [2nd of the moon], A.D. [1324Bis.]
died.—The same<sup>3</sup> cow-destruction (namely, the Mael-domnaigh<sup>4</sup>) [prevailed] throughout Ireland.—Cathal, son of Domnall, son of Tadhg, son of Brian, son of Andrew,
son of Brian of Luighni, son of Toirdhelbach Mor [Ua Conchobair], king of Connacht,<sup>5</sup> the person the most active and of most goodness and success that was in the same time with him, was killed by Toirdhelbach O'Conchobuir and by the Connachtmen likewise. And Mael-Sechlainn, son of Toirdhelbach Ua Domnaill and Gilla-Crist Mac Donnchaidh junior and many other persons were killed
there. Toirdhelbach (son of Aedh, son of Eogan) Ua Concobuir took the kingship of Connacht.—Raghnall<sup>6</sup> Mag Raghnall junior, chief of Muintir-Eolais, was killed.

Clyn states he died on Septuagetsima [Sunday, Feb. 11], 1323-4:
he true date, judging from the precision of the diurnal notation.

<sup>3</sup> Same.—Mentioned in the last entry of [1321], supra.

<sup>4</sup> Mael-domnaigh.—The meaning of this word in connection with a murrain is unknown to me. (The literal sense is devotee of Sunday.)

Item, hoc anno, scilicet 1324, fuit pestis gravis boum et vaccarum issued respecting the goods and chattels of the deceased Earl. (Ib.

note, p. 102-3.) The textual date is thus three years too early.

against Charles le Bel on account

Kalends of Jan. [on 3rd feria, 13th of the moon], A.D. [1325] 1322<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Domnall, son of Brian Ua Neill, king of Tir-Eogain, rested in Christ.<sup>2</sup>—Gilla-Crist Mac Diarmata, the Cleric, died.—Diarmait O'Mael-Brenainn, chief of Clann-Concobuir, rested in Christ.—Cu-Uladh, son of Domnall, son of Brian Ua Neill, one full worthy to be arch-king<sup>3</sup> of Ireland, was killed by the sons of Niall, son of Brian. That [man, Cu-Uladh, was] the brother of their father.—The same<sup>4</sup> cow-destruction [prevailed] in Ireland again.—Brian O'Gadhra rested in Christ.

Kalends of Jan. [on 5th feria, 5th of the moon], A.D. [1327] 1324<sup>1</sup>[-7]. Great war<sup>2</sup> between the king of the Saxons and his own wife,<sup>3</sup> the daughter of the king of the French and the king of the Saxons was deposed by her and her own son was accepted against his father through suggestion of his mother, namely, of the queen and the royal crown was given<sup>4</sup> to the same son through advice<sup>5</sup> of the of the invasion of Guienne and detention of his queen and of the heir presumptive.

<sup>1</sup> O' Lacht-na[i]n.—On the translation of Malachy to Tuam ([1312], note 2, supra), the Dean and Chapter of Elphin postulated Lawrence, priest and canon. He was appointed bishop by Clement V., (Avignon) Jan. 21, 1313. On Feb. 18, he was empowered to contract a loan of 1,000 gold florins and receive consecration from any archbishop or bishop he should choose, assisted by two or more bishops. (Theiner, p. 187.)

<sup>2</sup> Foreigners.—According to the Briain [the Fair]. Defeat<sup>8</sup> [was inflicted upon them] by [1328] Brian O'Briain, wherein was killed Concobur O'Briain, well worthy to be king of Ireland for figure and bestowal, together with four score, both noble and base.—Aine, daughter of Ferghal Ua Raighillaigh, wife of Tomaltach Mac Diarmata, died.—Donnchadh the Foreigner, son of Domnall Ua Concobuir, was killed by Aedh, son of Tadhg, son of Maghnus [Ua Conchobair].

Kalends of Jan. [on 1st feria, 27th of the moon], A.D. [1329] 1326<sup>1</sup>[-9]. Cathal, son of Domnall Ua Ruairc, excellent material of a king of Breifni, the son of a king the best disposed and most accomplished that was of the Brefnians, was killed along with other persons by the Foreigners<sup>2</sup> in treachery.—Muircertach, son of Domnall, son of Tadhg Ua Concobuir, lord of Cairpre and Calraighi, select son of the sons of kings, died.—Dabug Mac William [de Burgh]
 the Brown, a knight of great substance, rested in Christ.
 —War [arose] between Toirdelbach Ua Concobuir and the Muintir-Mailruanaigh.—Cathal, son of Aedh, son of Eogan [Ua Conchobair], was put by force from out the Fedha and from Tir-Maine, through injunction of Walter de Burgh [imposed] on the Clann-Ceallaigh.—Tadhg, son of Toirdelbach Mac Mathgamna [died].—Augustine, abbot of Lis-gabhail upon Loch-Erne, died on the 2nd of the Kalends of November [October 31].

Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 9th of the moon], A.D. [1330] 1327<sup>1</sup>[-30]. Maghnus, son of Aedh Ua Conchobuir the Brefnian, was killed by that same Cathal<sup>2</sup> and Simon Mac-meaning of failgidh has not been determined.

<sup>1</sup>Desert-Nuadhat.—Desert [hermitage] of [St.] Nuadu. He is the Nuadu, anchorite, commemorated in the Martyrology of Tallaght at Oct. 3 (L.L. 563d). One of the interpolations in the Tripartite Life (Part II.) is a prophecy attributed to St. Patrick respecting this saint.

 By the usual phonetic changes, Athdesirt-Nuadhat became Eastersnow (bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon).
 See O'Donovan, F. M., iii. 546-7.

—A camp assault [was delivered] by Toirdhelbach [1330] O'Concobuir on Walter Mac William de Burgh and [Toirdhelbach] routed him throughout Magh[-Luirg]. Gilbert Mac Goisdelb came with a large force to aid Mac William. Those hosts turned, side by side, on O'Conchobuir, until they reached the Ford of Desert-Nuadhat.<sup>4</sup> A few of the force of Ua Conchobuir were killed there and O'Conchobuir went from the Ford spiritedly, orderly into The Territories and camp was taken by Mac William in Cell-Lomat.<sup>5</sup> Peace, honorable [and] cordial, was made by O'Conchobuir and by Mac Diarmata.<sup>6</sup>—Mael-Sechlainn Mac Carmaic, a general entertainer, died.—Mael-Isu Mac Aedhagain the Brown, died.—A hosting by Ual[gh]arc O'Ruairc, king of Breifni, to Fidh-in-atha.<sup>7</sup> The Foreigners of the town arose against them, so that Art O'Ruairc, material of a king of Breifni and many others were killed there.—Benedict O'Flannaga[i]n, prior of Cell-mor of Tir-Briuin,<sup>8</sup> rested in Christ.—Gilla-Isu Ua Raighillaigh, king of Muintir-Mailmordha and of all the Breifni for a long time, died a prosperous senior, after gaining victory from world and from demon.—Great defeat [was inflicted] by Concobur, son of Tadhg, son of Brian, son of Andrew, son of Brian [Ua Conchobair] of Luighni, on the Dartraighi, so that many of them were killed by him.

 Red Earl, who died [1326], supra.

<sup>3</sup> Domnall.—O'Connor, mentioned in the final entry of the preceding year.

<sup>4</sup> Gerald.—Taken from Mageoghegan: "The sons of Donnell O'Connor took a prey from the sons [descendants] of Gerald Sueckagh [Merry] and killed Mac

 Morishe himself. This is Mac Morish of the Bryes, he is of the Geraldines" (1335).

From this it may be concluded that the founder of the family of Mac Maurice of the Bryes (or noble and base and two priests were of them and those all [1334] were burned.—Ten of the people of Donnchadh the Swarthy, son of Mael[Sh]echlainn Carrach Mac Diarmata, were drowned on Loch-Teighed.—Tadhg, son of Cathal, son of Domnall [Ua Conchobair] rested in Christ.

Kalends of Jan. [on 1st feria, 4th of the moon,] A.D. [1335] 1332<sup>1</sup>[-5]. John O'hEaghra was taken prisoner by the son of the Earl<sup>2</sup> and considerable part of his people were plundered.—A foray was made by the sons of Domnall<sup>3</sup> on the Foreigners, namely, on the Clan of [Gerald<sup>4</sup>] the Merry [Mac] Maurice Fitz Gerald. A great [retaliatory] foray [was made] by the Clann-Maurice on the same sons of Domnall.—The West of Connacht was all destroyed by William de Burgh.<sup>5</sup> Persons numerous were killed and preys and burnings and ills innumerable were done by him on the son<sup>6</sup> of the Earl and on the Clann-Ricaird<sup>7</sup> de Burgh. Peace [was made] between the same de Burghs.

Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 15th of the moon], A.D. [1336 Bis] 1333<sup>1</sup>[-6]. Tomaltach Mac Diarmata, king of Magh-Luirg, the man who wrought most fear and triumph and was the best for peace and war, charity and humanity that was in Ireland in his own time, died on the Sunday of the Trinity,<sup>2</sup> in his own stronghold, at the Strath of the Rock<sup>3</sup> and was buried in the Monastery of the Buill with an

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, [29th of the moon,] A.D. [1340 Bis.] 1337<sup>1</sup>[-40]. Great levy of war [took place] between the Ui-Maine, namely, between Tadhg, son of Tadhg<sup>2</sup> Ua Cellaigh and William, son of Donnchadh Ua Ceallaigh the Momonian<sup>3</sup> and Donnchadh son of Aedh Ua Cellaigh, to whom<sup>4</sup> Toirdelbach O'Concobuir gave the governance of Ui-Maine, [namely] to Tadhg<sup>5</sup>, and [between] great part of their own tribe likewise, so that they cast William from the country forth. And they all followed him, until William turned upon them and Donnchadh, son of Aedh Ua Cellaigh, was killed and Tadhg O'Cellaigh was taken<sup>6</sup> prisoner and wounded and underwent death of his injuries.—Mael-Sechlainn Ua Gairmleghaidh, chief of Cenel-Moen, died.—An expedition was gone upon by the sons of Ual[gh]arc Ua Ruairc, namely, Domnall and Aedh and Gilla-Crisd and Ruaidhri, on a foray against Cathal, son of Aedh [Ua Conchobair] the Brefnian and they made an plague; but there was greater loss of lambs. Also in this year, in Lent, mallows produced roses in England, which were carried to different countries as a sight" (Clyn).

in Munster).—King of Ui-Maine; died [1307], supra.

the entry in the Four Masters, was Murbhach (Murvagh), a place about three miles south-west of the town of Donegal (O'D. iii. 417, 578).

certaigh got tidings thereof and they lay in wait on the roads and on the paths and on the gaps of danger of the fortress. And he came through those in the night, owing to the darkness, [with] two or three horsemen. And an attack was made on him on the causeway of the fortress and he came [safe] from them by virtue of his strong hand and he injured Cathal, son of Aedh the Brefnian. And<sup>11</sup> news thereof reached not Mac Diarmata, until he heard the frays and the execration a-doing throughout the fortress. Thus was it with them till the morrow. And on Mac Diarmata receiving tale thereof, he sent trusty persons to him to put him into the Rock. And he was the greater part of a week therein. And the noble persons of the country used to go secretly every day to him. And if it had been done for Mac Diarmata, peace would have been made with him. And, as it was not made, he [Mac Diarmata] escorted him to the castle of Ros-Comain and left him there.—Simon, son of Concobur, son of Simon Mac Gille-Arraith, a chief of the chiefs of Luighni, died.—Aedh, son of Aedh [Ua Conchobair] the Brefnian, took the kingship of Connacht on Monday, namely, the first Monday of Winter.—Conchobur Ua Domnaill, king of Tir-Conaill—and fitting vessel for the arch-kingship of Ireland [was] he without dispute, for shape and for sense and for intellect, for highmindedness and for generosity and for pre-eminence, for magnanimity and for great bestowal, for courage and for battle-vigour, for nobility and for gentleness, for humanity and good piety—was killed by Niall Ua Domnaill, [namely] by the son of his own father, after assaulting his fortress.<sup>12</sup> And [his death happened thus:] fires and brands were put into the palace. And O'Domnaill came out and fell in the door of his own house, after gaining victory from world and from demon. And orphaned are wisdom and science without a man to Great war between [the] Mac Diarmata and Maghnus Mac Diarmata the Foreigner this year and treachery was committed by the sons of Waltrin Mac Goisdalb in his own house on Maghnus Mac Diarmata the Foreigner and he [Maghnus] was killed there and Cormac Blind[-eye] Mac Fingin was killed there.

(B)<sup>2</sup>

Maghnus Mac Diarmata the Foreigner was killed in treachery by the sons of Waltrin Mac Goistalb in his own house and Cormac Blind [-eye] Mac Fingin was killed there likewise.

Great war arose between Ual[gh]arc O'Ruairc and Ruaidhri, son of Cathal Ua Conchobhair. And battle was given<sup>3</sup> by them to each other and defeat was inflicted on Ua Ruairc by Ruaidhri, son of Cathal and the gallow-glasses of Ua Ruairc were all slain, namely, Mag Buirree and the son of Niall the Lamé and all their people, [or] for the chief part. And O'Ruairc himself was pursued and slain by Maelruanaigh Mac Donnchaidh. And this

<sup>5</sup> David.—From the Bull of appointment (by John XXII., Avignon, July 4, 1334) we learn that, on the death (1333) of Stephen (Segrave), the Chapter unanimously chose David, canon and priest of Armagh. The elect and capitular proctors proceeded to the Curia to obtain confirmation of the postulation. After examination and approval by three deputed ad hoc, David was appointed to the See. On July 26, having received consecration in the meantime, he was empowered to proceed to his church. (Theiner, p. 263.)

The Nuncio in England, Pelegri, having fulminated censures against the archbishop to recover 700 marks, fourteen arrears of fifty marks payable by the primate at his triennial visitation to the Apostolic See, Clement VI., on the petition of David, who pleaded inability to pay, directed (Avignon, August 3, 1344) security to be taken for the amount, the process to be discontinued and absolution imparted. (Theiner, p. 281-2.)

The words, nuper diem clausit extremum, of the Bull (July 31, 1346) appointing his successor (for

is the greatest deed that was done in Ireland from the death of Cormac,<sup>4</sup> son of Cuilennan, downwards.—Four sons of Cathal, son of Mag Raghnaill the Blind[-eye], were taken prisoners on Loch-in-sguir by Concobur Mag Raghnaill. And Tomaltach Mag Raghnaill took them with him to Caisel-Coscraigh and they were killed there,—the saddest tale that was done in that time.—The successor of [St.] Patrick, namely, David<sup>5</sup> Mag Oirechtaigh, died.—Cu-Uladh Mac Cathmail, arch-chief of Cenel-Feradhaigh, was killed by Domnall Mac Cathmail.—Defeat<sup>6</sup> [was inflicted] by Brian Mag Mathgamna on the Foreigners, whence came<sup>7</sup> three hundred heads [of slain to be counted] at<sup>8</sup> the place.—Niall O'Domnaill and the Clann Muircertaigh and the son of Feidhlimidh<sup>9</sup> and Maghnus Mac Diarmata pursued Ruaidhri, son of Cathal,<sup>9</sup> into Culmhail and dispersing defeat was inflicted upon him and on the Clann-Donchaidh and slaughter enormous was inflicted upon them, both by drowning and lacerating and wounding. And large preys were carried off by him. [1346]

entine, doctor of Civil and Canon Law, and professor at Bologna.
In a Notice and Commendation of him appended to the Sixth, it is said (inter alia): qui, contra consuetudinem hominum nostri temporis, quamvis uxoris esset vinculis alli-gatus, incredibile tamen studium literis impendit.

<sup>2</sup> Sixth.—A collection of Decretals issued by Boniface VIII., A.D.
1296, to supplement the Five Books (whence the title) promulgated by Gregory IX. in 1234. The work of Andreae here referred to is the Mercuriales, or Commentary on the (eighty-eight) legal Rules (Regu-lae Juris), which form the final Title (V. 13) of the Sixth.

<sup>3</sup> Clement[ine]. — Constitutions made public by John XXII. about 1416, and so called as consisting mainly of the Decrees of Clement V.
(1305–14). One of the items in the printed title is: vna cum profundo apparatu domini Ioannis Andreae.
The quotation given Vol. I., p. 13,
supra, belongs to a gloss of Andreae on the title, De Magistris (Clem. V. 1), the Decretal of Clement V. in the Council of Vienne, A.D. 1312, respecting the teaching of Hebrew, Arabic and Ireland, and they came gratefully from him.—Christian [1351]

Ua Leanna[i]n, abbot of Lis-gabhail, died on the . . Ides [13th] of April.

(John Andreae,<sup>1</sup> most excellent doctor, who explained (1348)
the peculiar Rules of the Sixth,<sup>2</sup> the Laws of the Clemen- t[ine],<sup>3</sup> and composed the Novellae,<sup>4</sup> the Praises of [St.]
Jerome,<sup>5</sup> and explained the enactments of the Speculum,<sup>6</sup> died this year,<sup>7</sup> on the seventh day of the month of July, of the very dire pestilence, and was buried in the church of St. Dominic in the city of Bologna).

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, [12th] of the moon, A.D. [1352 Bis.]
ship of Connacht by force against the Foreigners and against the Gaidhil.—Nualaith, daughter of Mac Diarmata, died.—Aedh O'Mael-Brenainn and his two sons were slain
by Aedh, son of Feidhlimidh Ua Conchobuirr.—Tadhg son Jacques Ua Cellaigh, died.—Aedh Ua Ruairc was Chaldaic in the Curia, and in the Universities of Paris, Oxford, Bologna and Salamanca.

<sup>4</sup> Novellae.—Most of the summaries and glosses of the Sixth were written by Andreae. (His well known Tree of Consanguinity is inserted at the end of the Fourth Book. Two of the laudatory lines at foot run :

Ioanni celebres Andreae dentur
honores ;
Arboreos fructus quo mediante legis.)

These he styled Novellae, in honour of his daughter, Novella, who sometimes, it is said, supplied her father's place in the lecture chair.

<sup>5</sup> Praises of St. Jerome.—One of the works of Andreae. In the prologue of the Novellae he calls St.
Jerome patrinus meus.

<sup>6</sup> Speculum.—The Speculum Juris was edited with additions by An-dreae. It was the work of Durandus (thence called Speculator), a canon-ist of Provence, who died at Rome in 1296. The Rationale divinarum officiorum of the same author is better known.

<sup>7</sup> This year.—The Notices agrees with the present obit as to the year,
but omits the day of the month.

<sup>2</sup> Ua Finachta. — Shortly before the demise of Clement VI. (Dec. 1352), a report reached Avignon that Rodulph, bishop of Down, was dead. That pope not having acted upon it, his successor, Innocent VI., nominated (Jan. 29, 1353) Gregory, priest and provost of Killala, and had him consecrated at the Curia. (Theiner, p. 302-3.) Though the rumour proved unfounded, Rodulph died soon after. The Chapter elected Richard, prior of the Benedictine House of Down, and he was confirmed by Innocent, Dec. 4, 1353 (ib. p. 305). Having received consecration, he was directed (Dec. 23) to proceed to the church (ib. p. 305-6). Though the collation had been reserved to the Pontiff, to impose a selection made before the vacancy arose would have

of his house.—The bishop of Sil-Muiredhaigh [Elphin], [1354] namely, Master John Ua Finachta,<sup>2</sup> died.—Fergal Mag Eochaga[i]n, namely, chief of Cenel-Fiachaigh, died.—The bishop of Connacht,<sup>3</sup> Ua Lachtna[i]n, rested in Christ.—Geoffrey Mag Raghnaill died.—Geoffrey Ua Raighillaigh died (on the 9th day of the month of March).—Mac Murchadha was drawn [asunder] by the Foreigners and a great war [arose] between the Foreigners and Gaidhil through that.—Aedh Mag Samradha[i]n died of his injuries on being wounded by Ua Fala[i]n.—Fergal<sup>4</sup> Mag Eochaga[i]n, chief of Cenel-Fiachaigh, died.—Brian, son of Aedh Mor Ua Neill, a general sage, died.—Ruaidhri, son of John Mag Mathgamna, was killed in the fortress of Mag Mathgamna.—The abbot of Sruthair, the son of Cathal, died: that is, Murchadh, son of Cathal Ua Ferghail, died.

(Philip Mag Uidhir, chief of Muintir-Feodachan, died on the None [5th] of February).

Kalends of Jan. [on 5th feria, 15th of the moon,] A.D. [1355] 1352<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Maurice<sup>2</sup> Fitz Thomas (Earl of Desmond), Justiciary of Ireland, died.—Niall Mag Mathgamma was slain by the sons of John Mag Mathgama.—Domnall, son of John Ua Fergail, chief of Muintir-Anghaile, died.—

appeared too arbitrary. Hence, doubtless, the silence of the second Bull respecting the existence of the first.

Gregory thus remained (evidently at the Papal Court) bishop of no church, until he was appointed to succeed John in the diocese of Elphin, Feb. 27, 1357 (ib. p. 310-1). Whence it may be inferred that the death of O'Finaghty took place towards the close of 1354.

Richard O'Loughlain, bishop of Kilfenora (Ware, p. 624).

<sup>2</sup> Maurice.—Grace states that he became Justiciary in 1355 (July 8, note, p. 145) and died soon after. One item in his encomium of Desmond is that he well chastised the Irish.

Domnaill the Black, [namely,] with the Constable of the Fifth of Ulster, so that he forced him<sup>9</sup> to abandon the daughter of Ua Raighillaigh and gave his own daughter to him. Shortly after that, he [Brian]<sup>10</sup> brought him to himself into his own house to drink wine. And when that person expected to obtain the wine, the bidding he got was that Brian himself wound<sup>11</sup> his two hands about him and he was seized rudely, contumeliously and carried out—and the few of his people [that were] in his company—so that his feet and hands were made fast and tied together and he was put into a lake. And tidings of him are not known from that out. Bands were despatched<sup>12</sup> throughout the country and wherever his people were found, they were slain and plundered. Woe the world and land and water wherein was submerged the noble, well-born offspring, to wit, one who was to be king of Insi-Gall [Hebrides], namely, the son of John the Black, son of Alexander. As [the poet] said :

of Mac Domnaill and half-king of Oirgialla was this [1365] person. And there came what was in the Fifth of Ulster of the Clann-Domnaill,<sup>15</sup> under Toirdelbach Mor Mac Domnaill and under his son, [namely,] under Alexander and under the son of Somairle himself, that is, under John junior and they betook themselves to attack Rath-tulach, that is, the fortress of Mag Mathgamna. And word came before them and they [the garrison] abandoned the place and defeat with loss of moveables was inflicted on them and they were not desisted from in pursuit until they reached Loch-Eirne, so that their chattel and their cattle were simultaneously seized completely by the Fir-Manach and by the [allied] host. Thus Brian Mag Mathgamna was expelled from out the country into the protection of Muintir-Mailmordha and his wife and his daughter were captured.—Cu-Connacht Ua Raighillaigh, king of Breifni, went into the Friars of his own will—a spirited, powerful king [was he]—and the kingship was given to Philip, [namely], to his brother.—Eochaidh, son of Toirdelbach Mag Mathgamna, was killed.

An incursion<sup>5</sup> was made by the Muinterruaire into the Breifni in the company of the Fir-Manach and a flank attack was made by the young sons of kings of the Clann-Muircertaigh and Cathal Mag [F]lannchadha, chief of Dartraighi, was slain therein.

Cathal Mag Flannchadha, chief of Dartraighi, was slain by the clan of Muircertach Ua Concobuir on a night attack. Cathal Mag [F]lannchadha, chief of Dartraighi, was slain therein.

Muster was made by Domnall Ua Neill and by the Clann-Domnaill, namely, by Toirdhelbach Mac Domnaill and by Alexander Mac Domnaill to attack Niall Ua Neill. And Mac Cathmail was put from out the country by them and that chief went to join Niall Ua Neill. The rear of the migrating forces was overtaken.<sup>6</sup> And<sup>7</sup> Ragnall, son of Alexander, that is, the heir of the Clann-Alexandair, came from Innsi-Gall about that time to Niall Ua Neill. The kerns of the two parties met with one another, that is, the [whole] sept of the Clann-Domnaill. And Ragnall sent messengers to where his own kinsman, namely, Toirdelbach and his son, to wit, Alexander, were, and he asked in honour of the seniority and of the brotherhood not to come against him. And no attention was paid to him and respite was not given to him, but they advanced up to the ford whereon they saw Ragnall and they gave forces of Domnall O'Neill. But this is at variance with the tenor of the more detailed narrative of the Ulster Annals.

O'Farrell succeeded Mac Keogh (ob. [1343] sup.) as bishop of Ardagh. Ware (p. 152) says he was not consecrated before 1347.

Kalends of Jan. on [6th] feria, [27th] of the moon, [1367] A.D. 1364<sup>1</sup>[-7]. The bishop, Ua Ferghail, namely, bishop of Ard-achaidh, eminent without defect in piety, or in charity, or in good hospitality, rested in Christ.—The archdeacon of Oirgialla,<sup>2</sup> namely Malachy Mag Uidhir, eminent without want of hospitality, rested in Christ.—Sitric, son of the herenagh,<sup>3</sup> a prince of general fame and noble head of his own sept, died.—Cathal, son of Imar Mag Tigernain, general support for weak and strong, died.—A great migratory incursion<sup>4</sup> was made by the Clann-Muircertaigh into Magh-Nissi, and an attack was made by them on the people of Magh-Luirg, namely, by Tadhg, son of Ruaidhri Ua Conchobuir and by the nobles of his people, together with their great muster: that is, with Fergal Mag Tigerna[i]n, chief of Tellach-Dunchada and by Diarmait Mag Raghnaill, chief of Muintir-Eolu[i]n, along with a muster of Gaidhil and gallowglasses. The stronghold of Aedh Mac Diarmata was burned by them. Fergal Mac Diarmata, king of Magh-Luirg and Aedh Mac Diarmata rose out in that movement. An onset and attack of cavalry exclusively was given to each other at Ait-tighi-Mic-Coise<sup>5</sup> and decisive defeat was inflicted on the people of Magh-Luirg and twelve persons were killed of the favourite nobles of Mac Diarmata and Aedh himself was injured there. And Mac Diarmata and Aedh Mac Diarmata took charge of the rear of their people spiritedly and powerfully from that out.—Cu-Connacht Ua Raighillaigh, king of Breifni, Magheoghegan, who belonged to the same family, writes thus in the second quarter of the seventeenth century: "Tho' mine author maketh this great account of this Rowrie, that he extolleth him beyond reason, yett his issue now, and

And a fortified position was taken up in the midst of the territory by Ua Neill. And large donatives were proffered from Brian Mag Mathgamna to Ua Neill: to wit, half of Oirghialla to be given to Niall, son of Murchadh, [namely] to the king that was before that<sup>6</sup> in the country and large donatives in payment [of the death] of Mac Domnaill<sup>7</sup> from him likewise. Ua Neill indeed consented to that. But a compact was made by the son of Murchadh Mag Mathgamna (namely, Niall), and by

And victory was gained from the [attacking] host by them and the son of Murchadh Mag Mathgamna (namely, Niall), heir of Oirgialla, was slain there and Alexander junior, son of Toirdelbach Mac Domnaill, Constable of the gallowglasses and heir of the Clann-Domnaill, was slain there and Eogan junior, son of Toirdelbach, son of Mail-Sechlainn Ua Domnaill, was slain there along with many others.—Cu-Uladh, son of the Dwarf,<sup>8</sup> family head of his own ilk, died and his son, a young master of learning, died likewise in returning from Saxon-land,—Fiachra O'Flainn, who was to be chief of Sil-Mailruanaigh, the son of a chief that was best in his own time, and his wife, namely, a superior woman without challenge, died.—The successor of [St.] Moedhoc<sup>9</sup>—and he was archdeacon of the Breifni likewise—a man full of the grace of the Holy Spirit and of charity and of humanity, died that year, after gaining victory from world and from demon.—Thomas Ua Floinn, king of Ui-Tuirtri, eminent without defect of generosity, or of nobleness, or of pre-eminence, died this year.—Tadhg, son of Maghnus, son of Cathal

Kalends of Jan. [on 2nd feria, 20th of the moon], A.D. [1369] 1366<sup>1</sup>[-9]. Philip Ua Raighillaigh was taken prisoner and deposed by his own kinsmen and he was put into the Rock of Loch-huachtair and <sup>2</sup> great harshness [inflicted] on him. And Sitric Mac-in-Maighistir of the nose, a man that kept a general guest-house, was slain there. And many others [were slain there].—Ua Maeladuín, king of Lorg, was killed in treachery by the sons of Niall Ua Domnaill. And Philip Mag Uidhir, king of the seven Territories, went, [with] a large fleet, to avenge his vassal on the sons of Ua Domnaill and Niall Ua Domnaill junior was slain by him in a naval engagement on Finn-Loch.—Great war [arose] between Niall Ua Neill and Domnaill Ua Neill in that year.—Brian, son of Aedh Ua Neill the Tawny, one fit to be a king of Ireland for nobleness, for generosity and for distinguished prowess, died in that year.—Donnchadh Ua Birn, chief of Tir-Briuin, died.—Bishop Odo Ua Neill, namely, bishop of Oirghialla,<sup>10</sup> a pious, generous sage, rested in Christ (on the 6th of the Kalends of August [July 27]), after gaining victory from world and from demon.—Richard Ua Raighillaigh, that is, bishop

And not often fell in one defeat before such a great tale of persons as fell and as were wounded of Foreigners. Limerick<sup>17</sup> was broken down and quickly burned by the Men of Thomond on that expedition and pledgeship of young hostages of the town was made to Brian and to the Clann-Cuilen likewise. And Sida<sup>18</sup> junior, son of the daughter of Ua Duibidhir, assumed<sup>19</sup> the wardenship of the place. But treachery was practised by the Foreigners of Limerick on the heroic knight. the Loch was captured by them and Philip Ua Raighillaigh was brought thereout and his own kingship was given to [Philip] Ua Raighillaigh again.—Maurice Ua hEogain, vicar of Inis-cain upon Loch-Erne, died on the 5th of the Ides [9th] of November. [1369]

Kalends of Jan. [on 5th feria, 23rd of the moon,] [1372 Bis A.D. 1368[-72.]] Brian<sup>1</sup> Mor Mac Mathgamna, arch-king of Oirgialla, the hand that most slew of the Foreigners and of the Gaidhil of Ireland in his own time [was] that man and he went against the Foreigners and a gallow-glass of his own people fell upon him treacherously in a solitary place and he was slain by him and [the assassin] himself escaped thereafter.—Treachery the most repulsive and hateful that was ever done in Ireland was done by Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Conchobuir: to wit, the son of his own kinsman, namely, Tadhg junior, son of Magnus, was slain by his own hands in the castle of Sligeach, whilst he was in custody<sup>2</sup> with him therein.—John Ua Dubaga[i]n,<sup>3</sup> arch-historian of Ireland, abandoned the delight of the world for the space of seven years and died with the Community of John the Baptist in Rinn-duin.—Mac Feorais [Birmingham] was taken prisoner by O'Cellaigh and by his sons, and Richard, [son] of Mac Feorais, that is, the heir of Mac Feorais, was killed.—William junior, son of William [de Burgh], head of the urbanity of Ireland, died the same year.—William junior Ua Cellaigh, the best material of a general generous patron that was in Ireland, died this year. And there came not from Cormac of the Banishments<sup>4</sup>, son of Concobur [son of Nes-], downwards a son of a king that was better than he.

[A.D. 1373.] Attack<sup>1</sup> was made by the Foreigners of Meath on the Muintir-Anghaile and Ruaidhri, son of Cathal Ua Ferghail and his son and many of his people were slain. And Donnchadh Ua Ferghail followed them [1373] and many of them were slain by him and one shot of an arrow killed himself. And it had been defeat for all the host, had it not been for that shot.—William Dalton<sup>2</sup> and the Sheriff of Meath were killed by the Cenel-Fiachaidh and by Ua Mael[-Sh]echlainn—Mael-Sechlainn O'Neill the Connacian died.—Adam Ua Ciana[i]n<sup>3</sup> died this year a canon, after<sup>4</sup> being tonsured by the canons of Lisgabhair, on gaining victory from world and from demon.—Barrdubh,<sup>5</sup> daughter of Ua Ruairc, died.—Great wind in this year, whereby were broken down houses and churches numerous.—Toirdelbach O'Concobhair the Red was traversing the Plain of Connacht on foot that year and he went through the raiders, twelve horse-men [strong], of The son of the Parson Mac Feorais. And a gillie of his [O'Connor's] people raised<sup>6</sup> a helmet to him for annoyance. And the people of The son of the Parson followed them and they were overtaken by the horse-host. And Toirdelbach the Red himself occupied the rear of his people. And no look-out was kept by them at first, so that<sup>7</sup> the excessive force of the horse-host poured [unawares] on them. Most courageously was that onset borne by them; for Toirdelbach the Red slew a portion of them and some of his people were slain. [Single] combat [was given] by The son of the Parson and by Toirdelbach to each other and The son of the Parson fell by him with one stroke of a sword. And there was not done in that time a slaying that was more courageous and of greater fame than that slaying.—Matthew, son of Oscar Mag Uidhir, rested in [1373]

de Valle. Appointed bishop of Limerick by Innocent VI. (Avignon, Nov. 6, 1360), having been elected by the majority of the Chapter. At the time, he was subdeacon and dean. Being but twenty-nine years old, he received

Christ on the 14th of the Kalends of November [Oct. 19] and his brother, namely, John, son of Oscar, was killed on the same day. [1373]

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, [15th of the moon,] A.D. 1369<sup>1</sup>[-74]. Jenkin Savage was killed by Mag Aengusa this year and orphaned is learning after him.—Cormac, grandson of To-maltach Ua Ferghail, was killed.—Domnall Ua Dochartaigh junior, the son of a chief that was almost the best in Ireland; general patron, that bestowed most of horses and chattel to the learned folk of Ireland and the greatest loss which the erudite received at the end of the world, died, after gaining victory from world and from demon.—Toirdelbach, son of Brian Mag Tigernain, died.—Cu-coicrichi Mag Eochaga[i]n junior, chief of Cenel-Fiachaigh, was killed in treachery, after going with the bishop of Meath<sup>2</sup> to Ath-luain. And it was a person<sup>3</sup> of the people of William Dalton that killed him with one thrust of a spear. And nothing was done there but that.—Theobald de Burgh, heir of Mac William, was killed by the Ui-Maine: one that was most excellent and most beautiful and a general depredator on the Connachtmen likewise was he.—Tigernan, son of Brian Mag Tigerna[i]n, a spirited, powerful son of a chief, died this year.—Defeat [was inflicted] by Niall Ua Neill, [namely,] by the king of the Fifth of Ulster, on the Foreigners, wherein fell the Knight<sup>4</sup> and Bogsa of the Rock<sup>5</sup> and the Sandal and the de Burgh and William of Baile-dalat, head of splendid hospitality<sup>6</sup> of Ireland.—Mael[-Sh]echlainn, son of Diarmait Ua Ferghail, went on a war from a dispensation in the impediment of age. (Theiner, p. 316.) He was translated to Meath by Urban V., Feb. 19, 1369 (ib. p. 333), and died in 1379 (Ware, ed. Harris, p. 147).

out his own country into Muintir-Mailmordha. And an [1374] attack was delivered by the Foreigners upon them and Mail[-Sh]echlinn<sup>7</sup> was slain therein.—Tadhg<sup>7</sup> Mag Raghnaill junior was killed by one shot of an arrow.
 And it was not known with certainty who discharged it, but the Muintir-Birn [were] a-putting it on the Clann-Muircertaigh and the Clann-Muircertaigh a-putting it on these. War arose through that between the Muintir-Eolu[i]s and Muintir-Birn.—Tadhg, son of Ruaidhri Ua Concobuir, the one son of a king that was best of hospitality and prowess in his own time, died in Connacht on the feast day of Stephen [Dec. 26], after gaining victory from world and from demon.

 1370<sup>1</sup>[-5]. Mathgamain, son of Maghnus Ua Conchobuir, a spirited son of a king, rested in Christ.—The castle of Ros-Comain was taken by Ruaidhri Ua Concobuir, [namely] by the king of Connacht. And the castle of Baile-in-tobair and many donatives that are not reckoned here were given to Toirdelbach<sup>2</sup> the Red in lieu.—Geoffrey, son of Gilla-na-naem Ua Ferghail, well worthy to be chief of the hAnghaile, rested in Christ.—Mac [C]artain, sub-king of Cenel-Foghartaigh, was killed in treachery by his own kinsman, namely, by the son of Gilla-Ter-mainn [Mac Cartain].—A great hosting by Niall Ua Neill to Dun-da-lethglas and great defeat was inflicted on the Foreigners by him, wherein fell Sir James<sup>3</sup> of Baileatha-thid, Deputy of the king of the Saxons. And the de Burgh of Caimlinn and many others were slain therein.

Kalends of Jan. [on 5th feria, 18th of the moon], A.D. [1377] 1372<sup>1</sup>[-7]. Walter, son of Sir David [de Burgh<sup>2</sup>], died.—Geoffrey Ua Flannaga[i]n, chief of Clann-Cathail, died.—Nualaith, daughter of Tadhg Mac Donnchaidh, died.—An incursion was made by Richard [de Burgh] junior on the Clann-Cuilen: a leaguer of two days and two nights was made by them in the country. The Clann-Cuilen assembled under Aedh<sup>3</sup> Mac Conmara, namely, the son of the daughter of Ua Dalaigh and defeat was inflicted on the Clann-Ricaird there, wherein were killed Theobald Mac William, head of the large kern-force, and three sons of O'Eidhin and many others. And Brian O'Flaithbertaigh was taken prisoner there.—John Ua Rodacha[i]n, successor of [St.] Caillin,<sup>4</sup> a general sage, died this year.—The bishop Ua Ceallaigh,<sup>5</sup> namely, bishop of Cluain-ferta of [St.] Brennan, died.—The castle of Lis-aird-abla<sup>6</sup> was built by John Ua Ferghail, chief of the hAnghaile, this year.—Great war arose between O'Concobuir and Mac Diarmata and Magh-Luirg was destroyed, both tillage and dwelling. And people were killed between them. And peace was made after that by them and large donatives were got by Mac Diarmata from Ua Concobuir for the sake of that peace.—An attack was made by Mac William [de Burgh] and by Mael-Sechlainn Ua Cellaigh and by the Ui-Maine on Ua Conchobuir at the castle of Ros-Comain. And Ua Concobuir arose against them with his forces and battle was given to each other by them. And defeat was inflicted on Mac William and on the Ui-Maine and Richard de Burgh, head of the urbanity of Connacht, was slain there and Dornall, feast of the patron was Nov. 13. The Book of Fenagh, falsely ascribed to St. Caillin, has been published (Dublin, 1875).

to Ware (ed. Harris, p. 640), was bishop of Clonfert in October, 1347.

native Annals, as far as I know, have omitted to record) that, on the death of O'Finaghty ([1354] supra), before the collation reserved to the Curia was made, Charles, the archdeacon, procured his election by the Chapter, got it confirmed by Thomas [O'Carroll] of Tuam, and had himself consecrated bishop of Elphin. One of the acts for which he was excommunicated by bishop Thomas son of Cathal Ua Concobuir junior, was slain there and [1377] Tadhg junior, grandson of Tadhg Ua Ceallaigh and Ua Mainnir Mor and Mac Dubghaill and the son of Niall [Mac Neill] the Crooked and many others were slain there likewise.—Mael-Domnaigh the vigil-keeper, [and] Fachtna, son of David Ua Mordha, died.—Edward [III.], king of the Saxons, died.<sup>7</sup>—Donnchadh, son of William Ua Cerbaill the handsome, king of Eili, eminent in hospitality and prowess, died this year.—Mathgamain<sup>3</sup> Mac Conmara, namely, the son of the daughter of Ua Dalaigh, died in that year.—The Monastery of Es-ruadh was burned in the same year.—Geoffrey, son of Annagh Ua Raighillaigh, was killed by the Clann-in-caich.<sup>8</sup>—Mac Brana[i]n<sup>9</sup> the Lamé and the great Dean, Mac Muirghisa<sup>10</sup>, died in the court of the Pope.—Domnall Ua Gallchobuir, namely, son of Eerghal, son of Inmanagh, died.

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, [29th of the moon,] A.D. [1378] 1373<sup>1</sup>[-8]. Mor, daughter of Ua Ferghail, wife of Diarmait Mag Raghnaill, namely, the chief of Muintereolu[i]s, an excellent woman without dispute, died a death of Uction and penance and was buried honourably in Cluain-Conmaicne.—Toirdelbach Mac Súibne, high [appointed by the same pope, on the translation of Gregory to Tuam in 1372] was the confirmation of elections to dignities (Theiner, p. 363).

In the account returned by John de Cabrespino, papal Nuncio in England and Ireland, of benefices granted in the third year of Urban V. (1362-70), it is stated that the canonical election and subsequent confirmation by bishop Charles of canon Thomas Ma[c]murgoasa [the Mac Muirghisa of the text] was ratified by the Curia on Feb. 5 and confirmed (by the pope) on Feb. 14, 1365 (ib. p. 310).

The most probable explanation is that Gregory remained in the papal Court until his elevation to Tuam and tacitly acquiesced in the administration of the diocese by the bishop in possession.

From the fact of Mac Morrissey dying in Rome it may be inferred that he proceeded thither in connection with the charges mentioned in the Rescript.

[1378] <sup>1</sup>1373.—The ferial (6) proves that the true year is 1378.

²Was slain.—In the more detailed account given in the F. M., Mac Donough is said to have taken charge of the rear of the retreating foray party. In this, the post of danger, he bore the brunt of the attack, until O'Conor the Red came up and ordered him to be taken alive. Mac Donough, however, disdained to yield and fell fighting. The chief men of his side were made prisoners; the rank and file, pursued as far as the north of Tirerwere burned by him. And Domnall junior, son of Mac Domnaill,¹ was killed on that expedition.—The sons of Ua Cuirnin, namely, Sigraídh and Cairpri and Gilla-Padraig, sons of Adam [Ua Cuirnin], were killed by the Foreigners of the County of Ossory. Great loss to learning [was] that death of Sigraídh.—Treacherous forays were made by Ua Concobuir the Red and by Mac Diarmata on Ua Concobair the Brown. Mac Donnchaidh of Tir-Oilella went for that reason, [with] a large host, to meet Ua Concobuir the Brown to Magh-Luirg and Magh-Luirg was burned, both houses and corn, by them on that expedition. Cormac Mac Donnchaidh was slain ² by Mac Diarmata and by the sons of [Aedh] son of Feidhlimídh Ua Conchobuir: namely, the one son of a king who was best of hospitality and prowess that was in his time.—Muircertach the Lame, son of Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Concobuir, went into the stronghold of Mac Donnchaidh to attack the stronghold of Ua Domnaill at the Monastery of Es-ruadh. Many persons were slain by them, including the sons of Ua Baighill with their kinsmen. Mac Suibne and his son were taken prisoners there on that expedition. [1388]

The son of Maghnus Mag Uidhir, namely, Gilla-Patraig (and he used to be called The Tawny Gillie), died of a vein that burst in him² at the close of day: to wit, a man of general goodness and of considerable substance, who was of the best generosity in food and drink that was in his time, and so on.

John, son of Philip, son of Gilla-Isu Ua Raighillaigh the Red, namely, king of Breifni, to wit, a man of generosity and prowess and who upheld his own dignity, died of a fit in his own bed in Tulach-Mongain and was buried the same night in Cavan. A week over a month before the Nativity [Dec. 25th] that [happened].

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, [24th of the moon,] A.D. [1402] 1402.¹ A meeting was held by Ua Neill, namely, by Niall junior and by Ua Domnaill at Narrow-water and peace was made between them. And² Ua Domnaill rendered submission to Ua Neill on that occasion.—Mail[-Sh]echlainn, son of William Ua Cellaigh, namely, king of Ui-Maine, to wit, a man full of generosity and of knowledge and of sincerity, died after victory of penance. Peace was mutually made by the Sil-Cellaigh that time and the lordship of Ui-Maine was given to Concobur³ Ua Cellaigh.—Cormac Mac Brana[i]n, namely, chief of Corco-Achlann, was killed by his own kinsmen in treachery.—Great war [arose] between (Toirdelbach) Ua Domnaill, king of Tir-Conaill and Brian, son of Henry Ua

³ Daughter—Saxons.—According to a quatrain in the Annals of Tigernach, A.D. 386 (Cf. Todd Lectures, III. p. 360 ř, ř), Cairne, a Saxon woman, wife of Eochu Mughmedhoin, was the mother of Niall of the Nine Hostages. (Rawl. B 488, fol. 6d.)

The Bainsenchas — History of [famous] women — L. Be., 285a (which preserves, ll. 14–17, a better copy of the verse) and the certifying poem (L.L. 139a, l. 31) of Gilla-Modubda (for whom see Todd Lect. III. 338) call her daughter of the king of the Saxons.

⁴ Maghnus.—O'Reilly (Ua Raighilligh). Or, more likely, the entry

king of Breifni—namely, a spirited, truly hospitable man—was killed in his own house by the sons of Mac Caba with their people: to wit, a fortnight before Easter² that deed was done.—Muircertach, son of Donnchadh Ua Dubhda, died in this Summer.—Niall Ua Neill junior, arch-king of Ulster and a courageous, powerful man, and a man who the [learned] companies and pilgrims of Ireland thought would take the kingship of Ireland on account of the prowess of his hands and the nobility of his blood—to wit, the blood of Niall of the Nine Hostages and of the daughter of the king of the Saxons³—and the excellence of his hospitality likewise, died in the Harvest after victory of Uction and penance. Brian, son of Niall Ua Neill, namely, who was to be king of the Fifth of Ulster, died the same year.—Philip, son of Brian Mor Mag Mathgamna, that is, arch-king of Oirgialla, died this year and Ardghal Mag Mathgamna was made king in his stead.—Mac Cinaith of the Triuch was killed by his own kinsman in treachery.—Cu-Connacht, son of Maghnus Ua Raighilligh, died.—Mac Craith, son of Maghnus⁴, died on the 2nd of the Ides [14th] of March. 1408. ¹*Slain, etc.* — On Monday, Feb. 21, 1407, A. L. C. The textual date is accordingly erroneous. The year, it is added in Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, [20th of the moon,] A.D. [1407] 1407.¹ John, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc, namely, one who was to be king of Breifni, died in Magh-Luirg and was carried from that to Druim-lethan and buried therein.—Great defeat was inflicted this year by the Foreigners in Callaidh on Walter de Burgh, namely, the grandson of the Earl of Ulster² and on Tadhg Ua Cerbhail: a place where was slain Tadhg himself, to wit, the best general protector that was in Ireland in his own time. And Walter was taken prisoner in that defeat.—Defeat was inflicted by Ua Conchobuir the Red and by Tadhg Ua Ceallaigh and by Ruaidhri Mac Diarmata on Mac William of Clann-Ricaird and on Cathal Ua Conchobair. Cathal himself was taken prisoner there and persons numerous were [either] taken prisoners or³ slain there.—Aedh Mag Uidhir (namely, son of Philip of the [battle-]axe), that is, tanist of Fir-Manach, was taken prisoner in treachery in the town of Cathal Ua Ruairc the Deaf and the son of Magnus Mag Uidhir, namely, Conchobur, and many other good people were taken with him there. And by the Men of Tir-Conaill,⁴ on the suggestion of the Brefnians, that capture was effected. And therefrom it is called the Hospitality of the Malignity⁵ from that [time] down.

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, [1st] of the moon, A.D. [1408 B.] 1408. Cathal Ua Conchobuir, namely, one who was to be king of Ui-Failghi, was slain¹ by the Clann-Fheorais.²

the A. L. C., was 1406-7. The reasons assigned for the double notation, are, as was to be expected (Cf. Todd Lectures, III. 378 sq.), without foundation. The observation, however, affords a probable clue to the partial misdating of the A. L. C. from 1399 to 1406. The events in question may have taken place between Jan. 1 and March 25. They would thus be dated a year in advance in Chronicles in which the A.D. began on Lady Day.

² Clann-Fheorais.—The Leinster, not the Connaught, Birminghams, the context shows, are here intended.

 1409. The leg of Richard de Burgh was broken by a hound that was running after a hare and he died thereof.— A great hosting [was made] this year by the sons of Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Concobuir and by the Clann-Donnchaidh of Tir-Oilella to put provision into the castle of Ros-Comain¹ in spite of [the] Connacht[men]² that were assembled around the castle. And they put the provision [into it] then in despite and they themselves returned [safe] to their houses on that expedition.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, [23rd] of the moon, A.D. [1410]
 1410. Raghnaill Mag Raghnaill, namely, chief of Muintir-Eolu[i]s, died this year. Cumhsgrach Mag Raghnaill took the chieftainry after him and then died at the end of a fortnight.—Domnall Ua Neill, namely, king of the Fifth of Ulster, was taken prisoner by Brian Mag Mathgamna and Brian delivered him over to Eogan¹ Ua Neill this year.—Tadhg, son of Mail[-Sh]echlainn, son of William, son of Donnchadh Ua Ceallaigh the Momonian, namely, king of Ui-Maine, died this year.

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, [4th] of the moon, A.D. 1411. [1411]
 Joan, daughter of the Earl of Desmond, namely, wife of Mag Carthaigh Mor, that is, Tadhg Mag Carthaigh, died this year.—Domnall, son of Concobur¹ Ua Briain, namely, one who was to be [the] Ua Briain, was killed by the Barrymore. — Eogan, son of Murchadh Ua Madaghain, namely, king of Sil-Anmchadha, died.—Cobhthach Ua Madaghain, namely, one who was to be king and bishop² over his country, died this year.—

1410. ¹ To Eogan. — Who, in turn, consigned him to the custody of Maguire of Fermanagh, A. L. C.

1411. ¹ Concobur. — King of Thomond, in succession to his brother, Brian, who died in 1400, supra.

² Bishop. — Of Clonfert. The statement respecting O'Madden's succession to the See is apparently little more than conjecture.

Muircertach, son of Cu-Uladh Ua Neill, died this year: [1411] namely, one who was to be king of Ulster.—The Earl of Desmond was expelled³ by his own kinsman, namely, by James⁴, son of Gerald, so that he put the Earl from out Ireland; that is, Thomas,⁵ son of Earl John.⁶—Ua Suillabhain Mor was taken prisoner this year and his son was slain by Domnall Ua Suillabhain the Black in treachery.—Maelmordha Ua Raighillaigh (namely, son of Cu-Connacht, son of Gilla-Isu the Red), that is, king of Breifni, died this year.—Mail[-Sh]echlainn, son of Brian Mag Tigernain, died this year: to wit, one who was to be chief of Tellach-Dunchadha.—Concobur Ua Cathusaigh, herenagh of the [church-]land of Muintir-Cathusaigh in Daim-inis, died.—John Mag Sgoloigi, herenagh of his own [church-]land in Rœ-oirrthir, died.

(The Holy Cross⁷ of Rath-both rained blood from its wounds this year and distempers and diseases numerous were relieved thereby.)

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, [15th] of the moon, A.D. [1412 B.] 1412. Richard Barrett came into Cuil-Cernu on a foray and the nobles of the country overtook him and he was driven to the Muaidhe and drowned therein and many of his people were [either] drowned or¹ slain.—Tigernan junior, son of Tigernan Mor, son of Ualgarg Ua Ruairc, died: to wit, an excellent son of a king and one who was to be king of Breifni without contention. And he was buried in Sligech.—Domnall, son of Niall Ua Domnaill, died.—Cu-Connacht Mag Tignernain, chief of Tellachance with a license granted, notwithstanding the Statute of Kilkenny, to his father, Gerald, by Richard II., Dec. 8, 1388 (Stat. Kilkenn. Ir. Arch. Soc., p. 9-10).

mills, with the weirs and fisheries, trees in the park, and services of the manorial villeins, of Trim, to establish a wax-light to burn perpetually before the image in the church; and four wax-lights to burn before same during the Mass and Anthem of Our Lady, in honour of God and said Lady, for the good estate of Edward, his mother, Cecilia, and his children and for the souls of their progenitors and ancestors. (Stat. Kilken., ubi. sup., p. 51.)

Dunchadha, was killed by the Fir-Manach in his own [1412] house on Cruachan² on a night incursion. And they inflicted a massacre of women and men and children there and burned the town of Mag Tigernain on that expedition and came to their houses safe from that excursion.—Great war [was waged³] by Ua Ferghail, namely, Domnall Ua Ferghail and by the Foreigners of Meath. And Fabur was burned by them and many persons were [either] taken or killed by them.—Ua Catha[i]n and the sons of John Ua Domnaill made an attack on [the] Ua Domnaill and fourteen men of the people [of Ua Domnaill were slain^{3a}].—The image of Mary⁴ of Ath-truim wrought great miracles in this year.—Aedh, son of Henry Ua Neill, escaped from Ath-cliaith after being ten years in captivity there and brought many other captives along with him.—Hugh de Lacy⁵ and the son of the Earl of Kildare encountered one another in Cell-Mochello[i]g⁶ and fell by each other.—A great hosting [was made] by Brian, son of Domnall Ua Concobuir, into Gailenga and into Cera and into Clann-Cuain and into Conmaicni. And he took with him the Clann-Maurice⁷ with their predatory band into the [latter] territory. And the Clann-William de Burgh and the Ui-Flaithbertaigh and Muintir-Maille, both Foreigner and Gaidhel and the Clann-Goisdalb and the Clan of Jordan de Exeter and the Barretts assembled against Brian and

In 1538, Browne, the conformed archbishop of Dublin, wrote to Thomas Cromwell: "There goithe a common brewte amonges the Yrish men, that I entende to plope down Our Lady of Tryme" (ib.). The image, we learn from the present Annals, was burned in that year by the Reformers.

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, [18th] of the moon, A.D. [1415] 1415. The Saxons came into Ireland this year, namely, Lord Furnival.¹ And he despoiled² many of the poets³ of Ireland, to wit, Ua Dalaigh of Meath and Aedh Ma[c] Craith junior and Dubthach Mac Eochadha and Maurice Ua Dalaigh.—Great forays were made by [the] Ua Maille this year on Diarmait Ua Maille. Diarmait captured the island of Ua Maille.⁴ Ua Maille went in pursuit of Diarmait: Diarmait encountered them and victory was gained by him over [the] Ua Maille. And he and Concobur Ua Maille and the son of Thomas Ua Maille and Domnall, son of Diarmait Ua Maille, were then slain by Diarmait. Diarmait Ua Maille was then made [the] Ua Maille.—Bean-Midhe, daughter of Ua Glenna[i]n, wife of Gilla-Tigernaigh Mac Gilla-Martain, died on the 3rd of the Ides [11th] of November.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, [29th] of the moon, A.D. [1416 B.] 1416. John Mac Goisdelbh went on a foray against Edmond¹ of the Plain and he himself was slain by one shot of an arrow.—Tuathal Ua Maille was killed this year by the sons of Dubghall Ua Maille, namely, by the sons of his own brother.—Great war arose between the Muint-

⁶ Clann-Caba.—Who had been left behind in concealment, to protect the rear.

Ruairc and Fir-Manach by reason of Cathal,² son of Aedh [1416] Ua Ruairc. And defeat was given to the people of Aedh Mag Uidhir and to Cathal Ua Ruairc by Tadhg Ua Ruairc and by Domnall Ua Ruairc, whereby were slain Tadhg, son of Ferghal and nine of the Fir-Manach. Another attack [was made] by Aedh Ua Ruairc and by Tadhg Ua Ruairc and by Mac Caba in Muintir-Peodachain.³ And the Fir-Manach from the Lough west⁴ overtook them and the sons of Ua Ruairc were in great strait on Sliabh-dachon and they endured that pressure until they reached those they had in ambush.⁵ And the sons of Ua Ruairc and the Clann-Caba⁶ turned on the pursuing party and inflicted defeat on the Fir-Manach, whereby were slain eight and twenty of them. And there were slain the two sons of Mail[-Sh]echlainn, son of Flaithbertach Ua Ruairc, namely, Donnchadh the Red and John. And there were slain a good many others⁷ of the Fir-Manach⁸ there.—Domnall, son of Tigernan Mor Ua Ruairc, namely, one who was to be king of Breifni, died this year of the small pox.⁹—Mac Fheorais was taken prisoner by Edmond de Burgh.—The daughter of Muircertach, son of Cathal, son of Aedh¹⁰ the Brefnian, died; namely, the wife of Ruaidhri Mac Diarmata.—Great war arose between the Clann-Donnchaidh of Tir-Oilella themselves respecting land and respecting great forays they committed on each other. Mac Donnchaidh with his sons and Cormac Mac Donnchaidh were on one side and Tomaltach Mac Donnchaidh and the sons of Mailruanaigh Mac Donnchaidh on the other side. An encounter occurred between them and the two sons of Mailruanaigh Mac Donnchaidh were slain

⁷ A good many others.—Literally, other good feats. For the idiom, see 1379, n. 4, supra.

⁹ Small-pox.—Literally, speckled disease. See [1327], note 8, supra.

he himself came to his house on that expedition with ^{7a} [1418] victory of rescue and chattel⁸ and so forth.—Caislen-namallacht⁹ was built by William Ua Cellaigh this year opposite the great castle of Ros-Comain, to aid in taking the latter. A large host [was led] by the sons of Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Concobuir and by all the lower¹⁰ part of Connacht to put provision into the great castle of Ros-Comain and they put a store into it in despite of what was against them. And they made an encampment around the Small Castle,¹¹ but could not do anything [more] to it on that occasion.—Richard, son of Thomas (son of Mathgamain)¹² son of Gilla-Isa Ua Raighilligh, namely, King of Breifni, went in a cot on Loch-Sighlenn to meet Foreigners and was drowned on that occasion along with his young son, that is, Eogan and two Masters¹³ of his family.¹⁴ And his wife, namely, the daughter of Mag Raghnaill, that is, Finnguala [was of the party]. And she came safe by virtue of her swimming. Eogan, son of John, son of Philip Ua Raighilligh, took the kingship of the Breifni after Richard.—Eogan, son of Cu-Connacht Mag Tigernain, namely, one who was to be chief of Tellach-Dunchadha, died.—Thomas junior, son of another Thomas (namely, the Black Gillie) Mag Uidhir, was taken prisoner this year in Baile-Ui-Grada¹⁵ by Brian junior, son of Brian, son of Henry Ua Neill and by John, son of Philip Mag Uidhir of the [Battle-]axe.—Augustin Ua Conghaile died this year on the 2nd of the Kalends of June [May 31].

¹³ Masters.—Here, as elsewhere in these Annals, Master is a clerical title. For the entry in the F. M. states that the two in question were Philip O'Reilly, dean of Drumlane, and [another of the name], vicar of Annagh (co. Cavan).

¹⁴ His family.—The O'Reillys.

¹⁵ Baile-Ui-Grada. — Town of O'Grady. This seems to have been a place in Fermanagh. The difficulties of the seizure taking place at the residence of the O'Grady in Clare appear insuperable.

 1419. Great war [arose] this year between Ua Neill, namely, Domnall, son of Henry Ua Neill, and Eogan, son of Niall Ua Neill junior, that is, the future arch-king of Ulster. Ua Neill was expelled in this war by Eogan and by Toirdelbach Ua Domnaill, namely, king of Tir-Conaill and by Brian Mag Mathgamna, namely, king of Oirgialla and by Thomas Mag Uidhir, namely, king of Fir-Manach. A large host [was led¹] by Brian,² son of Domnall Ua Conchobuir, with his foray-band and Murbach was burned by him, to wit, the stronghold of Ua Domnaill and all Tir-Aedha was destroyed by him on that expedition.—Thomas the Lamé, grandson of the Earl of Ormond, went to aid the king of the Saxons this year and many of the nobles of Ireland went with him into France on that war.³—The Calbach Ua Conchobuir, namely, king of Ui-Failghi, was taken prisoner in treachery by the son of Libined Freyne and sold by him to the deputy of the king of the Saxons, namely, Lord Furnival. And when he was put in custody, the person who was fettered with⁴ the Calbach escaped with him to his own house.—Feircert Ua hUiginn died: to wit, an excellent poet and a man who kept⁵ a general house of guests for the Men of Ireland.—Mac Murchadha, namely, king of Leinster, that is, Donnchadh Caemanach, was taken prisoner by the Foreigners this year and carried into Saxon-land by them.—Muircertach, son of Brian Ua Flaithbertaigh died this year: to wit, a general protector to [the learned] retinues and companies of Ireland, namely, king of Connacht, [and he died] with victory from the world.—John, son of Cathal Mag Uidhir, was slain this year on the 14th of the Kalends of June [May 19].—Aedh Ua Flannaga[i]n, prior of Daim-inis, died on the feast of [St.] Martin [Nov. 11] of this year.—A great [1419] host [was led] this year by [the] Ua Cellaigh of [Ui-]Maine and by William Ua Ceallaigh and by Mac William⁶ de Burgh and by Cathal Ua Conchobuir the Black and by Mac Diarmata of Magh-Luirg, namely, Tomaltach. And they took their bands of gallowglasses with them, namely, Mac Dubgaill and Toirdelbach Mac Domnaill and they went on that expedition into Clann-Ricaird⁷ to destroy it and to expel Mac William from out Clann-Ricaird. Mac William of Clann-Ricaird had another large host⁸ to meet them, to wit, Tadhg,⁹ son of Brian and his kinsmen and the nobles of Thomond and Domnall Mac Suibne. Howbeit, those two hosts met each other at the mouth of Ath-lighean in the upper [southern] part of Clann-Ricaird and gave battle to each other then. And¹⁰ then were slain Mac Dubgaill and his two sons and all their gallowglasses. Toirdelbach Mac Domnaill and his son went safe from that battle; but¹¹ his people were all slain there. And there were taken [the] Ua Ceallaigh, namely, Donnchadh Ua Ceallaigh and William the Rough, son of David, lord of Clann-Connmaigh. And William Ua Ceallaigh escaped by himself from that defeat and many of the nobles of Ui-Maine were [either] killed or¹¹ captured in the rout. And it is not possible to determine or count the extent of that defeat, or the extent of the chattel that fell to¹² the Clann-Ricaird and to the Momonians, of horses and of apparel and of valuable hostages and so forth.—Aedh the Tawny, son of Tigernan Ua Ruairc, died this year, in the beginning¹³ of his felicity, in his own stronghold. Tadhg, son of Tigernan Ua Ruairc, was made king in his stead

Brian,¹ son of Domnall Ua Conchobair. The host of the Province² came at the time to prevent the work. Brian mustered another host against those, under his kinsmen and under Mac Donnchaidh and under Ua Ruaire, namely, Tadhg. And the Ultonian host did not attempt to go across the Ursgathach westward to them on that occasion. The men of Tir-Conaill³ were, a numerous force, by the port of Eas-ruadh at that time. The sons of Ua Domnaill, namely, Niall and Domnall and Nectain, came [with] a horse-host on the Plain.⁴ The sons of Brian Ua Conchobuir went [with] a large reconnoitring horse-host at that time to Bel-atha-senaigh and a great encounter arose between them. The Men of Tir-Conaill³ overtook them then and an assault was made on the Carbrians, wherein were slain John, son of Brian Ua Conchobuir and Aedh Mac Donnchaidh the Tawny, and Cathal, son of Diarmait, son of Cormac, son of Ruaidhri and Eogan Ua Dubhda. Brian Ua Conchobuir and the Carbrians went on Magh-eine at that time in consequence of those tidings. Eogan Ua Conchobuir and Toirdelbach Carrach went at the end of five nights⁵ afterwards to Es-ruadh. The sons of Ua Domnaill were on the over side of the Cataract,⁶ in Portn-long,⁷ and they had drunk wine. And tale of that was got by Eogan and they were attacked by his forces, and Domnall Ua Domnaill, namely, one who was to be king of Tir-Conaill, was slain by them along with other persons that are not mentioned here. And Niall Ua Domnaill escaped from them in a Saxon ship that was in the harbour at that time. And Eogan returned [in triumph] on that occasion to the same Drobhais, and so forth.—Tadhg, son [1420]

And Cairpre was burned by them on that expedition. Great rout was inflicted on them in Sligech by Eogan, son of Concobur, and by Toirdelbach Carrach Ua Concobuir and by Ua Ruairc. Six of the host were slain by them in that rout. The host went thence into Tir-Oilella and great destruction was committed by them there. And they were a night in the fort of Loch-derga[i]n, and went after that through the Breifni, by leave of Ua Ruairc, to their houses.—Mac Maghnusa Mag Uidhir, namely, Concobur, son of Gilla-Patraig, son of Matthew, son of Magnus, to wit, a rich, charitable man, died this year on the 7th of the Ides [9th] of July.  1425. The Mortimer came to Ireland this year : namely, the Earl of March and many of the Saxons came with him. And it is that Earl¹ had the guardianship of the king of the Saxons and of the greater part of France¹ and of all the Foreigners of Ireland. For the king² of the Saxons was left a child, and it is the Earl of March that had his^{1a} protection and his guardianship. Now, there went many of the magnates of Ireland to the house of that Earl and came therefrom in great concord and honour. Moreover, the magnates of the Ulster Province went to the house of that Earl : namely, Ua Neill and Eogan Ua Neill and Nechtain Ua Domnaill and Mac-Ui-Neill-buidhe, that is, namely, chief of Tir-Briuin, died this year.—Aedh Mag Uidhir junior was slain by the sons of Donchadh Mag Samradhain the Freckled in the house of Mac Gilla-Finnein this year. [1428]

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, [23rd of the moon,] A.D. 1429. Ua Flannaga[i]n of Tuath-ratha, namely, Gilla-Isu, was slain this year by the sons of Aedh Mag Uidhir in his own house, on a night incursion.—Great war arose this year between Ua Ruairc, namely, Tadhg and Ua Raighilligh, namely, Eogan. And the sons of Mathgamain Ua Raighilligh and the Foreigners of Meath arose against Ua Raighilligh and the town of Ua Raighilligh was burned by them. Ua Raighilligh brought Ua Neill to him and the Oirgialla and Fir-Manach. And their predatory band proceeded for him with Ua Neill and with those magnates to Achadh-cille-moire¹. Ua Ruairc and the sons of Mathgamain² and the Baron of Delvin and Mac Caba came, [with] a large host, [in opposition] to them on Achadh-cille-moire. The two hosts went against each other on that Field. Ua Neill and his sons and his gallowglasses and the Fir-Manach and Ua Raighilligh and his kinsmen advanced to them then courageously, prosperously and the defeat of Achadh-cille-moire was inflicted on them [i.e. the enemy]. And the Baron of Delvin was taken prisoner there and Mac Caba and Henry Mac Caba and Diarmaid Ua Ruairc and other persons that are not reckoned here were [either] captured or³ slain there. Ua Neill and those magnates went triumphantly to their homes on that occasion.—Donnchadh Mac Gille-Finnein died on the 2nd of the Kalends of December [Nov. 30]. [1429]

Blind[-eye], son of Mag Samradhain, that betrayed him and Brian himself and a multitude of his people fell the same day by John, in expiation of their evil proceeding.
And John was there [with] but seven and Brian was [there with] two score, or three score. Mag Uidhir, namely, Thomas, son of Thomas, went [with] a large host into Tellach-Eathach to avenge his kinsman upon them.
The country was therefore successfully harried and burned
by him and the town of Mag Samradhain³ and the donjons of the country likewise were burned by him on that occasion. And many of the magnates of the country were slain by Mag Uidhir on that occasion. Mag Uidhir

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, [26th of the moon,] A.D. [1432 B.] 1432. Ua Neill was slain this year by the Oirecht-Ui-Cathain, namely, between the two Nativities [Dec. 25-Jan. 6] precisely: to wit, Domnall, son of Henry Ua Neill. [Thus] namely [it happened]: he went to them into their own country; Domnall Ua Catha[i]n and Aibne Ua Catha[i]n, that is, the two sons of Diarmait Ua Cathain, seized a house upon Ua Neill, and he, with many of his people, was slain there on that occasion. Eogan, son of Niall Ua Neill junior, was made king in the Province [of Ulster] unanimously. And he went to Tulach-oc and was crowned on the flag-stone of the kings there by the will of God and men, bishops and ollams.—Great, frequent preys and destruction of people were committed by Maghnus Mag Mathgamna on the Foreigners this year, and he carried with him the heads of the Foreigners and enemies to the Lurgan, namely, to the fortress of Maghnus. And those heads were placed upon the palisade of the town, so that it was very horrible to the [bardic] bands and to the pilgrims of Ireland to behold the palisade of the town of Maghnus, for the amount of heads of his foes and of his enemies that was thereon.

(B)

namely, to his own town. And there it was enough of terror and loathing to the [bardic] bands and to the pilgrims of Ireland to behold the palisade of the town of Maghnus, with the great number of the heads of foes and enemies thereon.

² Despite them.—Literally, upon them.

A conference was held by Ua Neill, namely, by Eogan, at Narrow-Water with the sons of Domnall, son of Muir-certach Ua Conchobuir. Ua Domnaill placed his people to guard the Narrow, lest¹ the conferring parties should meet each other. Ua Neill and Mag Uidhir [nevertheless] went to the Narrow. The people of Ua Domnaill met them, and a discharge of arrows took place between them. The Fir-Manach [however] landed despite them:² [but] the rout of Mibolg was put upon them, and many persons of them were wounded and slain. [Still] the sons of Domnall went that day to where Ua Neill was and placed³ their hands in his hand, and so on.—Domnall Ua Neill, namely, son of Eogan, son of Niall Ua Neill junior, died of glandular disease at the end of a fortnight after the feast of [St.] Patrick this year: to wit, one fit to be king of Ulster for hospitality and for prowess [was] he.—Eogan, son of Mag Carthaigh the Grey, went on a raid against Kinsale. Eogan was slain by the folk of Kinsale with one cast of a javelin, and so on.—Great war [arose] this year between Ua Neill and Ua Domnaill. The son of Ua Neill, namely, Henry, went to Sligech to meet [and secure the aid of] the sons of Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Conchobuir. Ua Domnaill and Ua Ruairc and the sons of Aedh Mag Uidhir were on the watch before them for the space of the five weeks that Henry was in the West. Henry and the Carbrians^{3a} went upon Magh-eine. Mag Uidhir, namely, Thomas junior, went [with] a fleet to Narrow-Water to meet Henry and the Carbrians, and they came safe to his house on that occasion.—A great hosting was made by [the] Ua Neill and by Mag Uidhir and by Mac-Ui-Neill-buidhe into Cenel-Moen to face Ua Domnaill. Slaughters⁴ numerous and burnings extensive were done by them upon Tir-Conaill and the town of Ua

Domnaill and the town of Nechtain^{4a} were burned by them, [1432] and many corn-fields were burned by them. And they were from the feast of [Holy] Cross⁵ to Lammas on that expedition, and went to their house[s] without making peace, and so on.—Mag Mathgamna, namely, Brian, son of Ardghal, went against Ua Neill and against his own kinsmen, that is, Rughraidhe and Maghnus. Mag Mathgamna went with his raiding-party to the Foreign settlement. The host of the Foreigners mustered and went with Mag Mathgamna into Oirgialla. And Dairtraighi of Con-inis was burned by them, and they went on that expedition to the Plain of Ard-Macha, and the valuables of Ard-Macha were taken from out the temples by them and burned on the green of the town. Large offerings were extorted from the elders of the town by them for the sake of its not being burned. The Foreigners and Mag Mathgamna went to their houses [in triumph] on that occasion.—The bishop of Clochar died this year, namely, Art Mac Cathmail,⁶ on the day of [St.] Lawrence precisely [Aug. 14]: to wit, a man of hospitality and piety, and who kept a guest-house for poor and for [bardic] bands, and for pilgrims. And he departed with victory from world and from demon, and so on.—Mael [-Sh]echlain Mac Conmara the Ui-Mainian,⁷ namely, chief of Clann-Cuilein, died.—Tadhg Mac Mathgamna, namely, one destined to be king of Corco-baiscinn, died.—Maelmordha Ua Raighilligh junior died.—A host of Foreigners came into Eili-Ui-Cerbaill and the castle of Baile-an-britaigh and the castle of Cluain-Ui-Cinaith were burned and broken by them on that expedition and so on.—A great marvel took place in Fir-manach this year: to wit, a goat gave 1433. Great war arose between Mag Raghnaill of the Plain,¹ namely, Concobur and the sons of Mael[-Sh]eclainn Mag Raghnaill this year. The sons of Mael-Sechlainn brought the sons of Mathgamain Mac Caba to [aid] them for stipend and they [all] went on the offensive into the Plain and the town of Cathal Mag Raghnaill was burned by them. A large pursuing party overtook them in leaving it. The sons of Mathgamain and their gallowglasses remained in the rear of the[ir] force. The large pursuing party overtook them without the knowledge of the[ir] force. Three of the sons of Mathgamain² were slain that day and one man, namely, Eogan, their elder brother, was taken prisoner when he was half dead. Rossa and Donchadh and Brian were [the brothers] slain, with multitudes of their people along with them. A week, namely, before the feast of [Holy] Cross that[happened]. [of every one] in Ireland for the excellence of the family of father and mother—namely, Una, daughter of John Ua Raighilligh, [was] their mother—and for the excellence of their vigour and their hospitality and their prowess and their loyalty unto that day. The fifth son of them escaped safe that day, namely, Toirdelbach the Freckled and so on.—Great war [arose] between Ua Neill and Ua Domnaill, that is, Niall the Rough, son of Toirdelbach. Ua Neill and Eogan³ went [with] a large host in pursuit of Ua Domnaill and Mac Uibilin into the Dubh-trian. Mac Domnaill of Scotland came [with] a numerous fleet to Ireland into the muster of Ua Neill to aid him. Ua Domnaill and Mac Uibilin and Robert Savage were pursued by them into the Dubh-trian and their cattle were all wrested from them and killed by the Scotch. Very great slaughter and loss of men were inflicted by them on Mac Uibilin, so that only a few of his people escaped with him from the Dubh-trian: the amount that escaped, they fell at the river-pass of the New Castle. Ua Neill and Henry, namely, the son of Ua Neill and Mac Domnaill of Scotland went with their hosts to Ard-glas and it was burned by them on that expedition. Mac Domnaill and his host went in their ships from Ard-glas to Inis-Eogain and Ua Neill [went] by land to aid him, to harry Tir-Conaill. Nechtain Ua Domnaill and the daughter of Ua Concobuir Faly, that is, the wife of Ua Domnaill and the [Tir-]Conallian sons of [sub-]kings also went into conference with them at Inis-Eogain and peace was made between them without permission from Ua Domnaill. [For] Ua Domnaill and Mac Uibhilin went to the Foreign settlement of Meath and made a pact with them against Ua Neill. And the deputy⁴ of the king took a large host with them to the Plain of Ard-Macha and they went against the Monastery of Poor Friars⁵ in Ard-Macha. [But] they returned to their houses on that

⁷ Two invitations.—“It was shee that twice in one yeare proclaimed to and commonly invited (that is, in the dark days of the yeare) to wit, on the feast day of Da Sinchell [Mar. 28] in Killaichy [Kil-leigh, King's co.] all persons both Irish and Scotish, or rather Albians, to two generall feasts of bestowing
both meate and moneyes, with all other manner of guifts: wherinto gathered to receue gifts the matter of two thousand and seauen hundred persons, besides gamesters and poore men, as it was recorded in a roll to that purpose. And that account was made thus, ut vidimus (viz.): the cheiftaine of each famelie of the learned Irish

was by Gilla - na - naomh Mac Aegan's hand written in that roll
—the chiefe judg to O'Conner [Faly]—and his adherents and kinsmen, so that the aforesaid number of 2,700 was listed in that roll with the arts of dan, or poetry, musick and antiquitie. And Mae-lyn O'Maelconry, one of the chiefe learned of Connaght, was the first written in that roll and first payed and dieted, or set to sup[p]er, and those of his name after him. And so forth, every one, as he was payed, he was written in that roll, for feare of mistake, and sett
downe to eate afterwards.

And Margarett on the garretts
of the great church of Da Sinceall, clad in cloath of gold, her deerest occasion without obtaining sway. Mac Uibilin was billeted [1433] by the Foreigners of the Plain of Oirgialla after his expulsion by Ua Neill. Ua Domnaill went around Meath westwards to Ath-luain and went thence into Ui-Maine. A night march was made by him across the Plain⁶, to meet Mac Diarmata of Magh-Luirg and thence to meet Ua Ruairc. Ua Ruairc escorted him over beyond the Erne. Ua Neill and Mag Uidhir went to Narrow-Water to meet Ua Domnaill and peace was made with him.—Two general invitations⁷ were given this year by Margaret, daughter of Ua Cerbaill, namely, wife of the Calbach Ua Concobuir, king of Offaly, to the [bardic] bands of Ireland and to [their] retinues and so forth.—Mac Maghnusa Mag Uidhir, namely, Cathal Mor⁸ Mac Maghnusa (son of the Tawny Gillie⁹), died this year, the day of the feast of [St.] Michael [Sep. 29] precisely: to wit, a man who kept a general guest-house for [bardic] bands and for pilgrims and for [bardic] retinues of Ireland and Scotland, so that the fame of that Cathal filled Ireland and Scotland. And his son, namely, Catha junior, was chosen in his place by Ua Neill and by Mag friends about her, her clergy and judges too, Calwagh [her husband] himself being on horseback by the church's outward side, to the end that all things might be done orderly and each one served successively. And, first of all, she gave two chalices of gold as offerings that day on the altar of God Almighty and she also caused to nurse, or foster, two young orphans. . .

As she gave the second inviting proclamation (to every one that came not that day) on the feast day of the Assumption of our blessed Lady Mary in Harvest [Aug. 15] at, or in, Rath-imayn [Rathangan, King's co.]. And so we have been informed that that second day . . . was nothing inferior to the first," M. F. (= Annals of Ireland, 1443-68, translated by Duaid Mac Firbis: Miscel. Ir. Arch. Soc. I.) p. 227-8.

Afterwards, Ua Domnaill and his son, that is, Toirdelbach, namely, future king of Tir-Conaill and Mac Cathmail went in search of chattel the same day. The horse-host of the Foreigners met them and an encounter was mutually given by them and Ua Domnaill was taken prisoner³ by the Foreigners that day and Mac Cathmail and Toirdelbach Ua Domnaill and Aedh, son of the bishop⁴ Mac Cathmail, were slain by them.  1435. Ua Neill went [with] a host into Fir-Manach this year and encampment was taken by him on Craebh-Ui-Fhuadachain and he was three nights there.¹ The Fir-Manach sent their moveables over Lough [Erne] westwards. And they had no vessels, but the solid ice on the Lough [to carry them]. And all their cows and their pack-horses went upon the Lough westwards. Mag Uidhir mustered a large host against Ua Neill, but peace was made between them at the end and Mag Uidhir went to meet Ua Neill. Ua Neill went from that into Tir-Conaill, to harry it. Great burnings were done by them on that expedition and Jchn, son of Domnall Ua Domnaill, was slain by them with one shot of an arrow. Ua Neill went to his house [in triumph] on that occasion.—Domnall, son of Eogan Mag Carthaigh, namely, the best general protector that was in Ireland in his time, fell by Tadhg, son of Cormac, son of Diarmait Mag Carthaigh.—The Countess of Desmond died this year: namely, the daughter of Mac William de Burgh, that is, the wife of Earl James.²—Donn, son of Cu-Connacht Mag Uidhir, died this year after victory of penance: to wit, a man of hospitality and prowess. And he had gone into the Order of Canons of Cluain-eois, after laying aside the world for love of the Lord, and so on.—Alliance of war was made by Brian Ua Neill junior and by Nechtain Ua Domnaill against Ua Neill (namely, Eogan) and his sons. Ua Neill, with his sons (namely, Henry and Aedh) leading the foraying-band, went into Cenel-Moen to encounter Brian and Nechtain. The camp of Ua Neill was formed in the Rasa that time. When Nechtain and Brian junior heard that, they assembled their host into one place to deliver a camp assault upon Ua Neill and went forward, until they reached the Rasa. Ua Neill was put out from his camp, in his despite, by them that night and the camp was occupied by themselves that³ night in the Rasa. Ua Neill and his sons and Mac Domnall the Gallowglass proceeded to deliberate what they should do that night. This is the counsel they adopted: ⁴ namely, to deliver a camp assault upon the [hostile] host. Henry Ua Neill made good discourse to Mac Domnaill and to his own kinsmen and to his followers: namely, that they should have good courage against their enemies. Not blackening of night and not blanching of visage did the nobles act at that incentive and they marched forward afterwards quietly, silently, until they reached the camp. Howbeit, Henry Ua Neill went in front of them courageously, victoriously and powerfully, full splendidly, until they reached the very centre of their enemies. But Mac Domnaill the Gallowglass and Mac Suibne of Fanad fell in with each other then. And heroes were hacking at one another⁵ on every side. Moreover, the friends and the enemies recognised not each other in that contest, through darkness of the night and through thickness of the heroic force. Howbeit, balls of fire leaped from the helmets of the champions and from the breast-plates of the heroes. Now, Aedh Ua Neill and Brian Ua Neill junior chanced to meet each other in that fray. Aedh gave a stroke of a javelin to Brian, so that he seriously injured him. Brian and Nechtain escaped that night and their gallowglasses were left [behind] by them after that party. Still, knowledge of their defection was not had by portion of them that night. When Mac Suibne got tidings of Nechtain and Brian junior having abandoned himself, this is the counsel he adopted:⁴ [himself] to cover the rear⁶ and to escape without the knowledge of Ua Neill. Henry and his kinsmen got knowledge of that and Mac Suibne was pursued by them and the defeat of Sliab-truim was inflicted on them. Mac Suibne himself was taken prisoner there, with a multitude of his people. Ua Neill on that occasion [went home] triumphantly, and so on.

And the end of it was: the camp was abandoned to Ua Neill and to his sons and the force that were in it fled and left many of their people [slain.] And Mac Suibne was taken prisoner, with many others with him, on the morrow. And Ua Neill went triumphantly, battle-victoriously to his house on that occasion.)

Nechtain Ua Domnaill gave the castle of Ath-senaigh to Brian Ua Neill junior for alliance of war against Ua Neill. Brian, however, failed Nechtain and went to Ua Neill again and [his] wards⁷ were left in the castle of Ath-senaigh.—Ua Neill⁸ took Brian Ua Neill junior prisoner this year and a hand and foot were taken off him and two sons of Brian (namely, Aedh [and . . .]) were mutilated by him also and so on.—Hubert, son of William Ua Ferghail, namely, an eminent leader, was killed this year by Meyler, son of Hubert⁹ and so on.—Mag Craith, of the Termon of [St.] Dabeog, died this year: namely, of [St.] Berach² of this year. And [it happened thus:] Domnall came into the Breifni of Ua Raighilligh—and he had with him there but the crew of one cot [made up] of the grandsons of David Mag Uidhir and of other persons—on his way to the residence of Henry Ua Neill, being in discord with his own kinsmen, namely, with Thomas junior, king of Fir-Manach and with Philip, that is, the tanist of the territory. And they proceeded from the Loch eastwards through Barr-na-cuile and Donn and the sons of Art fell in with them and slew Domnall then with arrows. And he was³ that night on the plain and was buried on the morrow in the monastery of Lis-gabail.—

fratricide. And himself went into Tellach-Dunchadha and was warring upon Edmond Mag Uidhir and upon Donchadh Mag Uidhir. And Edmond and Donchadh went to a place of meeting with Donchadh of Tellach-Dunchadha and peace was made by them with each other.
And Edmond made Donchadh of Tellach-Dunchadha prisoner in Gabail-liuin and took him with him to Achadhurchaire and deprived him of a foot and hand in punishment of his own wicked proceeding, namely, the killing of Cathal Mag Uidhir. Now, that retribution which Edmond wrought in satisfaction of that fratricide which Donchadh of Tellach-Dunchadha wrought was lauded

³ Went, etc.—The (less credible) account in M. F. (p. 237) and the F. M. omits the defection of the custodians and states that the besiegers burned the door and set fire to the stairs of the castle. Whereupon, the captive begged to be loosed from his fetters, saying it were more fitting to die with his limbs free. Believing that he had no chance of escape, the keeper, in compassion, set him free and Domnall acted as set forth in the text.

Dochartaigh, that is, the party guarding Domnall, proved false to Ua Dochartaigh: namely, made himself prisoner and liberated Domnall. When Ua Domnaill, that is, Rughraidhe, learned that Domnall was captured by Ua Dochartaigh, he mustered a host to him and went and surrounded¹ the castle of Inis.² And the other Ua Domnaill, namely, Domnall, was safe therein and Ua Dochartaigh in custody therein with his own people and with Domnall. Rughraidhe and Mac Uibilin were attacking the castle against Domnall. Now, Domnall went³ on the top of the castle and cast a stone forth therefrom (on the Nones [7th] of April) on Ua Domnaill (namely, Rughraidhe) and killed him with that cast. And he came forth himself afterwards with victory of overthrow and pursued the [besieging] host and wrested great spoil from them. And himself took Tir-Conaill in its entirety from that out and so on.—Domnall, son of John Ua Raighilligh (namely, Domnall Ua Raghilligh the Fair), died this year.—Lasairfina, daughter of Mac Maghnusa, namely, daughter of Cathal junior, son of Cathal Mor, wife of Ua Fialain, that is, of John, son of Eogan Ua Fialain, to wit, a charitable, well-mannered woman, died on the 6th of the Ides [8th] of June.—John⁴ Mac Amhlaim the Tawny, Master) Mac-gilla-chalma, died this year, namely, on [1455] the 3rd of the Ides [11th] of April, [A.D.] 1455.

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, [21st of the moon,] A.D. [1456 B.] 1456. A great tale in Ireland this year: to wit, Ua Neill died; that is, Eogan,¹ son of Niall junior, son of Niall Mor, namely, father of Henry (that is, [the] Ua Neill).

Great war arose between Ua Neill and the king of Tir-Conaill, namely, Domnall, son of Niall Ua Domnaill. O'Neill,² namely, Henry and Mag Uidhir went [with] a large host into Inis-Eogain and a fortified position was taken by them a short distance from Cuil-mic-an-trein.³

Ua Domnaill and Aedh Ua Domnaill the Red, namely, brother of Ua Domnaill and Mac Suibne of Fanad went on three horses from their own host to bring [back] tidings of Ua Neill with them and came on the green of Cuil-mic-an-trein. The sons of Ua Neill, namely, Toirdelbach the Red, and Ruaidhri, had gone that time a short distance from the castle. And they saw the three horsemen and pursued

² Hostile meeting. — Literally, attack of meeting.

³ Gort-an-fedain.—See 1450, note
9, supra.

Great war [arose] this year between Mag Uidhir, namely, king of Fir-Manach and Ua Ruairc, namely, Lochlann, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc. Mag Uidhir and Ua Ruairc appointed a meeting with each other opposite Ath-Conaill. Mag Uidhir and Brian, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, went [with] a few people—that is, six horsemen and three score footmen—to meet Ua Ruairc. When Ua Ruairc and the Tellach-Eathach and Tellach-Dunchadha learned that Mag Uidhir was [accompanied by only] a small force, they gave him a hostile meeting.² When Mag Uidhir saw the deceit practised on him, he went forward to Gort-an-fedain.³ There a battalion of kern and a battalion of gallowglasses of the people of Ua Ruairc overtook him. Then Mag Uidhir and Brian Mag Uidhir, [with] the six that were on horses and the three score kern, turned on them and routed the people of Ua Ruairc spiritedly, felicitously on that occasion and inflicted the defeat of Ath-Conaill and of the Graine—namely, a river that is between Fir-Manach and the Breifne—upon them. Mag Uidhir and his people then returned with spoils joyfully. And the kern of Mag Uidhir carried with them sixteen heads of the nobles of the people of Ua Ruairc to the town of Mag Uidhir and they were placed on the palisade of the court-yard of Mag Uidhir and so on.

Great war [arose this] year between Mag Uidhir, namely, Thomas and Ua Ruairc, namely, Lochlann, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc. Great defeat was inflicted upon Ua Ruairc and upon Teallach-Eathach and upon Teallach-Dunchadha by Mag Uidhir and by Brian, son of Philip Mag Uidhir: namely, the defeat of the Graine, a place where a great multitude of them were [either] slain or drowned, so that the people of Ua Ruairc carried with them sixteen of the heads of their enemies to the town of Mag Uidhir and placed them on the palisade of the court-yard in sight of the Men of Ireland and so on.

 1460. Mag Samradhain, namely, Eogan Mag Samradhain, died this year.—Thomas Nugent, namely, son of William Nugent, to wit, a happy, prosperous Foreign youth, died this year.—The bishop¹ Ua Briain, namely, bishop of Cell-da-lua, was killed by Brian of the Fleet,² son of Donchadh, son of Mathgamain Ua Briain, in the Island³ of Cluain-ramfhoda,⁴ this year.—Mac Caba died⁵ this year: to wit, Henry Mac Caba, namely, a Constable eminent for generosity and for prowess and for devotion. And full was Ireland [of the fame] of his goodness and so on.—Great defeat was inflicted on the Foreigners this year by Ua Concobuir Faly, namely, Conn, son of the Calbach, wherein fell the baron of Galtrim and many others of the Foreigners that are not reckoned here.—Great defeat was inflicted on Ua Raighilligh by the Foreigners this year and there were slain in it, on the 3rd of the Nones [3rd] of September, Ua Raighilligh (namely, John) and Aedh Ua Raighilligh and Eogan Blind[-eye], son of Mathgamain Mac Caba. And there came not since [the death⁶ of] Cathal Red-hand Ua Conchobhair a tale respecting a Connacian that was greater than that tale, namely, [respecting] John, son of Eogan, son of Philip, son of Gilla-Isa Ua Raighilligh the Red. And Ireland all was full of grief for that king of the two Breifni and the [bardic] bands and pilgrims and poor mendicants of Ireland were grieved after him and after his brother, namely, Aedh Ua Raighilligh.

Aedh Ua Domnaill the Red and his brothers, namely, Eogan and Conn, went from Tir-Aedha beyond the Mountain¹ eastwards into Tir-Conaill. Ua Domnaill, namely, Toirdelbach the Carbrian, son of Nechtain Ua Domnaill, and his brothers met them and an attack was given to each other by them. Aedh the Red and his brothers defeated Ua Domnaill and he was taken by them. And his brother, namely, Maghnus Ua Domnaill, was slain on that expedition by them. And they deprived Ua Domnaill himself of a foot and hand.² Aedh the Red was made king over Tir-Conaill after that by Ua Neill and by the [religious] Superiors of Tir-Conaill unanimously, by will of God and of men and so on.

Tripartite is: "He went after that [from Mullaghshree, near Ballyshannon] into the territory of Eogan, son of Niall [of the Nine Hostages], over Bernas of Tir-Aedha, into Magh-Itha" (P. II.). Cf. Book of Rights, pp. 18, 34.

² Deprived of a foot and hand.—Thereby he became incapacitated to reign. For the manner in which the mutilation is glossed over by the Four Masters, see O'Donovan, iv. 1011.

And Domnall, son of the bishop Mac Domnaill, [it was] that [mortally] struck him with one stroke of a sword, namely, A.D. 1465, otherwise, 1465[4 ?].²—Treachery was done by Domnall,³ son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc, on Mac Con[Sh]nama this year: to

of Spring in the sixth entry, it may be inferred that the item was copied from a Chronicle wherein the A.D. began with March 25 (not Jan. 1). This, however, unless (which is not unlikely) the alternative date was added by the transcriber, will not explain the alias of the final entry. The two excerpts are manifestly drawn from the same source.

The corresponding place in the Book of Armagh is : Venit vero sanctus per Doim [Tuaim] in regiones Tuirtri, ad Collunt [Slieve-Gallion] Patricii (fol. 15c). The place intended is, in all probability, Toome Bridge on the Lower Bann (Adamnan, p. 53).

they were a while at the Coill-ichtarach,¹² destroying crops and burning houses. And they went across at the Pass at the mouth of Tuam¹³ and went through the Fidhbadh and were a night on the Riasc-mor and went from that to Edan-dubcairgi,¹⁴ namely, to the town of Conn, son of Aedh the Tawny, and were two nights there. And Henry,¹⁵ son of Brian Ua Neill the Freckled and Feidhlim[idh] grandson of [Aedh] Ua Neill¹⁶ the Tawny and Brian, son of Niall [Ua Neill] the Foreign, went to submit to Ua Neill. And obedience and homage was got by him from them all and peace was established by him between them and Mac Uibillin. And Ua Neill went from that into the [Island of] Rinn-Sibhne and was there for a space, burning crops and houses. [1470]

(B)¹⁷

And the son of Aedh the Tawny, namely, Brian, went¹⁸ into the Ard of Ulidia and large preys were carried off by him around the host into the Fidhbadh. Ua Neill proceeded with Mac Uibillin into the Ard of Ulidia and went¹⁹ from that to his own town. Conn, son of Aedh the Tawny and the sons of Art Ua Neill and the sept of Henry went into Tir-Eogain and great forays were done by them on the sons of Feidhlimidh Ua Neill. And he returned to his own town from that circuit with triumph of victory and so on.

¹⁸ Went, etc.—It being futile to give battle to the superior forces of the invaders, Brian went before them and brought all the cattle of Ard by a circuitous route into Clannaboy. Meanwhile, Conn proceeded to reinstate the sons of Art (cf. the fourth entry) and raid a territory under the protection of O'Neill.

¹⁹ Went, etc.—As he made no attempt to assist or avenge his kinsman and vassal, it may be concluded that he crossed the Upper Bann and proceeded straight to Dungannon.

The castle of the Oghmagh was taken this year by Ua Neill, namely, by Henry, son of Eogan. And it is thus it was taken: to wit, an encounter was given by the sons of Ua Neill and by the sons of Art to each other; in the beginning of the Winter, as narrated before here.¹ And the sons of Art were defeated and two sons of Art and many others with them were slain therein. And the sons of Ua Neill went from that round the castle and Ua Neill came to them. And Sile, daughter of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough, wife of Niall, son of Art Ua Neill, was in the castle, Niall himself and the other part of his kinsmen having gone to join Ua Domnaill and the Conallians. And Ua Neill was beneath the castle from the beginning of Winter to the end of Spring. The sons of Art [then] submitted to Ua Neill and the castle was given to him and Ua Neill gave it to his own son, namely, to Conn and he himself went to his house with triumph of victory and rout and so on.—A great hosting [was made] this year by Mac William² de Burgh into the Lower [northern] part of Connacht, to aid the son³ of Brian Ua Conchobuir and they went against the castle⁴ of Sligech and the sons of Eogan Ua Conchobuir were [gone] to join Ua Domnaill, but^{4a} Do-anall, son of Eogan, went into the castle. And the fortification of the door was broken down by Mac William and [then] peace was made by them.—Trian-Conghail⁵ was all [re-]taken

The son of Savage and Feidhlim[idh], grandson of Ua Neill, were taken by Conn, son of Aedh the Tawny and the son of Savage escaped from him after that.—A great hosting was made this year by Ua Domnaill, namely, by Aedh the Red, son of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough, to rescue Brian, son of Feidhlimidh Ua Raighilligh, from [the] Ua Raighilligh. And he went to Bel-atha-Conaill and peace was made by him with Ua Raighilligh then. And he went from that into the Anghaile to aid the sons of Irial Ua Fergail, who were friends to him. And he obtained power there then and went from that into Offaly, to war on the Foreigners, in eric of his father who fell ⁵ by the Foreigners before that. And much of Meath was destroyed by him and the castle-town ⁶ of Delvin was burned by them and peace was made by him with the Foreigners after that. The Clann-Colmain and Calraighi rose against them in the Garb-esgir and [Foreign] gallow-glasses and Irish were rescued ⁷ from them then and Ua Domnaill and Toirdelbach Mag Uidhir turned on the pursuing party, on the west side of the town ⁸ of Mag Amhalghaidh and defeated the full muster of those territories and many of their people were forced from them along with the son of Mag Amhalghaidh. And they got not one shot from the pursuing party from that out.  1485. Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Red, son of Rughruidhe, son of Ardghal Mag Mathgamna, was made king over Oirghialla this year.—The town of Cu-Uladh, son of Aedh Ua Neill, was burned this year by Brian, son of Eogan Ua Neill, namely, Brian, of the Wood. The town and land of that same Brian were burned on the morrow by that same Cu-Uladh and by the sons of Redmond, son of Rughruidhe Mag Mathgamna, namely, Glaisne and Brian and by the son of that Mag Mathgamna junior, namely, by Gilla-Patraig. And Cu-Uladh Mac Cernaighi, namely, a person [of] good [counsel in] an assembly, was slain by them there and so on.—Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Tawny, son of Brian Ua Neill the Freckled, went on a raid into Leth-Cathail and was overtaken there and slain with one thrust of a javelin: to wit, the youth who was best in hospitality and leadership that was in Trian-Conghail at that time.—Oliver, son of Christopher Plunket, died this year.—The descendants of Maelmordha of the Mullach were expelled from their own district and the sons of Glaisne Ua Raighilligh built a castle in their land. And, on their [the sons] settling on them, those drew the Earl of Kildare, namely, Gerald, son of Earl Thomas, on the sons of Glaisne and 15 herds of cows were wrested from them in a raid and Gilla-Isa, son of Glaisne, was taken in it.—Mac William of Clann-Ricaird, namely, Ulick, rested in a good old age and his son, namely, another Ulick, was installed in his place. And that Ulick junior went [with] a host into Munster and part of the Roche Country was burned by him.—Ua Concobuir of Kerry and his wife and Ua Concobuir of Corcumruadh and Ua Concobuir the Brown, namely, Eogan Blind[-eye], son of Feidhlimidh Snub-nose, son of Toirdelbach junior, son of Aedh, son of Toirdelbach, son of Aedh, son of Eogan; the Barrymore; Ua Suillabhain of

² Came not.—Perhaps for the same reason as in the case of the Brief appointing John, bishop of Limerick, sent by him from the Curia to Courcey, whom he named his Vicar General to take possession: casu fortuito, Littere ipse, simul cum nuncio, in mari sub-

Beirre, namely, Domnall—all these rested this year.—A [1485]
 Friar Minor in the Courcey Country in Munster, namely, Edmund Courcey¹—and he [was] a Doctor in Divinity—
 went into possession of the bishopric of Clochar this year;
 but his Letters came not² from Rome to him this time.—
 Great war between Ua Neill, namely, Conn and Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red and the sons of Art Ua Neill, namely, Niall and his brothers, [were] on the side of Ua Domnaill and the sons of Nechtain Ua Domnaill, namely, Eignechan and his brothers, on the side of Ua Neill, on that war.—Two, or three, of the people of Eogan, son of Brian Carrach Ua Neill, were killed by a bolt of fire.
 That Eogan, son of Brian, namely, a person of the people of Ua Neill [of] good [counsel in] an assembly, slipped on snow, in going from the town of Ua Neill³ to his own house and died of it.—Ua Baighill, namely, Toirdelbach, put his lordship from him this year and his son, namely, Niall, took his place.—Feidlimidh, son of Glaisne, son of Concobur Ua Raighilligh, died of the plague after the feast of [Holy] Cross in Harvest.⁴—Ua Raighilligh, namely, Toirdelbach, son of John, son of Eogan, went [with] a great host into Tellach-Eathach the Tuesday [Sep. 27] before Michaelmas and the town of Mag Samradhain,⁵ namely, the town of Feidhlimidh, son of Thomas, son of Ferghal, was burned by him and the town of his brother, namely, of Donchadh, was burned by him. Mag

John, son of Philip, son of Thomas Mag Uidhir junior, made an incursion and raid into Midhbolg on the sons of Donchadh, son of Aedh Mag Uidhir and on the sons of Mag Ualghairg. In the week of Michaelmas that [was done].

(B)

A raid was made by the sons of Toirdelbach Mag Uidhir and by the junior sons of Edmond Mag Uidhir on Domnall, son of Gilla-Padraig, son of Edmond Mag Uidhir. And Domnall himself [etc., as in A].

Ua Neill, namely, Conn, son of Henry, went [with] a large host into Tir-Conaill after Michaelmas and great injuries were done in Tir-Aedha by him and the town of Mac-an-baird⁷ (namely, Aedh) was burned by Ragnall Mac Domnaill; namely, a leader of gallowglasses of the people of Ua Neill [was] that Ragnall. And peace was made by Ua Neill and by Ua Domnaill with each other that time. And Brian the Dark, son of Eogan Ua Again, was slain by Niall, son of Art Ua Neill, on that expedition.—Feidhlimidh, son of Donchadh Mag Uidhir, was wounded and taken and Donchadh junior, his kinsman, in the same way, by Mac Gilla-ruaidh (namely, Brian) and by two sons of Edmond Mag Uidhir, namely, Aedh and Gilla-Isu. And Gilla-Padraig, son of Maghnus, son of Domnall Ua Mailigein the Tall and Cathal Ua Timain
the Tawny, son of Aedh the Left-handed, were slain there by them. The son of John Mac Gilla-ruaidh (namely, Gilla-Padraig) was slain after that on a night incursion
by that Feidhlimidh, son of Donchadh and by the Muintir-Maelagain and by Muintir-Timain and so on.—The son of Ua Concobuir Faly, namely, Art, son of Conn, son of the Calbach—one that was called Art an bo'gain⁸—

⁶Synod.—Literally, Chapter: a proof that the entry was copied from a monastic register.

⁷Octavian.—A Florentine; archbishop, 1480–1513 (infra). See Ware, p. 88–9.

⁸The 5th of. — Omitted by O'Donovan (iv. 1139), with the result that in the published accounts the date of the Synod is July 15.

⁹Endeavouring.—To secure the aid of members of the Synod in raising a loan, or perfecting a bond, to release the Letters, which were held as security by the merchants who, in the absence of the bishop sons of Ir Mag Raghnaill against the sons of Mail[-Sh]-echlainn Mag Raghnaill. And Mail[-Sh]echlainn junior was slain by the sons of Mail[-Sh]echlainn on the Nones [7th] of July and two sons of Gilla-Eoin, namely, Ruaidhri and Alun and some others were slain with him there. And a person of the people of the sons of Ua Ruairc [of] good [counsel in] an assembly, namely, William the Black, son of Brian, son of John Mac Muiredhaigh, was slain the same day.—Mag Raghnaill, chief of Muintir-Eoluis, namely, Tadhg, son of Cathal, son of Cathal Mag Raghnaill the Red, died on the 17th of the Kalends of April [Mar. 16].—A general Synod⁶ [was held] in Droiched-atha by the archbishop of Ard-Macha, namely, Octavian⁷ the Italian and the bishops and clergy of the North of Ireland, on the 5th of⁸ the Ides [11th] of July. Domnall Ua Fallamhain, namely, Friar Minor of [Stricter] Observance and the preacher that did most service to Irishmen since Patrick was in Ireland, was at that Synod, endeavouring⁹ to release his Letters for the bishopric of Derry, which had been granted¹⁰ to him that time from Rome.—Eight and twenty townlands of the Foreign settlement of the plain of Oirghialla were burned by Mag Mathgamna, namely, by Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Red, son of Rughradh, in the Summer of this year.—Mail[-Sh]echlainn and Ruaidhri, two sons of Mac Donnchaidh of Tir-Oilella, were slain by the sons of Domnall the Stooped, son of Mac Donnchaidh.—John the Tawny, son of Eogan,¹son of Niall Ua Neill junior, died this year about the feast of Blessed Patrick.—Domnall Mac Cartain junior, namely, a truly-hospitable, humane designate, paid the episcopal annats in the Curia. Failure to redeem entailed forfeiture of the appointment. Cf. Ware, Bishop, p. 87-8.

¹⁰ Granted.—By Innocent VIII., May 16, 1485 (Wadding, XIV. 399). O'Fallon succeeded Weston (Ware, p. 291) and died in 1500 (infra).

And by Eogan, son of Ua Ruairc, namely, son of Feidhlimidh, son of Donchadh, son of Tighernan junior, was done that slaying. of 1488, 11th entry, infra) to the (Roman) Equinox, March 25.

But this only serves to supply a two-fold proof of the forgery. For the Roman initial day was Feb. 7. VII. Id. [Feb.] Incipiunt Veris exordia tempore prisco (Cal. Galba, Hampson, p. 399. Cf. Ideler: Handbuch, p. 143). On the other hand, reasoning as represented, the putative author, whose (Greek) Equinox was March 21, would have begun Spring with Feb. 5.

For Achadh-beithi, see 1458, note 6.

Feidhlimidh Ua Concobuir, died in the Spring this year. [1487]

—The vicar of Claen-inis, namely, Brian, grandson of the bishop⁷ Ua Corcraín, died this year.—Thomas Mag Uidhir, namely, son of Thomas junior, son of another Thomas (namely, the black Gillie), was taken in Achadh-beithi by Mag Uidhir junior, namely, by John, son of Philip, son of Thomas Mag Uidhir and eight of his people were taken with him there and eight horses were wrested from them—and on the 9th of the Kalends of October [Sep. 23⁸] that was done—and the stone church of Achadh-beithi was burned against the will of Mag Uidhir that day.—Edmund, son of Cathal Mac Maghnusa junior, was drowned in the port of Tamnach-riada⁹ and buried in the monastery of Lis-gabail, on the 8th of the Kalends of August [July 25].—Battle was given between the two kings that were in Saxon-land this time—that is, the king that was a Welshman and the young man whom we mentioned before, who was called king in the town of Ath-clíath—and the battle went against that young man. And it was impossible to reckon, or to estimate, how many thousands were slain then. And the greater part of what went east of the Irish were slain there, around Thomas, son of the Earl of Kildare and many other noble Foreign youths. And about the feast of [Holy] Cross was fought^{9a} that battle and so on.—Ua Mail-Conaire, namely, Sigraídh, son of John Ua Mail-Conaire the Red, that is, the ollam of Ua Concobuir of Connacht in history, died.—Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red, went [with] a host into Magh-Luirg and houses and crops were burned by him there. And some of Magh-Luirg itself, namely, Ruaidhri of the Oak-wood, son of Muirghis, son of Aedh Mac Diarmada, profaned the church of Braigh-uallaighi and took great chattels thereout and Ua Domnaill made restitution of the chattels to the priests of the church that was profaned there.—The same Ua Domnaill went into Magh-Luirc another time in the Harvest of this year and many houses and crops were burned by him, and the church of Druim-Conaille was burned there by Ferghal Carrach, son of Domnall, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc. And, as Ua Domnaill did not catch Ferghal Carrach himself, to deliver him up for that deed, the son of Mag Tighernain of the [river] Buannaid was delivered to the clergy of the church in pledge [for reparation] of that burning and so on.—Mac William of Clann-Ricaird, namely, Ulick, son of Ulick, went [with] a host, at the instigation of Ua Concobuir the Brown (namely, Aedh, son of Aedh, son of Toirdelbach the Brown), into the Cluainte¹⁰ against Feidhlimidh the Fair, son of Tadhg, son of Toirdelbach the Red. And the town of Feidhlimidh the Fair was burned by them and his son, namely, Ros, son of Feidhlimidh the Fair, was slain and the whole territory was burned by them and they burned and destroyed the extent that was the portion of Feidhlimidh the Fair and of the grandsons of Feidhlimidh in Corco-Achlann and in Tir-Briuin and in the Leath-tuath. And the sons of Feidhlimidh the Fair, namely, Art and Toirdelbach and Conn, went in pursuit of the host and the son of Domnall, son of Toirdelbach the Blind, son of Toirdelbach Ua Concobuir the Brown, was slain by them at Ros-Comain.—Ua Cellaigh, namely, William, son of Aedh, son of Brian Ua Cellaigh, was taken in the beginning of the Harvest of this year by his own kinsmen, namely, by Mail[-Sh]-echlainn and by Concobur and by Ceallach and by Edmund. Aedh, son of Donchadh Ua Cellaigh, was slain by the sons of Ua Cellaigh, namely, by the sons of William, son of Aedh.—Ua Mail[-Sh]-echlainn, namely, Laighnech, son of Core Ua Mail[-Sh]-echlainn, was slain this year by Conn, son of Art, son of Conn, son of Cormac Ua Mail[-Sh]echlainn the Freckled.—Feidhlimidh, son of Mac Maghnusa Mag Uidhir, namely, son of Cathal junior, son of Cathal Mac Maghnusa Mor, died this year on the day of St. Luke the Apostle, on Thursday.¹¹ And a hearty, spirited, humane, charitable man was that Feidhlimidh.—The daughter of Mathgamain¹² Ua Briain, namely, wife of Ua Lochlainn, eloped with Edmund, son of Ricard de Burgh, in the beginning of the Harvest of this year.—A raid was made by the son of Ua Domnaill, namely, by Conn, son of Aedh Ua Domnaill the Red, on St. Francis' day [Oct. 4] on James, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, in Cuil-Meg-Tighernain, after truce being accepted between the Fir-Manach and the [Tir-]Conallians that time. And five, or six of the people of the son of Ua Domnaill were slain by the people of James; but James did not overtake them himself.—Ua Neill, namely, Conn, son of Henry Ua Neill, liberated Niall, son of John Ua Neill the Tawny, from Niall, son of Toirdelbach Ua Neill the Red and took him with him to the castle¹³ of the sons of John the Tawny, in hope that he would obtain the castle by him. And, as he did not obtain [it], a leaguer was made by Ua Neill and by his own kinsmen and by his gallowglasses around the castle from the feast of [Holy] Cross¹⁴ to the first feast of Mary¹⁴ of Harvest. And a form of peace was concerted between them, whereby Ua Neill would obtain the castle and the form went asunder again. And the sons of John the Tawny and the horse-host of the sons of Mag Mathgamna, namely, of Glaisne and of Brian, made a raid in the land of the sons of Toirdelbach Ua Neill of the Beeves, on which they took two, or three, hundred cows with them and slew persons.—Toirdelbach, son of Feradhach, son of Donn, son of Cu-Connacht Mag Uidhir

Conn, son of the Calbach, was slain by some of the people [1492] of the son of the Earl of Ormond, namely, of James¹², son of John, son of James Butler, that is, by Master Gart¹³. And Master Gart himself was taken in the same place by the Earl of Kildare in Winter.—The sons of Donchadh Mag Uidhir, namely, the black Gillie, and Philip and the son of the black Gillie, namely, Edmond, went on an inroad on Senadh of Mac Maghnusa and a foray was made by them there and two inoffensive farmers were slain by them. But themselves were taken in their pride and the Lord visited their iniquity. And they were turned to flight and 14 of their elect sunk as lead in the waters and went down like a stone into the depth. And, because the Lord was not with them, when men arose against them, without doubt the water swallowed them up, as saith the Psalmist. For the Lord sent his anger and it devoured them. And Edmond, son of the black Gillie and two of his people were taken there and the prey was wrested from them. And at end of the year this was done, namely, the Saturday¹⁴ before Christmas.

(This year was born Cathal junior [Mac Maghnusa, namely], son of [Gilla-]Beta[i]n¹⁵, namely, of Thomas¹⁶, that is, on the feast day of Beradh¹⁷).

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, [10th of the moon] A.D. [1493] 1493. Margaret, daughter of Mag Uidhir, namely, daughter of Thomas junior, son of the black Gillie Mag Uidhir, that is, wife of Mac Gilla-ruaidh, namely, of Domnall, son of Mael[-Sh]echlainn, son of the freckled Gillie Mac Gilla-ruaidh, died this year after Christmas.—Domnall, son of Eogan, son of Eogan, ¹⁶ Thomas.—Apparently, the son of the Compiler mentioned under 1498, infra.

And there were slain there Mac Domnaill, namely, constable of gallowglasses of Ua Neill, that is, Ragnall, with his three sons, namely, Somairle and Ruaidhri and Tuathal, and Edmund, son of Mac Domnaill Mor, that is, son of Colla, son of Toirdelbach, son of Gilla-espuic, and the son of Ruaidhri, son of Aedh Mac Domnaill the Freckled, that is, Colla and Feradhach, son of Domnall Mac Domnaill, and two sons of Donchadh Mac Domnaill, that is, Dubgall and Donchadh junior, and also Edmund, son of John Ua Neill the Tawny and Aedh the Brefnian, son of John, son of Art Ua Neill, and Ua hAedha, that is, Ferdorcha, son of Ua hAedha the Freckled, and two sons of the Parson Ua hAedha, that is, Philip and Toirdelbach and John, son of Mael[-Sh]echlainn Ua hAedha and many others that are not reckoned here and particularly of the Clann-Domnaill and of the Muinter-Aedha. And there were taken there: to wit, Niall, son of John Ua Neill the Tawny and Aedh, son of Ua Neill, that is, son of Domnall, son of Henry and Donchadh, son of Mac Cathmail, namely, son of Brian, son of Cumidhe Mac Cathmail and many others with them.—Ua Domnaill¹¹, namely, Aedh the Red, son of Niall the Rough, went [with] a large host into Trian-Conghail in Harvest of this year and all Lower Connacht went with him son of Muircertach Ua Concobuir and under Ua Ruairc, namely, under Feidhlimidh, son of Donchadh, son of Tighernan Ua Ruairc junior, and under Eogan, son of Tighernan, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc. And he went into Clann-Aedha-buidhe¹³ and into Leth-Cathail and into Oirthir and into Ui-Eathach. And hosts hard to count overtook him and rose against him in front of and behind¹⁴ him, under Ua Neill, namely, under Henry, son of Henry, son of Eogan Ua Neill, and under Mag Mathgamna, namely, Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Red, son of Rughraidhe Mag Mathgamna and under Mag Aenghusa, namely, under Aedh, son of Art, son of Aedh Mag Aenghusa. And Ua Domnaill met and bore that onset splendidly, firmly, and turned on those and 13 men of them were slain by him, under a good horseman of the people of Mag Mathgamna.

And were [it] not [for] the nearness of the night to them, a crushing defeat had been inflicted by Ua Domnaill. And Ua Domnaill came to his house victoriously on that occasion, but that he brought neither peace, nor truce, nor submission with him.—Henry, son of Mael[-Sh]echlainn, son of Muircertach Ua Neill and Muircertach, son of Cairpre, son of Aedh Ua Neill, went on a [night] incursion on Henry, son of Brian, son of Eogan Ua Neill, whilst he was lying in the illness of his leg that was broken before that. And Henry, son of Brian Ua Neill and his wife, namely, daughter of Cu-Uladh Ua Neill, were slain by them there and Henry, son of Mael-[-Sh]echlainn and Muircertach, son of Cairpre Ua Neill, were slain the same night, before they desisted from that incursion, and other persons that are not reckoned here fell between them. (And, although the leg of Henry, son of Brian, was broken, on Henry, son of Maol-

And Cu-Connacht himself was slain with cast of javelin in that same place by the same Aedh. And the javelin whereby fell Aedh himself [was] through him crosswise, whilst he was giving that cast to him. And it is doubtful whether [lit. that] there was in Ireland at this time a man of Toirdelbach's age [years] that was better as man and as leader than he. The castle of Tullach-Mo[n]ghain was taken by Ua Raighilligh, namely, by John, son of Cathal, son of Eogan Ua Raighilligh, at the end of a fortnight after that slaying and the descendants of Maelmordha of the Mullach went, with their cattle, to meet Ua Raighilligh after that slaying.—Magnus the Bald, son of Redmund the Swarthy, son of Donn, son of Cu-Connacht Mag Uidhir, was treacherously slain this year by Philip, son of Edmund Mag Uidhir and by the freckled Gillie, son of Cu-Connacht Mac Gaffraigh, on the 6th of the Kalends of July [June 26].—Great raids [were made] in the Summer of this year on Ua Cathain, namely, on John, son of Aibne, son of Diarmait Ua Catha[i]n, by Mac Uibilin, namely, by Walter, son of Cormac, son of Jenkin Mac Uibilin.—Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red, son of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough, went to the house of the

 Mac-an-baird of Tir-Conaill, namely, Aedh Mac-an-baird, died this year.—Gilla-Padraig, son of Redmund Ua hAnluain, was slain this year by the son of Mag Aengusa, namely, by Feidhlimidh, son of Aedh, son of Art, son of Aedh Mag Aengusa.—Gerald Mised, namely, a good Foreign youth of the people of Alexander, son of Thomas Plunket and Edmund, son of Andrew, son of the blue Gillie Tuite, were slain this year.—Mag Mathgamna and his sons and his kinsmen made an incursion into the land of the sons of Redmund Mag Mathgamna and it was burned by them and they turned not until they got pledges from the sons of Mag Mathgamna.—The son of Ua Domnaill, namely, Conn, son of Aedh the Red, son of Niall the Rough, sat under the castle of Sligech this year about the time of Lammas. Ua Domnaill came to his own town, that is, to Dun-na-Gall, from the town of the king of Scotland the Friday¹¹ after Lammas and went on Saturday to follow his son to Sligech. And he had done nothing more than enter the town when it was told him that a host of Lower Connacht—at instigation of Brian, son of Tadhg, son of Eogan Ua Concobair—and the Calbach, son of Domnall, son of Eogan Ua Concobair, were [marching] to the town to put the son of Ua Domnaill from the castle. And they thought not that Ua Domnaill himself was nearer to them than the house of the king of Scotland. And neither fear nor flight did Ua Domnaill at those tidings, but took with him what was of his own people under the castle, both foot and horse, and struck out [i.e. went] against the host and defeated them¹² spiritedly, successfully. And there were slain there Brian, son of Tadhg, son of Eogan Ua Concobair and

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, [13th of the moon,] and [1496] it [was] a Bissextile year, A.D. 1496. Glaisne, son of Rughraidhe Mag Mathgamna, was slain in his own house in Muinechan, on the 3rd of the Ides [11th] of January, in the night, by Gilla-Padraig, son of Mag Mathgamna, namely, son of Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Red, son of Rughraidhe and by his other brother, namely, by Rughraidhe. And there went not but 16 farmers to do that slaying. And Ros, son of Maghnus, son of Aedh Mag Mathgamna the Red, was taken by them in the same house that night. Brian, son of Redmond Mag Mathgamna and the sons of Glaisne, son of Redmond Mag Mathgamna, went on a raid on Mag Mathgamna and on his sons, a week after Glaisne himself being slain and the prey was carried off by them. And John, son of Cu-Uladh [Mac Mahon], son of the Blind [-eye], was slain by them there and five, or six, horsemen were slain there, around John. And the son of Toirdelbach, son of Ardgall, namely, John, was slain of the party of the raid.—The castle of Ath-Senaigh was taken after Christmas¹ from the warders of Ua Domnaill by the son of Ua Domnaill himself, namely, by Aedh.—Peace was made by Ua Domnaill with the Carbrians and the lordship remained with Feidhlimidh, son of Maghnus, son of Brian and the castle of Sligeach remained with Calbach Blind[-eye], son of Domnall, son of Eogan Ua Concobair.—Ua Cuirnin, namely, Ruaidhri Ua Cuirnin, died.—Eogan junior, son of Eogan, son of Aedh Ua Dalaigh, died this year.—Florence Ua Corcraín, namely, an eminent harper and player of [other] stringed instruments and a very good vocalist and instrumentalist², and his wife died in the castle of Ua Raighilligh.—Ua

the double-columned items of this year), the attempt to retake would have] considerably preceded the seizure of the castle.

² Good — instrumentalist. — See 1489, n. 5.

Dubda, namely, [William, son of Domnall the Freckled³] [1496] died this year.—Ua Neill, namely, Domnall, son of Henry, son of Eogan and his two sons, namely, Brian and Eogan, went on a raid on another Ua Neill, namely, on Henry junior, son of Henry, son of Eogan and Niall, son of Toirdelbach Ua Neill the Red and two other horsemen were slain by them there and the son of Ua Mellain, namely, Rughruidhe, son of Eogan Ua Mellain, was taken by them and the prey was spiritedly carried off by them [even] from the fortress of the town of Ua Shercaigh. And that was the 24th raid that Domnall made on Henry and on what adhered to him since the other Ua Neill, namely, Conn, was slain.⁴ And the Saturday⁵ after the feast of Brigit that was done.—Ua Gailunredhaigh, namely Brian, died this year.—Ua Flannagain of Tuath-ratha, namely, Gilbert, son of Cormac, son of Gilla-Isu Ua Flannagain, died in the beginning of the Harvest of the year.—Mag Samradhain, namely, Domnall Gapped[-tooth], son of Thomas, son of Fergal Mag Samradhain, was slain in treachery by Maghnus, son of Thomas, son of Thomas, son of Fergal Mag Samradhain and by the sons of Aedh, son of Eogan, son of Thomas, son of Fergal and by the sons of Brian of Tellach-Eathach, namely, Tadhg and Philip, that is, sons of Feidhlimidh, son of Brian. In Tempoll-an-puirt⁶ that was done, on the feast day of Berach, at the end⁷ of a year from the day his other brother and his tribe-head was drowned.—The Saxon justiciary left Ireland this year.—The Dalton, namely, Thomas, son of Edmond, son of Piers Dalton, was liberated for 300 marks and for murdered at the altar, which bore signs still visible of the blows. The church in question, doubtless, was that of Inch (the Inis Mad- do[i]c of the St. Gall Priscian, 194a), in Templeport Lake.

Conn and the rising-out of Tir-Conaill and Inis-Eogain and Dartraighe of Mag Flannchadha turned in pursuit on Mag Uidhir and on Aedh as far as the Termon of [St.] Dabeog. And Mag Craith, namely, Ruaidhri, son of Diarmait, son of Mark Mag Craith, namely, coarb of the Termon, met them in the Termon and proclaimed it to Conn and to the Conallians not to break his own protection,¹³ nor the protection of the Termon, against Mag Uidhir. And they brooked not that and [accordingly] Mag Uidhir and his people went perforce, until their horses came into soft, shaking turf, in which they left 110 horses. And with that, the people of Mag Uidhir were broken¹⁴ and Mag Uidhir was taken within the protection of the Termon and of Mag Craith and 12 persons were slain there, including Brian junior, son of Brian, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, who was slain on the morrow by the sons of Aedh Mag Uidhir in his own land and including Edmond Carrach, son of the Archdeacon¹⁵ Mac Maghnusa, and Donchadh, son of Donn, son of Philip Mag Uidhir and Gilla-Padraig, son of Ua Flannagain, namely, son of Gilbert, son of Cormac Ua Flannagain, and Art, son of Tadhg the black-eyed, son of Mac Craith Mag Uidhir and so on.

Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red, son of Niall, son of Toirdelbach of the Wine and his son, namely, Conn, let Mag Uidhir from out his captivity, the Saturday¹⁸ before November Day, for Mag Craith and for the Termon. And it seemed to every one that they did not fully acquit [themselves] with [St.] Dabeog, nor with the Termon, because it was necessary for him¹⁹ to give a certain part of the ransom from himself into the hand of Ua Domnaill and of his son, namely, Conn, as a condition of liberating Thomas Mag Uidhir, who was in durance much of the year with him.

⁶ P. of P.—See the reff., s. v. Purgatorium S. Patricii, in Du Cange (ed. Henschel, V. 523).

In the AA. SS. (Mar. t. 2), two sections of the Ap. to the Acts of St. Patrick are devoted to the Purgatory: V. De Purg. S. P., 587-9: VI. De modo purgationis . . . olim et nuper, 589-92.

An annalistic excerpt from a source not indicated (ib. 590) states that, in 1494, a Canon Regular of Eymstadt, having made the pilgrimage, was demanded an exorbitant sum as the price of admission by the local bishop, chief and prior, in turn. Having convinced them of his inability to pay, he was at length allowed to enter the cave; when, to his disappointment, he beheld no vision! Whereupon, hastening to Rome, he revealed the cheat to Alexander VI., and was sent back with Letters to the three in question to destroy the Purgatory.

The main statements, it escaped the Bollandists, will not bear scrutiny. The Curia, in the first place, had learned too severe a lesson as to the credibility of documents duly formulated and attested (n. 1, sup.), to issue a slain by Brian the Tawny, son of Rughraidhe, son of Cathal Ua Ferghail.—The cave of the Purgatory of Patrick⁶ on Loch-ghearg[-derg, co. Don.] was broken this year by the Guardian of Dun-na-Gall and by the representatives⁷ of the bishop in the deanery of Loch-Erne, by authorization of the Pope, about the feast of Patrick of this year; it being understood by every one in general from the History of the Knight⁸ and other old Books that this was not the Purgatory Patrick got from God, although they were, every one, visiting it.—Peace⁹ was made by the two Ua Neills, namely, Domnall and Henry junior, at the end of the Spring of this year and the son of Domnall Ua Neill, namely, Aedh, was liberated without ransom and other large donatives of horses and of apparel and of increase of every valuable besides were given to Domnall, in consideration of putting the name of lord from him.—O'Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red, son of Niall the Rough, put his lordship from him, on the 7th of the Kalends of the month of June [May 26] of this year, in Carna of the Termon of Mag Craith. [This took place] on Friday, the day of the week and the Tuesday after that his son, namely, Conn, was made O'Domnaill.— mandate on the verbal plaint of a palmer. Furthermore, it strains credulity that a charge of the kind was taken as proven, without those affected, including a bishop who was Papal Collector (Thei. 495), being given an opportunity of vindication. Finally and most fatally, at the time there was no local bishop to have Letters addressed to; Alexander VI. having transferred Courcey to Ross in 1494 and left Clogher vacant until 1502 (Ware, 186).

Settled procedure and the textual data prove that, moved by complaints touching the origin and practice, the Pope appointed the Vicar of Lough Erne deanery and the Guardian of Donegal Monastery to inquire and determine. The result was the suppression of the Purgatory on the ground of false ascription to St. Patrick.

Mag Mathgamna, namely, Brian, son of Redmond, son of [1497] Rughraidhe, went, at the instance of Sifin White, to put Mag Aengusa and his son, namely, Aedh, son of Art Mag Aengusa, from the castle of the hOirenach by force. It were better for them they had not gone; for Mag Mathgamna was slain there and worthies of his people were [some] drowned and [some] slain and Sifin White and many others of the Foreigners and of the Gaidhil were taken. On the 3rd of the Nones [5th] of July, Wednesday, those great deeds were done. Rosa, son of Maghnus, son of Aedh the Red, son of Rughraidhe, was made Mag Mathgamna the Tuesday after.—The son of the Earl of Ormond, namely, James, son of John, son of Earl James, was slain¹⁰ by Piers the Red, son of James, son of Edmond, son of Richard Butler, on [Mon.] the 16th of the Kalends of August [July 17].—The abbot of Cluain-eois, namely, Domnall, son of the bishop (namely, Rosa), son of Thomas junior, son of Thomas Mag Uidhir, died on St. Margaret's Day¹¹ this year.—Cathal, son of Toirdelbach, son of John, son of Eogan Ua Raighilligh, died of an attack of the glandular disease about Lammas.—Aedh the Tawny, son of Ua Ruairc, namely, son of Feidlimidh, son of Douchadh, son of Tigernan Ua Ruairc junior, was slain by the sons of Tadhg, son of Cathal, son of Tigernan Ua Ruairc, before Lammas of this year.—Walter, son of Richard de Burgh, went [with] a fleet to aid O'Domnaill junior, namely, Conn, son of Aedh the Red, against his other brother, namely, Aedh O'Domnaill. Aedh met the fleet and took the greater part of their arms and their apparel and their store from them. After Lammas that was done. Aedh himself was taken by O'Domnaill, namely, by Conn, a day, or two days, after that and placed in Connacht to Great defeat was inflicted on Ua Domnaill then and many hostages were exacted from the host and from Ua Domnaill, including the two Mac Suibnes, namely, Mac Suibne of Fanat (that is, Ruaidhri) and Mac Suibne of [Tir-]Bagaine, namely, Eogan and inclusive of Donchadh, son of Ua Domnaill, who is called Donchadh of the Thumbs,¹³ and the two sons of Tuathal Ua Gallechobair, namely, Eogan and Toirdelbach and two sons of Domnall Mac Suibne of Fanat, namely, Eogan and Domnall junior and two sons of the Mac Suibne of [Tir-]Bagaine, namely, Niall and Eogan the Red and Gerald, son of Domnall, son of Feidlimidh Ua Dochartaigh and the physician of Ua Domnaill, namely, the son of Eogan Ultach. And many other persons were [some] taken and [some] slain there. The 9th of the Kalends of October [Sep. 23] that defeat was given. And the Cathach¹⁴ of Colum-cille was wrested from them then and its steward¹⁵ was slain in that defeat. And many more of the Conallians were [some] taken and [some] slain there.—The descendants of Aedh Mag Mathgamna the Red went into Fern-magh this year and the descendants of Redmond, to the Lucht-tighi¹⁶ again.—Conn, son of Conn, son of Niall Ua Domnaill, died before the feast of Brigit this year.—The monastery of the Friars Minor of Carraig-Ferghusa was delivered from Rome, on the mediation of Niall, son of Conn, son of Aedh the Tawny, unto the Friars Minor of [Stricter] Ob-going of the decision with them therein. Paul II. (May 5, 1460) permitted Nehemias (O'Donoghue) and Richard, Friars of the Observance, to introduce the Stricter

Rule into four Conventual establishments, provided a moiety in each case voted therefor. In the present instance, owing to the cause stated in the text, the option was limited to selection of the servance and 16 Friars of the Community of Dun-na-Gall [1497] went into its possession on the vigil [Aug. 14] of the first feast of Mary in the Harvest this year, the decision having gone in their favour therein.¹⁷—Very great, grievous famine throughout all Ireland this year, to which the folk of this time saw not the equal, nor like; for there was scarce an angle or recess in all Ireland wherein died not many persons of that hunger. And in Meath the peck of wheat used to be bought for five ounces and the gallon of beer for six pence and amongst the Gaidhil the slender bundle of oats used be bought for an in-calf cow, or ten pails of oats for the same [kind of] cow and the beef, for a mark and the milch-cow, for two in-calf cows and for a shilling or more.—O'Neill, namely, Henry junior, son of Henry, son of Eogan, went [with] a large host into Tir-Conaill this year and great devastations were done in Fanad by them in the beginning and Ua Domnaill junior, namely, Conn, son of Aedh the Red, arose against the host, after Fanad was left by them, namely, at Bel-atha-daíre.¹⁸ And defeat was inflicted on O'Domnaill then and he himself was slain there and over eight score were slain along with him and his two brothers, namely, Niall the Rough and Domnall and the son of Mac Suibne and 16 men along with them were taken there. Now, these were the noble persons that were slain in company of Ua Domnaill in this defeat: to wit, Domnall, son of Maghnus the Red, son of Domnall, son of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough and Edmond, son of Feidlimidh the Swarthy, son of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough and Brian, son of Ua Baighill, Observantine House to put in possession. The choice of Donegal appears honourable to that foundation.

From the number that went to Carrickfergus, the whole of the Conventual community, we may infer, was transferred to Donegal.

mendicants of Ireland and the one who was full of grace and of knowledge in every science, both law and divinity, physic and philosophy, and knowledge of Gaidhelic also to the time of his decease, and one that projected and collected and compiled THIS BOOK from very many other books. And he died of the small pox, on the 10th of the Kalends of the month of April [March 23], Friday the week day, in the 60th year of his age. And let every one that shall read THIS BOOK and avail of it bestow his benison upon that soul of Mac Maghnusa. [1498]

Domnall, son of Nechtain, son of Toirdelbach, son of Niall Ua Domnaill the Rough, died of the small pox this year.—Sabia, daughter of Art Ua Neill, namely, the wife whom Redmond, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, had for a long time, died this year.—Catherine, daughter of John, son of bishop¹⁰ Mag Uidhir, died this year.—Margaret, daughter of Domnall Mag Uidhir the Freckled, namely, wife of Ua Flannagain of Tuath-ratha, namely, Gilbert Ua Flannagain, died this year. And by that couple was built a chapel in honour of God and Mary on Achadh-mor,¹¹ the town of Ua Flannagain. And she was buried in Dun-na-Gall after victory of penance.—The king of the French, namely, Charles VIII., died this year, in Lenten time [Pas. Sat., Ap. 7].—Cormac Mag Coscraídh, an eminent cleric in [Civil] Law and in Canon [Law], died this year.—Cormac, son of Eogan, son of bishop¹² Mag Cochlain, Official of Cluain-mac-Nois and an eminent cleric, rested in Christ.—An inroad was made by Ua Domnaill, namely, by Aedh the Red, on the sons of Art Ua Neill and the sons of Art and himself met each other and rout was put on the sons of Art and Mael[-Sh]eclainn, son of Niall, son of Art, was slain by Ua Domnaill and he pursued them unto the Caislen-mael¹³ and the castle was taken and 17 suits of [1498] armour were taken from it and 15 hostages were got there, including two sons of Ruaidhri the Lamé, son of Henry, son of Eogan Ua Neill, namely, Feidhlimidh and Aedh and including Nechtain, son of Eogan Ua Domnaill and the son of Eignechan Ua Domnaill.—O'Neill, namely, Henry junior, son of Henry, son of Eogan, was slain this year, in the house of Art, son of Aedh, son of Eogan Ua Neill, in Tuath-Echadha¹⁴, by two sons of Conn (that is, [the] Ua Neill), son of Henry, son of Eogan, namely, Toirdelbach and Conn, namely, sons of the daughter¹⁵ of the Earl. And it is by that Henry fell¹⁶ the father of those two, five years before that, in treachery. On the 12th of the Kalends of the month of August [July 21] was done that slaying of Henry junior.

Domnall, son of Henry, son of Eogan Ua Neill, namely, he who was proclaimed O'Neill before that, mustered his friends and his people-in-law, namely, the descendants of Redmond Mag Mathgamna, to one place and an inroad was made by them to Dun-Gennain and they were a while about the castle and the eve of Tuesday after that at Cros-Caidhbenaigh. Feidhlimidh, son of that O'Neill who was slain, namely, son of Henry junior, drew on them Niall, son of Art O'Neill and every other muster he found, on the Tuesday morning. And they were found by them lying down asleep and the cold-awaking of foes was given to them and great defeat was inflicted then and many of the worthies of the Province were slain there, under the son of that Domnall O'Neill, namely, under Henry and under Mac Cathmail, namely, Gilla-Padraig Mac Cathmail and under Feidhlimidh, son of Redmond

And the town of Mag Samradhain was burned by them and they turned back and came not on [cattle-]spoils, or chattel. And the worthies of the country overtook them on that retreat with a very [large pursuing party and those nobles turned on the pursuing party and defeated them spiritedly, successfully then and slew three and twenty of the pursuing party in that rout, under two sons of Aedh, son of Eogan Mag Samradhain, namely, Tadhg and Maghnus (that is, the cleric). And the other portion of them [slain were] of the Clann-Imair and of the Clan of Mac-in-taisigh²⁰ and of the muster of Tellach-Eathach also. And there was slain also by the Fir-Manach in the heat of that rout Flaithbertach, son of Donn, son of Edmond Mag Uidhir. And on the vigil of Michaelmas precisely those deeds were done.—The castle of Dun-Genainn was taken this year by the Deputy of the king of the Saxons in Ireland, namely, the Earl of Kildare, at instigation of Toirdelbach, son of Conn O'Neill. And very many of the Gaidhil of the South of Ireland [went] with the Earl on that expedition²¹ and Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red and Mag Uidhir, namely, John, son of Philip, son of Thomas Mag Uidhir, [went] with him on the same expedition. And Domnall Ua Neill, with his sons and with all his friends, went [with] a host hard to count to meet the justiciary to the same castle and it was taken with guns [by them] on the morrow. And many captives were taken from it, including the son of O'Domnaill, who was a year²² in captivity before that and Art, son of O'Neill Mor (that

 Just 100 years later, it was the scene of the defeat and death of his place.—Mag Tighernain of Tellach-Dunchadha, namely, [1499] John Mag Tighernain, died this year.—Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh the Red, went [with] a host this year against Mac Diarmata junior, namely, against Cormac, son of Ruaidhri Mac Diarmata and advanced to the Belach-buidhe¹⁴ and Mac Diarmada held that Pass against him. And he went from that to the castle of Liath-druim and Mac Diarmata came to meet him there and peace was made by them with each other. And the Cathach¹⁵, which was for two years before that out of possession of Ua Domnaill, and other pledges that were from him in Magh-Luirg were restored to him and Mac Diarmada gave rent of protection to Ua Domnaill for Magh-Luirg from that out.—Great raids [were made] this year by Brian, son of Ua Neill (namely, Domnall), on Mac Domnaill of Clann-Cellaigh, namely, on Gilla-Padraig.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, [27th] of moon, A.D. 1500. [1500 B.] And a year of the Indulgences in Rome it [was]: to wit, the Golden Door¹ was opened. And it [was] also a Bissex-tile year. O'Ruairc, namely, Feidhlimidh, son of Donchadh, son of Tighernan, died this year and Eogan, son of Tighernan, son of Tadhg Ua Ruairc, was made king in his place.—Tadhg junior, son of Tadhg, son of Tighernan Ua Ruairc, died.—O'Banain (namely, Nicholas) of Daire²-Maelain—to wit, one who was vicar in Daire-Maelain and herenagh over a third of the same place—died this year in Clann-in-caich³ of Ua Raighilligh.—Feradhach, son of Donn junior, son of Donn Mor Mag Uidhir and Brian, son of John, son of Domnall Mag Uidhir the Freckled,

Mag Uidhir died this year, namely, John, son of Philip,
son of Thomas Mor (that is, the black Gillie) Mag Uidhir: the unique choice of a sub-king of Ireland about that time and the one Gaidhel who was of most mercy and humanity that was in his own time and best maintained and defended his own territory and land against the power of border lands and had best sway and rule in church and state. He died in his own great stronghold in Inis-Sgeillinn, on the 7th Kalend of the month of April [Mar. 26], Sunday precisely, with victory of Unction and penance, after hearing Mass¹. And he was buried in the monastery of Dun-na-Gall, he having chosen [to be buried] in it and so on.—Mac William de Burgh, namely, Tibbot, son of Walter de Burgh died this year.—
The son of O'Domnaill, namely, Donchadh of the Thumbs, was taken by the sons of Conn O'Neill this year. And Scots that were with the sons of Conn took him with them to meet O'Domnaill himself, and Domnall, son of O'Domnaill, mutilated² Donchadh on that occasion and he died of it and so on.—Brian, son of Aedh Mag Uidhir, died this year.—Edmund, son of Eogan, son of Aedh Mag Uidhir, was slain on a night incursion by the sons of Brian, son of Aedh Mag Uidhir and the son of Edmund himself was slain there and the son of Cormac,

—Somairle Aneloigh, son of Aenghus Mac Domnaill, [1504] namely, captain⁴ of the Scots whom Mag Uidhir (that is, Concobur) had, was taken this year by Aedh, son of John Mag Mathgamna the Tawny and many of the Scots were [some] taken and [some] slain by him also.—Brian, son of Mag Uidhir, namely, son of John, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, died this year.—The vicar of Cluain-eois, namely, Ruaidhri, son of the senior [lit. great] Coarb Mag Mathgamna, died this year.—The Abbot of Cluain-eois, namely, Gilla-Padraig, son of Henry Ua Connalaigh, died this year (of the King's Game), after the bishopric of Clochar was obtained⁵ for him. — The abbot of Cenannus, namely, Philip, son of bishop⁶ O'Raighilligh and his other brother (that is, Eogan), namely, a canon that was in the same town, died this year of that King's Game also.—A hosting by the Justiciary, that is, the Earl of Kildare, namely, Gerald, son of Earl Thomas—and very great part of the Gaidhil of Ireland [went] along with him, to wit: O'Domnaill and O'Raighilligh and Mag Mathgamna and O'Ferghail and O'Concobuir Faly and the Gaidhil of all the Half of Conn, except O'Neill alone—on Mac William of Clann-Ricaird. And O'Briain [came] in aid of Mac William. And they met each other in Clann-Ricaird, on Cnoc-tuagh,⁷ and a spirited battle is fought between them, to which was not found the like in the latter time. So that heard afar from those bands were the battling of the battle-heroes and feats of the champions and rush of the royal-heirs, and thunder of the troops and bruit of the bands in being imperilled; the courage and impetuosity of the youths and of the striplings and the enthusiasm of the brave men in their falling, and the prevailing of the nobles over the lowly.

Kilmore, who was alive in 1470
(Ware, 229).

⁷ Cnoc-t.—Hill of [battle-]axes;
Knockdoe, co. Gal.

Howbeit, the battle is gained on Mac William and on Ua Briain and slaughter is inflicted on them. And the place wherein were nine battalions of gallowglasses in compact array of battle, there escaped not alive of them but one thin battalion alone. [1504]

And it was impossible to put an estimate on the [slain] horsemen, or on the footmen there, so that the field became uneven from those heaps of slaughter, with the multitude of spears and of swords and of battle-shields and of corpses cross-thrown, confused and of slain youths stretched stark-dead and of gillies beardless, loathsome, unsightly. So that slaughter of the Momonians was inflicted in that great conflict. And there fell many multitudes of the forces of the Earl on the other side. Howbeit, the Earl returned to his house on that occasion with triumph of overthrow and 4 of the children of Mac William, namely, 2 sons and 2 daughters, with him also.—A treacherous attack [was made] on Ua Neill (namely, on Domnall) this year by his own people, namely, by Tadhg Ua hOgain and by his sons, in the castle⁸ of Ua Neill himself and the castle was taken by them. And God turned upon themselves in that same hour and the town was taken from them and Tadhg himself and two of his sons were hung and the third man of them was mutilated on the same day.—A night incursion [was made] by Philip, son of Edmund Mag Uidhir, into Lucht-tighi⁹ of Mag Mathgamna and Eogan

And, until stars of heaven and sand of sea and grass of green are numbered, it is impossible to put number, or estimate, on the horsemen, or on the footmen [slain] in that battle,

Hence M. was neither sister of Columba, nor wife in Tir-Conaill, namely, in Dun-na-Gall. So that it were fitting to name him the Augustus of the whole north-west of Europe. And he died after victory of Uinction and penance, in the 78th year of his age and in the 44th year of his lordship, on Friday, the 5th of the Ides [11th] of July, in his own stronghold, in Dun-na-Gall and was buried on Saturday in the monastery of Dun-na-Gall.—The prior of Fobhair, namely, Edmund the Dark, of the family of the Knight, namely, of [Fitz] Simon, died.—Feidhlimidh, son of Niall, son of Art Ua Neill, was slain by the sons⁶ (of Brian, son of Aedh Mag Uidhir).—A hosting by the son of O'Domnaill, namely, Aedh junior, son of Aedh the Rough, into Tir-Eogain and the town of O'Neill (namely, the town of Domnall O'Neill) and the town of Aedh, son of Domnall O'Neill, and the town of Brian, son of Domnall O'Neill, were burned by him and from Abhann-mor⁷ inward was traversed by him without opposition, without contest. And he sat under Castle-Derg on his return and the castle was taken by him and his own warders were left in it and he went from that to Cell-mic-nEnain⁸ and was proclaimed king over Tir-Conaill, on the 2nd day of the month of August, by will of God and men and so on.—A hosting by Ua Neill, namely, by Domnall, into Dartraighe of Oirgialla and the country was wasted and pillaged by him and Aedh, son of John the Tawny, son of Eogan Mag Mathgamna, was slain there and so on. And Ua Neill went to his house from that expedition with triumph of victory.—Domnall, son of Art O'Neill, was slain by Brian, son of of Enan. Quorum, etc., arose from the writer being unaware that Chobrain was written over Cholmain (on blank end of previous line).

With the L. L. MS. before him, Colgan (Adam. 247) reads Nemain; omits Cobran (for the reason just given); and doubts not that Kellmac-Enain is = Cella-filiorum-Enani. But, another proof of his independent research, on the preceding folio (p. 369g) the son of Enan is among the Ir. SS. who were only sons.

Aodh the Red, follows him through Meath into Munster [1510] with a small force and they march together into Ella and take the castle of Cenn-tuire¹ and harry the country and go after that into great Desmond and take the castle of the Pailis² and the castles along the Maing in [their] entirety³ and go safe backwards into county Limerick. Afterwards, they make reunion⁴ of the host and the Geraldines of Munster assemble under James, son of the Earl of Desmond and the Foreigners of Munster [assemble] beside and Mag Carthaigh the Swarthy, namely, Domnall, son of Diarmait, son of Finghin and Cormac junior, son of Cormac, son of Tadhg and the Foreigners and Gaidhil of Meath and Leinster and [all] go to Limerick. And Toirdelbach, son of Tadhg O'Briain, king of Thomond and Mac Conmara and the Sil-Aodha⁵ and Clann-Ricaireid mustered a large host against them. And the Earl with his host went through Belach-na-fadhbaighe and Belach-an-gamna, until he reached a very good bridge⁶ of wood that was made by O'Briain across the Shannon and he breaks the bridge and remains a night in camp in the country. And O'Briain with his host made a camp by their side, so that each portion of them used to hear the conversation, or the story-telling, that was being done by the other half. Upon the morrow, the Earl arranges his host and places the Foreigners and Gaidhil of Munster in front and places the Foreigners of Meath and Ath-cliath on the

But the interpolation is the reverse of probable. Had the invaders (who, O'Donnell's rearward post proves, were in flight) turned from within easy reach of safety and marched eight miles through the territory of the pursuing enemy, few had ped to tell the tale to the Ulster Annalist.

The bridge, it is thus safe to infer, was a short distance w. of Limerick, whence the route lay through Moin-na-b. (Bog of the Friars), Monabraher (Long Pavement), n. of the river, direct to the city.

The ambiguity would be removed, were B.-na-f. (Pass of the Forest) and B.-an.-g. (Pass of the Calf) not obsolete. To locate them E. of Limerick (O'D. v. 1306) is gratuitous.

And he took [Aedh] the son of Niall, son of Conn [O'Neill] and other hostages also with him, in pledge [of compliance] with his own award.—Great war [arose] between O'Domnaill, namely, Aodh and O'Neill, namely, Art, son of Aodh and another war also between O'Domnaill and Mac William, namely, Edmond, son of Ricard. And O'Domnaill engages 1500 axes in Lower Connacht and in Tir-Conaill and in Fir-Manach. O'Domnaill proceeds from Derry [with] a few horsemen and takes the castle of Bel-in-clair⁴ in the country of Galenga and leaves warders in it and goes back into Tir-Fiachrach. Mac William musters and goes towards the town and, on that being learned by O'Domnaill, he attacks the town again and Mac William abandons the town to him and goes to put provision and warders into the castle of Escir-abhann⁵ in Tir-Fiachrach. On that being learned by O'Domnaill, O'Domnaill pursues him across Sliabh-gamh⁶. On this being notified to Mac William, he leaves his son and other warders in the town and goes forward himself to Ard-na-riag⁷. O'Domnaill catches sight of him and he is pursued and they come between Mac William and the ford. And Mac William by swimming escapes [despite them] from it [with] a few and the [escaped] part of his people is followed beyond [the river] Muaidh and many horses and much armour were O'Domnaill sits under the castle of Escir-abhann and takes the place at end of four days and breaks it down straightway and takes the son of Mac William (namely, Ulick) and the other warders and comes safe to his house.—A hosting by O'Domnaill, with the nobles of Lower [north] Connacht with him, into Tir-Eogain, whereon he burned on every side until he reached Dun-Genainn. O'Neill makes peace with him, after he was a week in the country and he goes from that against the Oghmagh. He builds in a week there the castle that had been broken down before that [1509] by the Earl of Kildare and leaves warders in it.—A hosting by Gerald, Earl of Kildare, Justiciary of Ireland, past Ath-luain into Connacht: he raids and burns Cluain-conninn and takes Ros-comain and leaves warders in it. He goes from that into Magh-Luirg and takes the castle of Baile-na-huama⁸ and destroys much of the country. O'Domnaill comes [with] a large host on foot through the Corr-sliabh to confer with the Earl and turns back the same night and gave leave to raid the country on the march and a party of his people is slain at Belach-buidhe⁹ without any notable feat [being done]. And he sits down then in Sligeach and destroyed the district of the descendants of Brian¹⁰ O'Concobuir.—Margaret, daughter of Concobur O'Briain, queen of Lower Connacht, from the Mountain down¹¹, first and wife of O'Ruairc after¹²—the unique woman who, of what were in Ireland in her time, was of best fame and hospitality and housekeeping and was richest in gold and silver and in every other valuable—died and was buried in a wooden church¹³ she built herself for the Friars Minor close by Druim-da-ethiar¹⁴.—Art, son of Conn

And it came of the grace of the Holy Ghost and of the counsel of worthy persons that cordial peace was made by them and they went to meet each other on the bridge of Ard-stratha⁵ and gossipred was made by them with each other. And new charters, along with confirmation of the old charters, were granted by Ua Neill to Ua Domnaill for Cenel-Moen and for Inis-Eogain and for Fir-Manach. And O'Domnaill delivered to O'Neill his son, namely, Niall O'Neill, who was⁶ for a long time before that in pledge for fidelity.—The sons of Garrett Mac Uibhilin were slain in treachery by the sons of Walter Mac Uibhilin and the country was raided and burned by the son (namely, Aodh) of Niall, son of Conn [O'Neill], through that slaying.—A hosting by the [1514]

tion of his covenant as regards O'Domnaill in the peace [1515] in which² were the Clann-Aedha-buidhe, and O'Domnaill [was] in the illness of the wound aforesaid. He burned and raided great part of the country and the son (namely, Aodh) of Niall, son of Conn, comes to meet O'Neill and accepts the stipend³ of O'Neill, who returns safe to his house afterwards.—Great preys were made by O'Domnaill on the descendants of Brian Mag Uidhir and they were eaten among themselves and peace was made with them after that.—The castle of Aine was taken from John, son of the Earl of Desmond, by James, son of the Earl of Desmond and he sits then under the castle of Loch-gar and it was in great straits from him, until the Sil-Briain⁴ and Sil-Cerbaill⁵ and Sil-Aodha⁶ put him from it.—Aodh, son of Niall, son of Conn, lord of Trian-Conghail, went on a march into Coill-Ulltach⁷ and preys were seized by him. Niall, son of Brian, son of Niall the Foreign—one who was in contention [with Aodh] respecting lordship of Trian-Conghail—follows them with a pursuing party and the son of Brian is slain and the Coill is harried completely and the sway of the territory remains with the son of Niall from that out.—The bishop⁸ of Rath-both, namely, Menma Mac Carmaic, rested in Christ.—The son of O'Domnaill, namely, Domnall, son of Aodh the Red, tanist of Tir-Conaill, was slain by Aodh the Tawny, son of Aodh, son of Aodh [O'Domnaill] the Red, in the Tuath-bladach and was carried dangerously wounded to the house of Mac Suibne of Fanat and died there, after Uction and after penance.—James, son of Thomas the Red, son of the abbot⁹ Mag Uidhir, was slain by the Coarb Mag Uidhir in the land of Claen-inis.—

Kalends of Jan. [on 3rd feria, 24th of moon], A.D. 1516. [1516 B.] Great war arose between Ua Domnaill and O'Neill and great hiring of persons was done by them both and great raids were made by Maghnus Ua Domnaill on the son of O'Neill, namely, Henry the Stammerer and very much of the country was burned from the Mountain inward¹ by Ua Domnaill.—Other raids also were made by Brian, son of Conn O'Neill, in Cenel-Moen.—War arose between John, son of Conn O'Neill and the descendants of Aodh O'Neill. John unites with O'Domnaill because of O'Neill being with the descendants of Aodh. O'Domnaill goes [with] a host into Tir-Eogain and burns Cenel-Feradhaigh and by the [river] Una.—A French knight came on his pilgrimage² to the Purgatory of Patrick this year. O'Domnaill joins friendship with him and brings him with him to his house and does great honour to him and gives horses and an African[?] ring to him and escorts him safe to his ship. It comes of the friendship of O'Domnaill with him, that he sent a ship full of ordnance and of guns [capable] of breaking a castle, in charge of the deputy of the king³ of Scotland, to O'Domnaill. O'Domnaill hauls the ship with him to Sligech and himself and part of his host go and sit under the town. And O'Neill [was] at war with him after that and Mac Diarmata and from the Mountain down⁴ were at war with him before that.

suppression of the Purgatory (1497, sup.) was not generally known on the Continent.

They burn and destroy the country on each side, until they reached the Leap⁶ of O'Banain (namely, the castle of O'Cerbaill). And they sit down round the place and it is broken to the ground and the warders fly. And though the father of that Earl was a week previously⁷ under that place, he could not reduce it, nor could he do anything to it. And those hosts leave the country and go from that to Cathair-duin-hiascighe⁸ and the heir of Thomas, son of Edmond Butler, is carried away in pledge [of compliance] with his own award by the Earl. [battle-]axe, son of Feidhlimidh, son of Eogan, [1516] and by the descendants of the Cerbach¹⁰.—Peace was made by O'Domnaill and by O'Neill. O'Domnaill [was] on the Plain of the Old Castle and O'Neill in Carraic-na-fiach¹¹ [and they agreed] under guarantees of God and on the relics of the church and under guarantees of the Conallian and Eoganian nobles on remaining constantly as the Earl of Kildare and the members the Council of king should say. And they promised under the same guarantees to go to meet the Earl within a month from that time. O'Domnaill sets out and goes to Ath-cliaith to meet the Council of the king and was a week honourably there and joins in amity with them. And neither O'Neill, nor a person from him, went there and O'Domnaill comes safe to his house.—A large¹² party of Friars of Cavan were drowned upon Loch-Erne and two Friars of [Stricter] Observance [were] in it, namely, John, son of Thomas Carrach Mag Craith and Nicholas O'Cathain and other persons with them.—Mac Conmidhi, namely, Brian junior, son of Brian Mac Conmidhi the Red and his wife died this year.—A night incursion was made by Aodh Blind[-eye], son of Niall, son of Art O'Neill, into Fintonach and four horsemen of the people of Henry O'Neill the Stammerer were slain by him.—Redmond, son of Ruaidhri, son of Brian Mag Uidhir, was wounded and taken by the sons of Maghnus Mag Uidhir and he died of that wound in the town of the sons of Maghnus.

burned and broken down at first by them. And raids and burnings were done by them to [lit. on] the wall of Sligeach and on the church[es] of Cairpre and they were in exile this year.—A General¹ Chapter was [held] in Rome this year by the Friars Minor of Christendom in their entirety, through grace of the Holy Ghost and through favour of Pope Leo X. And, amongst the things that were determined then, it was decided that the Minister of the Friars of [Stricter] Observance should be over the Friars in their entirety and that only a Vicar, or Master, should be over the Friars of Common Life. And every monastery of Common Life which should have two-thirds of the community unanimous to have it of [Stricter] Observance, it should be obligatory on the Minister of the Friars of [Stricter] Observance to take it to him and that it should be under their obedience from that out.—Raids hard to count were done by O'Domnaill on O'Neill, at instigation of Conn, son of Niall, son of Art [O'Neill] and he went safe with very large cattle spoil.—A hosting by O'Domnaill, with the nobles of Cenel-Conaill around him, whereon he burned Tir-Eogain before him,² until he reached Coill-ichtarach.³ And, on his being five nights there waiting for [Aedh] the son of Niall, son of Conn and [on the same] O'Neill mustering a host during that space, O'Domnaill burns the country on his return, until he reached Dun-Genainn. And O'Neill abandons the town to him and the town is afterwards burned completely and from that inwards to the Mountain⁴ and he comes safe to his house. And after the Clann-Aedha-buidhe⁵ being a week in Tir-Conaill along with O'Domnaill, he proceeds then to escort them [home] and each part of them goes safe to their houses.—A hosting by Gerald, Earl of Kil-

French. And they [the Scots] succeeded not in giving [1522] aid to him, except one hosting they made on the border of the Saxons to destroy the country. And binding of peace was made by them then to a certain time². And, though brave were the nations and though they were many to count against the French, we learn from the folk who spread news and frequent ports that it was with the French remained the victory³ of the contest⁴ and the bravery of that war against the many nations.

Very⁵ great war arose in Ireland this year and particularly between O'Domnaill, namely, Aodh and O'Neill, namely, Conn, son of Conn. And O'Neill collected a large host in one place, namely, his own sept and kinsmen and the sub-kings of Ulster, that is, Mag Aenghusa with his kinsmen and Mag Mathgamna with the nobles of Oirgialla and O'hAnnluain and Mag Uidhir and O'Cathain and some of the Foreigners of Meath and a band of Scots under the son of Mac Domnaill, namely, Alexander Carrach and many other gallowglasses of the Clann-Domnaill and the Clann-Sithigh. And after the assembling of that large host, they marched into Tir-Conaill and were themselves and O'Domnaill close to a week in camp in face of one another, using feint on each other. And no notable damage was done that while, except an attack that was given by the front of the Conallian host at the entrance of Ath-na-pucan⁶, on the [river] Finn and the son of O'Neill, namely, Niall, son of Art junior, was dangerously wounded in his leg there. As to O'Neill afterwards, he pretends to return to Tir-Eogain and marched through Cois-

There was taken there the black Gillie, son of [Cu-] Connacht Mag Uidhir and a good band of horsemen that chanced to be with him there were slain. There was slain there also a good learned person—namely, Diarmait, son of Tadhg O'Cleirigh the Lame, one eminent in history and a good poet—who chanced to be in the place at that very time, waiting to go to meet O'Neill. And there was slain there also on the same occasion the son of Mac-an-baird¹¹, namely, Aodh, son of Aodh Mac-an-baird, one likely to be a good poet. And they made a sally on Magh-Eni on the morrow and the son of O'Ruairc, namely, Brian, chanced [to be] before them and they made an attack on him and two good horsemen, namely, Rugh-raidhe, son of Godfrey, son of Aodh O'Neill the Foreign and the son of Mac Cellaigh, were taken from him in centre of the Drobhais. And they burned Bun-Drobhais¹² and Dun-Cairbri¹³ and Bel-leice¹⁴ and threw down and burned the Bridge of the Erne. And they left the country on the morrow and went to Inis-Sceillinn and got hostages from the Coarb Mag Uidhir, namely, his son and his brother and he pledged submission to O'Neill¹⁵. And that host returned with victory and overthrow on that occasion,

¹⁶ Junior.—Taking og literally, O'D. (v. 1352) infers that, as he succeeded to Killaloe in 1482 (Ware, p. 47), "he could not have been very young at this period."

But in the Annals, og is frequently used to mean second of a name, or station, irrespective of personal age. The senior (mor) in this case was the bishop murdered in 1460, sup.

without damage being done to them, except a band of Scots that were taken from them in the district of O'Flannagain. [1522]

And [it was] not long after that until O'Neill collected the same host and they went into Tir-Conaill and he destroyed much of the country, until he went to Glenn-[Fh]eile and they seized on spoil in Cenn-maghair. And, when O'Domnaill and the Conallian nobles heard that, they mustered and met each other and this is the counsel they adopted,—to go into Tir-Eogain. And they left O'Domnaill and part of his gallowglasses in camp and Magnus O'Domnaill and the other part of the host and Conn, son of Niall, son of Art O'Neill, marched far out into Tir-Eogain. And they found great spoils and herds to put before them, so that it was not easy for them to drive them, for the amount of the cattle-spoil that was there. And they came [off] safe, after killing a number of persons and after raiding much of the country. And when Ua Neill and his host heard that, they turned on the track of those preys, destroying much of the country and without notable damage being done to him on that march.

Another war arose against O'Domnaill this year in the province of Connacht, arising from the design and proceedings of O'Neill: to wit, the two Mac Williams and Mac Diarmata and every force they found united with each other against O'Domnaill and a very large host was mustered by them around Mac William of Clann-Ricaire, namely, Ricard, son of Ulick, son of Ulick. And O'Cerbaill, namely, Maelruanaigh and the nobles of his district and Mac William de Burgh and Mac Diarmat and O'Concobuir the Brown and Mac Feorais and Mac Maurice and O'Cellaigh and the sons of O'Briain, namely, Donchadh and Tadhg, and the junior¹⁶ bishop O'Briain and part of

Sil-Cennetich¹⁷ went on that hosting. And on their coming together, they went without hindrance to Sligech, the Friday before the first feast¹⁸ of Mary. And O'Neill collected another large host about that time, to go to meet the Connacht host; for it was he himself that was drawing them on and they promised to meet each other about the first feast of Mary in the district of O'Domnaill. As to O'Domnaill and the Cenel-Conaill: they were mustering to meet each other about that time, for their party and their border friends abandoned them. And, when themselves came together, this is the counsel they adopted,—to sacrifice themselves for the sake of their territory and their land. And they marched in one compact body, that they might give attack by day or night to the host of O'Neill. And on that host of O'Neill rising out, they went into Cenel-Moen and took a fortified position at Loch-monann. And when the Conallians heard that, the result of their counsel was to attack them that night; for they left behind all their horses, in order that they should have less mind of flight or of turning back. And they considered, as the other host was more numerous than themselves, that the night would be of aid to them and that they would find them without a strict guard. And not thus they were, for they got accurate tidings and were distrustful respecting them, on account of the greatness of their courage. Hence they went on guard: to wit, O'Neill and his horse-host went on watch a space from the camp and they left a large portion of the best of their gallowglasses and Scots in [battle-]array on the ridge of the camp on the other side. And it seemed to themselves it was great luck for them to have their foes make for them [whilst they were] in that array. As to O'Domnaill and the Conallian nobles: as they marched they marshalled themselves and went into [battle-]array, [1522] namely, O'Domnaill and Maghnus O'Domnaill, his son, royal heir of the territory and the others of his sons that were serviceable and the three Mac Suibnes and O'Baighill and the Muintir-Dochartaigh and a few of Lower Connacht. And when they came near to the camp of O'Neill, those two hosts gave two huge shouts at one another, so that the Conallian host went out of the array and were themselves and the host of O'Neill mingled with each other and a long while co-slaying each other, as they had a mind to. But [for] one thing however, the Conallian host gained possession of the camp of O'Neill and broke through what was opposed to them there and the camp with many suits of armour remained with them. And they spent what was before them of the night in slaying and in routing their foes. And when O'Neill heard that the site of the camp was in the hands of his enemies, he departed [with] the battalion in which he was and the part of his people that remained with him. And the want of their horses did not allow the Conallian host to pursue the horse-host, as they had a mind to. And on the coming of the light of day to them, it was very manifest what was slain on the site of the camp in the conflict of that night, along with heaps of slain of the Clann-Domnaill and of the Clann-Sitigh and of Scots and of the Oirgialla and of the Men of Meath. So that Tir-Conaill was the better during the space of that time [for] what came to them of horses and of arms and of armour and of apparel and of provision and of every thing it were fitting for a host to have. As to the Conallian host: they turned back to succour the castle of Sligeach against that Connacht host that sat around it. And when the two Mac Williams and that large host that was responsive to them heard of the march of O'Domnaill to them, and he after inflicting confusion on that other host, they fled themselves from the town and went off in plight of until they themselves were prompted to go against each other and Eogan took the town of Niall, namely, the crannog of Loch-bethach, which was close by him. And then Niall went¹ into Magh-Luirg and [afterwards] made long leaguer against the place and repulse was put upon him by it and [then] he was in ambush in proximity to it. And Eogan got tidings of that and came, [with] a more numerous complement of persons, to the wood wherein was Niall and they fell in with each other and smote each other without ruth. And Eogan was slain on the spot and stroke of sword was stricken on Niall, whereof he died quickly after that. And it is not easy [to say] that there came folk of their years of the Cenel-Conaill that were greater in heroic deeds than that pair.—The son of O'Briain, namely, Diarmait, son of the black Gillie, candle of the valour and hospitality of Dal-Cais, died².—A hosting by O'Domnaill, into Tir-Eogan this Summer, whereon he burned and traversed the level part of the country and went off safe.—A hosting by the Justiciary³, namely, Gerald, son of Gerald and by O'Neill, namely, Conn, son of Conn, to go into Tir-Conaill and camp was taken by them at Port-na-trinamat⁴. And O'Domnaill and the Conallian nobles and a large force of Scots whom he had were, another large host, along the Finn and Maghnus O'Domnaill and a party of the Scots went to discharge weapons at the host of the Earl in the night. And the son of O'Bruin⁵, namely, the Calbach, son of Brun, son of Tadhg, was slain by them—a great loss in his own country. And peace was made between them on the morrow, without much being destroyed in the country and they turned back into Tir-Eogain. And they found Aodh, son of Niall, son of Conn, lord of Trian-Conghail, [with] a large host, destroying the country and he disdained to go away suddenly and the thick

And not a triumph [lit. wonder] for his enemies was the overthrow; for he was the literary head of his own sept and the true well of generosity and protecting head of the order of poets and lightsome star of peace of the descendants of Aodh O'Neill the Tawny. And it is not exaggeration to say that he left not Foreigner or Gaidhel in Ireland who is more of a loss to all the learned than he himself alone.—Mac Carthaigh the Swarthy, namely, Domnall, son of Finghin⁶, was taken by the folk of Glenn-Flesgi⁷ and some of his people were slain⁸.—Mag Raghnaill, namely, Cathal junior, son of Cathal, was slain in treachery by the sons of O'Mailmiadhaigh.—Cumaighe the Freckled, son of Domnall O'Cathain, a good, noble person, was slain by the Route.—Cumuighi, son of Brian O'Cathain the Fair and Ferdorcha, son of Ruaidhri [O'Cathain] of the Route, were slain this year.—Aodh Carrach, son of the Western O'Dochartaigh and a party of his people were slain by O'Cathain, namely, Godfrey. — Mac Suibne of Tir-Boghuine, namely, Niall, son of Eogan, a constable who was hardy of hand and kept a good guest-house and large retinue, died a death of Uction this year.—The daughter of O'Domnaill, namely, Gormlaith, daughter of Aodh the Red, wife of Aodh, son of Niall, son of Conn [O'Neill the Tawny], to wit, a woman of general hospitality and wordly fame and who had in her time most affection for [religious] Orders and for folk of learning, died in Carraic-Ferghusa.—The daughter of O'Briain, namely, Mor, daughter of Toirdelbach, son of Tadhg, wife of the tanist⁹ of Thomond, died in this year.—The wife of O'Concobuir Kerry, namely, Eveleen, daughter of the Knight of the Glen, a woman prosperous, wealthy, and

And, after their labouring and much parley made by their friends of the Foreigners and Gaidhil against each other and for themselves, it resulted not in peace being made between them, but [in] going to their houses. And O'Domnaill went [with] a host twice into Tir-Eogain this year and much was destroyed by him in it and he was not encountered during those [raids]. And a patched-up peace was made between them in the beginning of Harvest and a promise to abide as the Earl of Kildare and Maghnus O'Domnaill should say.—A horrible deed was done in Ireland this year: to wit, the bishop¹ of Leithglinn was killed in treachery by the son² of the abbot, son of Mac Murchadha and he [lived] with [the bishop] himself from

 Otherwise, he would not have taken Ware's omission to outweigh

 The son of O'Ruaire, namely, Tadhg, son of Eogan, was slain in treachery by the people of his own brother.—O'Neill¹, namely, Conn and the son of O'Domnaill, namely, Magnus, went to meet the Earl of Kildare, namely, Gerald, son of Gerald, Justiciary of Ireland, in the Spring of this year, to make the peace of the Conalians and Eoganians. And, after the assembling of many of the nobles of the Foreigners and Gaidhil to pacify them, peace was not knit between them that time, but they went safe to their houses.—O'Raighilligh, namely, Eoghan, died this year and great war [arose] between his own sept respecting lordship of the country, until Fergal, son of John O'Raighilligh, was proclaimed O'Raighilligh, on recommendation of the Justiciary and many of the nobles of Foreigners and Gaidhil, although there were persons elder² than he pretending to it.—Great war arose in Lower Connacht this year: to wit, very great part of them joined against O'Domnaill under Brian, son of Feidhlimidh, son of Magnus O'Concobuir and under the son of Cathal O'Concobuir junior and under the descendants of Cormac Mac Donnchaidh. And great raids were made by them in Lower Cairpre on the persons that remained in the country. And O'Domnaill broke down the castle of the Grainsech in eric of those and he went after that into Magh-Luirg and the country was burned and destroyed by him and he and his host went off safe afterwards.—O'Neill, namely, Conn, went [with] a host to prevent the work of a castle³ which Magnus O'Domnaill began to build at Port-na-tri-namat. And O'Domnaill [was] in Lower Connacht and part of the horse-host of Magnus O'Domnaill overtook the head of the host and the son of John, son of Conn O'Neill, namely, branches of the O'Reillys, according to the law of tribal succession.

And O'Neill turned back without notable damage being done to him or being done by him, except like that.—That Sil-Concobuir⁴ and the Clann-Donnchaidh who were at war⁵ with O'Domnaill went around the castle of Sligech to destroy corn-fields and to attack the place. And O'Domnaill in some way got tidings of their being there and marched against them and overtook them and they were defeated by him and the son of Mac Donnchaidh and many others that are not reckoned here were taken from them. And many horses and arms and armour were taken from them also.—O'Cathain, namely, Godfrey, son of Godfrey, was slain by Niall, son of Art O'Neill junior, in the centre of Belach-an-camain⁶ and Niall himself was taken in a very short time after that by O'Neill.—The son of O'Cathain, namely, Godfrey, son of Donchadh, went on a raid march into Glenn-Concadhain⁷ and he was left [behind] there, namely, between the two Nativities. And tidings of his death were not got from that until end of the Lent⁸ next ensuing (that is, his corpse was found there, without⁹ [marks of] slaying by weapon on it). And Henry, son of Brian, lord of Baile-na-braghat¹⁰, was slain there and many of his people were dispersed and slain there with them.—Defeat was given by the son of Mac Piers to the sons of Edmond, son of Thomas Butler, a place in which were slain many of the horse-host and gallowglasses. And there was slain there Concobur junior, son of Concobur Blind[-eye] O'Domnaill, who was constable of gallowglasses and a good hand often and especially that day; for the amount of his courage and the excellence of his hand allowed him not to accept safety that day, on its being presented to him often.—O'Dochartaigh, namely, Echmarcach, lord of Inis-Eogain, died at end of his

out, only one, bearing B. with two more men and 50 maidens, reached Ireland. In time B. died and was buried on the mountain named after him (Occupations of I., L. L. 4b; Dinnsenchus, L. Be. 397b, 18–40).

went, side for side, to Dun-Gennain to meet each other, [1532 B.] so that the town, both wood and stone, both houses and furniture, both fort and fair habitation, was broken and dismembered, destroyed and deleted, overturned and prostrated, so that Foreigner or Gaidhel of those who saw [it] ever before recognised it not on the third day. The whole territory from border to border was harried and raided, punished and wasted, burned and totally destroyed by them. The herds and [other] cattle of the territory of O'Neill went in [their] entirety in fright and constant progress, until they reached the Mountain of Bith, son of Noah.¹³ These Gaidhil we mentioned before followed them, until they overtook them and carried off with them this cattle-spoil hard to count, until they came among the Foreigners. The beef was for the groat and a beef for every groat with the Foreigners that night. Foreigners and Gaidhil united their alliance and their friendship, their bonds and ratifications, with each other on the [next] day. The Foreigners returned to their keeps and the Gaidhil to their good houses with victory of overthrow and so on. Where O'Domnaill and Mac Domnaill of Scotland and their force with them were at that time is acquiring power in the Province of Medhbh¹⁴.—Great raids and unprecedented forays were made by Niall O'Neill junior on Raibhilin Mac Domnaill and they [the spoils] were carried into Fir-Manach by him.—The Earl of Kildare, namely, Gerald junior, came to Ireland in Spring this year and brought¹⁵ the authority of the king [Hen. VIII.] for a term of ten years with him. And citation was served on the Saxon Justiciary to draw him to the town of Ath-cliath and the Great Council sat there and the Saxon was sent, on account of the rights of the Foreigners, to the town of the king excess of his illegality and his injustice on them, so that [1534] this was the counsel the king and nobles of the Saxons adopted,—to put the Earl into the tower of London in anticipation of his ruin. As to the son and heir of the Earl, namely, Thomas⁴, son of Gerald: after hearing that, this is the counsel himself and his kinsmen and his friends of the Foreigners and Gaidhil decided on,—to make alliance of war against the king. After that counsel was heard of by the archbishop⁵ of the town of Ath-cliath and by the prior⁶ of Cell-Maighnenn,⁷ by the bishop⁸ of Meath and by many others who are not reckoned here, who had a part in putting the Earl in the place of his ruin, excessively great fear seized them, so that they left their lordship and their courts and their castles and every other wealth they had without custody, so that they fled from Ireland very quickly, cowardly, irresolutely, to go to Saxon-land, for fear and for great dread of the son of the Earl putting them to death in revenge of his father. As to the archbishop of the town of Ath-cliath, it is publicly related he went forth by a night journey to leave Ireland, with but a few of his people with him. And on his going into the ship at Benn-Edair⁹, the people of the son of the Earl overtook him and he was taken by them, without respect to his privilege or to his reverence, and excessive hardship was put on him and they carried him with them to Ard-aidhin [Artane], in proximity to Cluain-tarbh [Clontarf]. When the son of the Earl heard that thing, it pleased him: he made not rest, or stay, until he reached the place where the bishop was and he put on his people to do a prodigious, unprecedented, unmerciful deed, through which were destroyed fruit¹⁰ and crops and sea-product, peace and [1534] seasons and fair weather at that time,—to wit, to make equal, fairly-lopped quarters of the archbishop. So that that was the cause of the war we mentioned.—An untimely, hurtful deed was done in Fir-Manach Martinmas night [Nov. 11] precisely : to wit, Maghnus Ua Duibhgennain the Tawny, an eminent historian, was strangled and smothered and concealed in his own house by his own wife and by Brian, son of Toirdelbach Mag Uidhir. Tidings of that murder went through the territory and Brian fled into Oirghialla. And Flaithbertach, son of Philip, son of Toirdelbach, arrested that woman and arrested two other culprits who were [implicated] in that murder and gave them up to Mag Uidhir and Mag Uidhir burned those two in one day. And the woman, who was pregnant by her own husband, was put in prison until she brought forth that birth and was hung at the end. Two brothers of that Brian pursued him into Oirghialla and he was killed by them in treachery. And woe is the one who does murder, or deceit, to doom, after that murder and the excellence wherewith it was punished through miracles of God and Martin.

¹⁰ Fruit, etc.—That a just king caused salubrity and fecundity; an unjust, the reverse, was a belief prevalent in pagan Ireland. It likewise occurs in the Col. Can. Hib. (compiled before A.D. 725), with the title Patricius (XXV. De Regno, 3, 4); in the Tract, De abusioibus saeculi, assigned to St. Patrick,—which confirms the foregoing ascription (IX. Rex iniquus: ed. Villaneuva, 373); and in a Sermon to kings, on the text, Prov. xvi. 7 (L. B. 38b, 39a).

generosity and his humanity, died with victory of Uinction [1635] and penance.—Mag Uidhir, namely, Cu-Connacht, son of Cu-Connacht, went on a raid into Cenel-Feradhaigh² and great spoil was carried off by him from the country and from Clochar [town]. And he got not pursuit that day. The sons of Eogan O'Neill the Red pursued him that night and Mac Gaffraigh, namely, Feidhlimidh, son of Brian, son of William Mac Gaffraigh, was slain by them on the slope of Loch-serchaidh,³ on his being found there, [with] a few persons, kindling a fire and killing a beef of the spoil.—Ua Dobhilen, namely, John, died this year of fever.—A hosting by Tadhg,⁴ son of Tadhg, son of Aedh, to Magh-Ene and the Plain was burned by them. And they waited that night on the Plain and the son of O'Domnaill, namely, Donchadh the Carbrian and the sons of O'Baighill and the sons of Mag Flannchaidh went before them that night on Sgarb-insi-in-fraich.⁵ Howbeit, they did not attack the van of the host, [but] attack was made by them on the rear of the host and many of them were taken and some slain. The son of O'Ruaire, namely, Brian, sent⁶ messengers to Mag Flannchaidh to mention to him that he had peace with Tadhg junior and to say to him to liberate those prisoners on account of that peace. Plain of fleetness; Maynooth, co. Kild. A quatrain in L. L. (43a. The first distich is missing), attributes fleet pace, luathu ceim, to Cairpre (K. I., sl. c. A.D. 305, Td. Lct. III. 209). Overhead is a remark: Unde Magh-luadat in hUib-Faelain [barr. of Clane, Ikeathy and Oughteranny, Salt, N. and S., co. Kild.]; id est, Magh-nuadat hodie.

The Bk. Ar. (19a) has the items: D[omnach-]mór M[aige-]l[uadat]. Erc. The nexus is supplied by the Mar. Tal. (L. L. 364g); Oct. 27. Bp. Erc of D.-mor of M.-l. The Cal. Oen. likewise has Erc of D.-m.; which, the L. B. gloss states, is in

M.-l., in the N. of Ui-Faelain. This identifies D.-M. with Donoghmore, 2 miles E. of Maynooth. Similarly, Senan (Sep. 2, Mar. Tal., L. L. 362c; Cal. Oen.), according to L. B., is of Lathrach-Briuin, in Ui-Faelain (Laragh-Bryan, near Maynooth).

The change of name, it appears from the foregoing, took place between the beginning of the ninth century and the middle of the twelfth,—the respective dates of the Book of Armagh and the Book of Leinster.

O'Donovan's guess, "the plain of Nuadhat, a man's name" (v.

sold and betrayed⁸ by him to the Saxons, whilst the warders of the town were asleep and the majority of the warders were slain in their sleep and five, or six, clerics and priests⁹ were slain there. And, when they went into possession of the town, they brought that man who betrayed the town to them, into the presence of the Deputy of the king. And it was asked of him how long he could hold the town, if he had not betrayed it. And he said that he could hold it to the end of a year. After that, it was asked of him what the son of the Earl had done to him for which he did treachery on his lord. And he said that he never did anything in the world that was displeasing to him. And it was reproached to him that he did much injury to Foreigners along with the son of the Earl and the Saxons said it were fitter for him to do treachery on themselves, who gave nothing to him, than to do treachery on the son of the Earl, who gave much to him. And this is the sentence that was passed upon him,—everything that was promised to him, to give it to his father, for he did not treachery or deception, and the man that did the deceit and the foul treachery on his lord, to be put to death, on the plea that he would do more of 1420-1), is thus proved to be without foundation.

⁸ Betrayed. — “The castle . . . is said by Stanihurst to have been betrayed by Chris. Pareis; but in Skeffington’s own account . . . there is not the slightest allusion to any such betrayal; and, as the Irish annalists make no mention of it, we may easily believe it to be one of the many pure fabrications with which Stanihurst has embellished his narrative” (O’D. v. 1421).

But, having regard to the manner in which it was effected, the betrayal is not excluded by Skeffington’s account; whilst the present text, tallying with Stanihurst in every detail, save giving the reward to the father, disproves the inferential charge of fabrication.

The castle was taken “the 23rd day, being the Tewsdaye next before Eister Day” (Skef. and Council to Hen. VIII. St. P. ii. 230).

⁹ Clerics and Priests.—Of the choral-service college (cf. 1468, n. 4) of Maynooth (for which see E. of K. 87).

to find practised at so late a period), see Anc. Laws of I., I. s. v. Fasting. The offence, in all probability (ib. II. 71), was the removal, to prevent ordination, of a clerical student educated by the termoner, Magrath, for the service of the local church.

Cormac, son of Mag Uidhir: their advance-party went [1536] from Cuil-Mic-[T]i[gh]arnain to Doire-brosga and to Claen-inis and great damage was done by them on the churches and to the country of the territory.—The descendants of Art O'Neill [of Omagh] made a raid in Lurg and Philip the Stammerer, son of Cathal, son of Eogan Mag Uidhir and Donchadh, son of William O'Manchain the Black and Concobar, son of Ferghal O'Manchain and two sons of Feidhlimidh O'Maeladuin were slain in pursuit of that prey.—Mag Flannchaidh, namely, Feradhach, died of the small pox.—Niall Mag Ruaidbri and Donchadh, his brother, died of the same disease.—The monastery of the Friars of the town³ of O'Ruairc was burned and two friars, namely, Ereman Ua Domnaill and Mael-Sechlainn Mag Samradhain, were burned in it and much⁴ damage to the whole country was done in it.—Mag Craith of the Termon fasted⁵ on the sons of Aedh Blind[-eye] O'Neill, namely, on Failghe and on Mael-[-Sh]echlainn. Those sons and every muster they found made a raid [in consequence] on Mag Craith and the son of Mag Craith, namely, James the Tawny and Nicholas, son of the prior Mag Craith, were slain by them that day in revenge of that fasting.—John, son of Eogan O'Neill the Red, was taken by Art, son of Henry O'Neill the Stammerer and delivered up to Mag Uidhir and Mag Uidhir and the Clann-Gaffraigh hung him.—The sons of the Earl of Kildare, namely, James and Walter and Oliver and Richard and John, went⁶ to meet the deputy of the king, namely, Lord Leonard [Grey],

⁶ Went.—By invitation to a banquet, were arrested, Feb. 1536, and | sent to England (E. of K. 170).

They were taken all at one time and sent to Saxon-land and it seems to us that not well happened that.—The king of the Saxons made accusation against the queen⁸ that she committed adultery and she was put to death through that and her head was taken off her and he turned not himself from his error of Faith.—Flann Mac-Conmidhe, head of large flocks and herds, was slain in Trian-Congail by the Scots.—Gilla-espuic the Manly, son of Mac Domnaill of Scotland, was doing much injury throughout Trian-Congail. Niall junior, son of Niall, son of Conn [O'Neill], mustered the country and delivered an attack on them and Gilla-espuic himself and two score, or three, of his people with him were slain.—Mac Domnaill of Scotland, (namely, Alexander, son of John Cathanach) died.—Ua Cathain went on a raid on Mac Uibhilin. Word went to Mac Uibhilin and the whole country and the Scots were mustered by him and they went covertly to a certain place. Ua Cathain took the spoils of the country and put them before him. Mac Uibhilin fell in with them, in waiting for them and defeated them and the spoils were wrested from them and many of their people were slain and they returned not until the house of Ua Cathain was burned by them.—Thomas the Freckled, son of Andrew Mag Craith and John, son of Brian, son of Toirdelbach Mag Craith and Diarmaid, son of John Mag Craith, died this year.—A hosting was made by Ua Domnaill, with Mag Uidhir and with Niall Ua Neill junior, and with the sons of Ua Raighalligh and they went into Lower

⁹ Bishop.—See 1470, n. 22.

¹⁰ Maighen.—Plain; Moyne. The monastery (the ruins exist about a mile s. e. of Killala) was probably the first Irish foundation of Stricter Observance; having been built (F. M.) in 1460 by Lower Mac William for the Nehemias named above (1497, n. 17).

¹¹ Bishop.—Probably, the Richard

Connacht and were between [the rivers] Dubh and Drobhais the first night. Ua Domnaill proclaimed to the host to put watch and warders between them and the Connacian host that was mustered opposite them. Aedh the Tawny, son of Ua Domnaill, put a party of the descendants of bishop⁹ O'Gallchubair as wards and Ua Baighill [with] a few of his people with him went to watch [on the same side]. The two watches themselves fell in with each other and Ua Baighill by mischance was slain between them by one stroke of a javelin. The host became disordered because of that and had [it] not been [for] the excellence of the intervention, many would have fallen among them on account of the death of Ua Baighill. The host [then] went to Tir-Fiachrach and were there eight days, or nine, destroying the country. The sons of Ua Domnaill and Mag Uidhir and the sons of Ua Raghalligh went [with] eight, or nine, score of horsemen to Tir-Amalgaidh. Much damage was done by them around the monastery of the Maighen¹⁰ and great spoils were brought by them to the host. The host turned back, after Ua Domnaill making peace between bishop¹¹ Barrett and the sons of John de Burgh. Frequent fighting took place between those¹² hosts and not much damage was done between them. Ua Domnaill went to his house without peace, without truce.—A hosting by Ua Neill and Niall Ua Neill junior around the Cargin¹³ and on the plain of the Old Castle¹⁴. Much corn was destroyed by them. Ua Neill went from that to Oirecht-Ui-Cathain and to Trian-Congaill. Niall junior went to the Luchtighi¹⁵ of Ua Neill and was a day and night burning there of Killala who sent a procurator to a provincial synod at Galway in 1523 (Ware, 615-52).

 Macanamha,¹ namely, Tadhg, died this year.—A hosting by Ua Neill on Niall junior. Niall and his flocks and herds fled on the mountains of Tir-Aedha and towards the Termon of Mag Craith. Ua Neill pursued them and his advance party went to Port-na-garbharda² and to Cois-Deirgi and great spoils were carried off by them. Ua Neill and Niall made peace that same day and restitution was made of all the spoils and Mag Aenghusa, who was in custody with Niall, was given for the spoils to Ua Neill and gossipred was made between Ua Neill and by his sons with Niall. Ua Neill returned to his house spiritedly, cheerfully.—Art junior, son of the prior³ Mag Aenghusa, was slain this year.—Alexander, son of Mac Domnaill, namely, son of Rughraidhe, died this year.—Brian, son of Cormac O'Cianain, an eminent stringed instrumentalist, died this year.—James Savage the Red drew the Saxons on the son of Jenkin Savage and the son of Jenkin and 16 men with him were slain there and his castle was taken by them.—Ua Domnaill, namely, Aedh, son of Aedh Ua Domnaill the Red, died⁴ in the end of Summer of this year. And there came not from Brian Boruma downwards a king that was of better sway and rule than he. And his son, namely, Magnus, was made Ua Domnaill.—Mag Uidhir, namely, Cu-Connacht, son of another Cu-Connacht, the man who got most power over Eoganians and over Conallians and over Oirgiallians and over Brefnians and over every neighbour of those who were around him, was slain⁵ in treachery by Flaithbertach, son of Philip, son of Toirdelbach Mag Uidhir

And God turned on the folk of the treachery, although they were 15 men and the other people only 4. Muircertach, son of Gilbert, after being greatly bruised, went off in despite and greater was the injury he did than what was done on him. The dark Damsel, daughter of O'Domnaill, wife of Oliver de Burgh, died this year.—Ua Gairmleghaidh, namely, Edmond the Black, was deposed this year and Rughruidhe was made Ua Gairmleghaidh.—The church of Machaire-na-croissi⁷ and the church of Cell-Sgire were burned this year.—Great defeat was inflicted by O'Conchobair Faly on the Saxons and on the Saxon Justiciary. And the Justiciary was attempted to be killed by the Saxons. His church was set on fire because they [he and his retinue] would be found [there] to [the precise] number; but it came through prodigies and marvel of God that themselves [his enemies] all were burned and the church was not burned.—Art junior, son of Art, son of Conn O'Neill, died this year.

 nall himself was taken on the morrow and three sons of Donchadh the [Ui-] Manian were slain in revenge of that slaying.—A great rumbling quivering came in the air in Fir-Manach in the beginning of Harvest and a great shower of hailstones fell in it, and whatever that shower touched of the crops, they were all destroyed.—A hosting relics of Patrick and Colum-cille and Brigit and the image of Catherine were carried off by them. And the Saxon captain took the image with him to the green of the castle of Dun-a-droma¹⁸ and he himself went into the castle and there was a hole¹⁹ in the castle and that man fell into it through miracles of God and Catherine, with-

Mac Domnaill went to meet Ua Neill and made peace with him.—Ua Domnaill was in the town¹ of Ua Neill about the beginning² of Lent of the year.—Foul treachery was done in Oirghialla: to wit, Rughraidhe, son of Redmond Mag Mathgamna junior, went into the monastery of Muinechan, whilst Brian of the early-[1539] rising was to make a [raid-]march on him.³ Brian took him from the monastery out—and he had gossiped with him—and slew him wickedly. And it was he himself that came out of his own will, after safety [being promised].—Ua Neill, namely, Conn, son of Conn, son of Henry, son of Eoghan, was, about the Easter of this year, in Dun-na-Gall, in the town of Ua Domnaill, namely, in the town of Magnus, son of Aedh, son of Aedh the Red and firm peace was made by them with each other for their own time on the relics of the monastery of the Friars, to aid one another against every one.

More was done in this year, to wit: Cormac Mag Uidhir, the unique son of a king that, of those who were in the same time as he, was best of hand and nobleness, was slain by his own retinue, namely, by Cobhtach Mac Samradhain and by the Muintir-Dobhilen and by the descendants of Aedh, son of Philip, the 26th day of the month of April.—A hosting by the Saxon Justiciary against Ua Neill about May Day and they were two nights in Ard-Macha and the descendants of Aedh O'Neill asked of him not to destroy, or to burn, the town of his own patron and the Justiciary took their advice after that and truce of a fortnight was made by them with Ua Neill.—James, son of Thomas, son of Cormac Mag Uidhir, was slain by the black Gillie, son of Cathal, son of Eoghan and by

The gloomy Gillie O'Flannagain, namely, son of Aodh, son of the parson of Inis,¹ died. And he that shall read let him bestow benison on [his] soul.

Kalends of Jan. on [Thur., 21st of moon], A.D. 1551. [1551]
The parson of Inis, namely, Edmond O'Flannagain, one who was full of intelligence and of knowledge and of every virtue beside and kept a good guest-house, died this year.

A.D. 1564. Thomas, son of Oliver,¹ son of Earl Gerald, [1564 B.] the man of his time that was best of hand and humanity of the Foreigners of Ireland, died this year. And sad for the learned folk of Ireland is that death.

Kalends of Jan. [on Fri., 12th of moon], A.D. 1580. [1580 B.]
The daughter of Cu-Connacht, son of another Cu-Connacht [Maguire], died: an excellent woman, charitable, truly hospitable to the poor of God and to [bardic] bands and retinues and to pilgrims and to permanent beggars, to erudite and to ollams, to every one of those that were wont to be seeking largess throughout Ireland. She obtained a [good] death with Unction and penance, according to the Catholic Faith. And may God do mercy on her soul, as He will do that for the amount of one's [good] deeds. Namely, wife of Brian, son of Aodh Mag Maghnusa junior [was she].

(END OF VOL. III.)

Kalends of Jan.¹ [on Sun., 18th of moon], A.D. 1584. [1584 B.] Brian, son of Donchadh Mag Uidhir, the son of a king that was of best hospitality and prowess, spirit and bravery and was of best knowledge of every science, died this year. And he that shall read, let him bestow benison on [his] soul.

Kalends of Jan. [on Wed., 10th of moon], A.D. 1586. The [1586] 26th day of the month of October, Eoghan Ulltach, son of the doctor,¹ namely, Donchadh, son of Eoghan, unique preceptor and unique sage of Ireland in healing, died this year.

Kalends of Jan. [on Fri., 2nd of moon], A.D. 1588. The [1588 B.] son of Redmond Mag Uidhir the Brefnian, namely, Gilla-Padraig, was slain between the two feasts¹ of Mary. And [it happened thus:] he went with Mag Uidhir before that and fell by the host of O'Domnaill. Namely, an eminent hospitaller² and a man who kept a guest-house and a person who defended his part of the territory in every way, such as leadership and going against Foreigners every other day for the sake of the territory [was he].—The black Gillie, son of John, son of Philip Mag Uidhir, was slain by one shot of bullet by the Saxons whom the Oirgiallians had,³ on the son of Mag Uidhir, namely, Aodh, son of Cu-Connacht, son of Cu-Connacht, son of Cu-Connacht, going on raid on them. And they defeated the Oirgiallians and the Saxons without injury to themselves, except that good noble man, namely, the son of John.—Ua Concubhair of Sligech, namely Domhnall, son of Tadhg, son of Cathal Ua Concubhair junior, died⁴ this year.

INTRODUCTION.

THE present Chronicle, anonymous in the original, received the accepted title from Ussher, who (in his Original of Corbes, Herenaches and Termon Lands, Religion professed by the Ancient Irish, Collection of Irish Epistles and Antiquities of the British Churches) frequently cites or refers¹ to the Annales Ultonienses: obviously led to the designation by the marked prominence assigned to the affairs of Ulster. More in accord with native tradition, the Attestation² prefixed to the Annals of the Four Masters mentions, among the sources of that collection, the Book of Senad of Mac Manus of [Upper] Lough Erne; Shanid, or Bellisle, being the residence of the Compiler.

*Annals of Ulster,

The originals and versions employed in this Edition, designated for brevity A, B, C, D, are the following:—

A.—A is a vellum MS., of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, marked H. 1. 8. It consists of 116 folios. The first four gatherings are quinternios, each of ten folios. No. 5, at first a quinternio, is now a quaternio and folio (fol. 41—49), the second half of the second membrane (containing A.D. 1001—1008) having been cut out. After No. 5, a quire, most probably a quinternio (from end of 1115 to beginning of 1162, both inclusive), is missing. No. 6 and 7 are quinternios (foll. 50—69).

British Churches (vi.): 254, 278, 422, 430, 438, 444, 445, 447, 484, 533, 540.

² Attestation—Annals of IV. M., ed. O'Donovan (Dublin, 1851), Introd., p. lxiv.; O'Curry, MS. Materials, etc., p. 545.

The final year is 1504. As C ends with this year likewise, A, it may be inferred, was not carried farther.

Script,—
preparation for,

At present, the original dimensions having been reduced in binding, the folios are 12 inches long, by 9 in width. They are ruled in thirty-seven lines in ink, about a quarter of an inch apart. The writing space is in two columns, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches in respective breadth, defined by two lines each, with an intermediate space three-fourths of an inch wide. Initials are regularly written on the margins. The letter K is rudely rubricated, in some of the opening folios, by colouring the spaces formed by the junction of the right strokes with the left hand line. Other capitals are occasionally similarly treated.

execution
of.

The script was mainly the work of two hands: the first, from folio 1 to folio 49; the second, from 50 to 102. A third, very coarse and large, wrote folios 103, 104 and three entries on 110d. A fourth executed from fol. 105, with the three exceptions just noted, to the end.

Additional entries.

Finally, on the blanks left, in the usual way, between the years for additions and on the margins, a court hand, evidently of the Compiler (who else would have been at pains to record the birth-days of his children?), made entries, some in Irish, others in Latin. Here and there, items have been re-inked, by one unacquainted with Latin, to judge from the fact that the words in that language are left untouched.

History
of MS.

Of the history of the MS., beyond the fact that it was not in the collection presented, at the instance of Burke,¹ by Sir John Seabright to Trinity College, nothing has been ascertained. The statement that it belonged to Ussher is disproved by a letter² of Ware

¹ Burke.—"It was in the hope that some such thing [printing ancient Irish historical texts with translations] should be done, that I originally prevailed on Sir John Seabright to let me have his MSS., and that I sent them by Dr Leland to Dublin."—Letter to Vallancey, Aug.

15. 1783 (O'Donovan: Irish Grammar, Dublin, 1845, Introd. p. lxxi.).

² Letter—Ussher's Works, xvi. 461. From the opening it can be inferred that most of the native sources were supplied by Ware, "to let you have the view of all such old manuscripts concerning

(Sep. 21, 1627), in which, after stating that he was sending the Book of Leinster, he wrote: "I have now a special occasion to use my Ulster Annals and the Annals of Innisfallen; I entreat your Grace to send them me by this bearer." The source of the extracts given in the above-named works is thus identified as the MS. next described.

B.—B is a vellum MS., of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, marked Rawlinson, B. 489. Originally, it was made up of fifteen gatherings, numbering 124 folios¹; i.e., thirteen quaternios (104 foll.) and two quinternios (20 foll.). The two inner membranes of the seventh quire (from A.D. 1132 to near the end of 1155) are missing. In reference thereto, a note, probably of Sir James Ware, appears on the upper margin of fol. 51 (formerly 55): "Fower leaves are wanting before this." The final leaf of the ninth gathering and the last of the fifteenth were cut away. The present number of folios is accordingly 118.

The structure of the two quinternios is as follows:—

Gathering 11 (foll. 76—85).

I.

the affairs of this kingdom which come unto me; especially knowing the good use your grave and deep judgment may make of them."

¹ 124 folios.—"In its present state," O'Connor, copying the old Latin Catalogue, writes, "the folios of this MS. are precisely 126" (Stowe Catalogue, Buckingham, 1818-19, p. 175).

This shows that a was inserted into IV.; b, between III. and IV.: each with the turn to the left hand.

Gathering 12 (foll. 102—111).

It thus appears that a and b were single leaves, inserted between III. and IV.

Script,—
preparation for,

The folios, having been diminished by trimming, are 13 inches in length, by $9\frac{1}{2}$ wide. The ruling is in 40 lines, a quarter of an inch asunder: in ink, as far as fol. 32, inclusive; thenceforward, by impression, whilst the parchment was damp. The page is of double columns, which are bounded, and of the same size, as in A, and five-eighths of an inch apart. Between the years, spaces, varying from one to five lines, were left for additional entries. When, as is the rule, the ferial and epact are omitted, a blank remains for them; if either is given, a void is reserved for the other. Capitals are ornamented by colouring in red, and occasionally in blue. Numerals are indifferently Roman and Arabic; apparently, the forms that first recurred to memory were employed.

execution of.

The script was done chiefly by two hands: the first ends at fol. 32a (A.D. 932); the second, at 111b A.D. 1528.) Commencing with fol. 101d, a third made the entries as indicated in the Notes A.D. 1507. At 111c

A.D. (1528), the bad writing¹ of the "son of O'Casidy" began and went on to the end. Finally, Matthew O'Luinin entered the items at the places mentioned under his name in the Index.

Opposite, on the margins, the scribes placed the names of many of the persons and localities mentioned in the text. A fifth hand, presumably of Rury O'Casidy, the summarist, wrote on the reverse of folio 2, across the page, at foot, a doggerel native quatrain, to the effect that Patrick preached during sixty years, with many miracles, in Ireland; adding, in prose, that the same number of years is given, in the *Speculum*² Historiarum, by Vincent (of Beauvais, Bellovacensis), who likewise states that the Saint raised 43 to life, built 365 churches, consecrated 365 bishops, ordained 3,000 priests, and baptized 12,000 persons.

The MS. was in possession of Sir James Ware. His name occurs thrice on the final folio, and, on the back, the book is stated to have been re-covered by him, ultimo Septemb., 1639. On the front cover he has given, in nearly all cases erroneously, Latin equivalents of Irish words, and noted throughout, on the margin, opposite the entries in question, the names of bishoprics and such remarks as Factum Anglicum, Factum Hibernicum, Factum mixtum, relative to the doings of the Anglo-Irish.

The volume was next in the Clarendon Collection, and was purchased³ at the Chandos sale by Dr. Rawlinson for the sum of half-a-guinea! "The cover⁴ bears a Versions:

C,— C I, description of.

C.—C is an English Version of the Irish (with retention of the Latin text) of the Annals: (I.) 431 to the first item of 1132; (II.) 1156 to 1307; (III.) 1486 to 1504. I. and II. are contained in a paper MS. of the seventeenth century in the British Museum, Clarendon xlix (Add. MS. 4795). Prefixed is a modern insertion of four folios. On the back of the first of these, are pasted three paper slips containing obits, which, in all probability, were written on the inside of the original cover. On the reverse of the second, is attached the same book-plate as in B. The third has, in front, at the top, Annales Ultonienses; under these words, to the right, Jer. Milles; beneath, in the same hand, on centre of page: Annales Ultonienses, ab an. 431 ad an. 1303 [-1307], ex sermone Hibernico Anglice reddit. Below is a book-plate: armorial bearings, with motto, Utile dulci and Jeremiah Milles, D.D. (doubtless, the antiquary, 1713—1784, dean of Exeter). The fourth leaf is vacant.

Script.

The writing is in two columns, and the folios, beginning with the present fifth, are numbered from 1 to 85. As far as fol. 65, no less than ten hands are discernible, making it probable that some of them worked simultaneously. The surmise is borne out by the fact that fol. 60b has the script reversed: the page was inadvertently turned upside down before being written upon. An occurrence of the kind would be well nigh impossible in the case of a bound volume; whence it is to be inferred that the sheets were loose during transcription. I. ends on fol. 65, with the first entry of 1132. The ferial and epact of that year are the solitary instances of these criteria copied into the Version. Thence to 69b (nine pages), inclusive, is left vacant. The lacuna in B, it thus appears, was anterior to the execution of C, and hope still remained of recovering the missing original.

II. extends from fol. 70a to 85a, written by one hand. C II., commencing: *Hibernia nostra astate in provincias few instances, details found in neither are inserted.

historical tracts in the British Museum, Clarendon xx (Add. MS. 4784). It begins on folio 21a and ends on folio 32b. The author occasionally drew from other sources, which have, as far as possible, been identified in the Notes.

With regard to the relation between the Irish texts, A & B, in addition to the statement in the obit of Mac Manus, relation between.
the Compiler, that B was written from A, the Notes throughout furnish abundant proof that the latter was the original. The extent to which B was a compendium can be easily estimated from the folio notation placed on the margins of Volumes II. and III. That in a work of the kind the narrative should be abridged, is readily intelligible; no plausible reason presents itself to account for the omission of whole items.

In the matter of authorship, as to A, in his obit at Authorship:
1498, it is stated that the compilation was the work of of A,—

Mac

cally promoted,

canonist,

Cathal, or Charles, Mac Manus. He was chief of a junior branch of the sept of Maguire, vicar of Inishkeen, and dean of the rural deanery of Lough Erne,¹ in his native diocese of Clogher, and resided in the stronghold of the clan, on Shanad, now called Bellisle, an island in Upper Lough Erne, co. Fermanagh. Of the items in the extravagant panegyric bestowed upon him, *chastity*² was obviously intended to palliate the fact, revealed by the birth of his sons—Cu-Connacht, in 1485; Maghnus, in 1486—two and three years respectively after the father became dean, that Mac Manus was a concubinary. It discloses a most serious relaxation of discipline to find a cleric so incapacitated³ not alone suffered to officiate, but advanced to dignity of judicial and executive function.

That he was a canonist, is evidenced by the office he held; by his reference to the Gloss⁴ in the Clementines; and by the obits he inserted of eminent jurists. In view of the chastening fact that, as abundantly shown later on, critics of the greatest acumen have been imposed upon by the most clumsy forgeries, failure to detect the fabricated character of the Theodosian charter⁵ mentioned in the Gloss in question cannot be laid to his disparagement. But he is proved to have lacked the true historical spirit in the omission to record textually the Papal Mandate¹ respecting the Purgatory of St. Patrick, directed to himself and the Franciscan Guardian of Donegal, and the pursuant decision to which they gave such speedy, albeit transitory, effect.

The A.D. of the Corroboration betrays the ignorance of the fabricator: Sigillum nostrum impendentes fecimus auri purissimi munitione roborari Anno Domini ccccxxxiii.!

Respecting the well known error in the A.D. numeration of these Annals, it can be rightly pleaded that where Ussher (not to mention O'Donovan, Reeves and Todd) failed, Mac Manus may be excused for not having succeeded. Withal, it seems difficult to reconcile the adoption of the Mundane and Christian Eras hereinafter described with any accurate conception of chronographic data. The sole extenuation is that the items were transcribed without alteration.

The sustained similarity between these and the other native Annals proves that the work of Mac Manus consisted in selection, mainly with reference to Ulster events, from the Chronicles he had collected. His well applied diligence in this direction merits ample acknowledgment. Nor does historical zeal exhaust his claim to recognition. Unlike O'Clery and his associates, he neither tampered with the text, vitiated the dating, nor omitted the solar and lunar notation, but, side by side with the chronological errors he was unable to correct, preserved the criteria whereby they can with certainty be rectified.

With regard to the authorship of B, in the obit and notices of Rury O'Luinin, *to write*² is used in the primary meaning, denoting the work of transcription;

but in the B-reading relative to the Annals in the obit of Mac Manus, it has the secondary sense, to compose. As the archdeacon of Clogher would hardly serve as copyist for a lay termener of the diocese, when Rury O'Casidy is said to have written B, the obvious signification is that he was the author of that recension. The expression *for the greater part*¹ refers to items supplied by other hands, beginning with 1507.

C,— ated,

Respecting C, in the absence of A, and with an imperfect and worthless edition of B, O'Donovan's extravagant eulogy² of this so-called Version perforce passed current. But comparison with the texts has established, what otherwise would have been incredible, that the numerous instances detailed in the Notes give no adequate notion of the persistent and ludicrous blunders, betraying the Translator's utter lack of acquaintance with the ancient language. Irrespective hereof, the omission of personal and local names would, in very many cases, have rendered the labour useless for historical purposes.

Conry

The travesty, it has been surmised, was executed for the use of Ussher or Ware. This has given origin to a second conjecture of alternative attribution to Duald Mac Firbis and Tully Conry, who were known to the Archbishop and the Auditor-General. The claim of Mac Firbis (who turned an abbot of Iona into an *abbess*³ and Martinmas into a *March day*⁴) is effectually barred by the intelligible variants in the Latin entries. Thus, apparently, the dubious honour belongs to Conry, "who"⁵

Concerning D, Lynch, the "author" in question, whose competence to judge is sufficiently indicated by the foregoing decision, O'Donovan considers it not improbable, executed¹ a Latin rendering of the Annals of the Four Masters from 1545 to 1558. Taken in connexion with the fact that most of the additions in D are drawn from the same Annals, this would lead to the inference that Lynch was likewise the author of that version. What may be taken as confirmation is that it is contained in the same MS. (Clarendon xx.) as D. Be that as it may, the manner in which archaic turns of expression are misunderstood and similar omissions of names depress D to the level of C. The truth is, owing to causes too well known to need recapitulation, knowledge of the ancient tongue (witness C, D, F, O'Clery's Glossary, Colgan's translations, and Keating's History) had died out in Ireland in the seventeenth century.

[In addition, in E. 3. 20, T. C. D., a collection of historical tracts written on folio paper by various hands in the seventeenth century, the thirteenth item² (p. 431-514) is a copy (E) of A from the beginning to A.D. 665 [666], with a Latin version (F) to 491. E is on the left-hand pages; F, on the right. From p. 448, where F terminates, to the end, the right-hand pages are blank. The transcript, it thus appears, was made with the intention of having a translation supplied. A note³ on p. 430 (p. 1 of the Tract) indicates

² Thirteenth item.—The Catalogue of MSS. (Dublin, 1900, p. 92), by a strange oversight, describes the contents as: "Annales Ultonienses a Christo nato ad ann. 1663 (Annals of Ulster)."

Monck-Mason's Catalogue is partly inaccurate and partly accurate: "Sequentia latine scripta caractere vero Hibernico excerpta sunt ex Annalibus Ultoniens:

Orig. annales ab A.D. 431 usque ad annum 665."

³ Note. — Sequentia Latine scripta, caractere vero Hibernico, sunt excerpta ex annalibus

the contents as Latin excerpts from the Annals of Ulster. The error was doubtless due to casual observation and the paucity of entries in the native tongue.

To judge from the handwriting of Tenebræ and Coelum, on the margin opposite Tebræ and Cim of the first entry of 663 [664] (p. 523), the work was executed for Ussher.

[E,— writer and errors of,] E, the script proves at once, was copied by the above-named Duald Mac Firbis. Hence errors such as the following. A.D. 431. Palladius . . a Celestino . . ordinatus episcopus, A ; Paladius . . a Celestinos . . ordinatus episcopus, E (p. 431). A.D. 444. Ab urbe condita usque ad hanc civitatem [Ardmacham] fundatam m. cxc. iiii., A ; Ab urbe, etc., iiii. cccc. iiii.,¹ E (p. 435. F has correctly, either from another text or by calculation, 1194).

[value of.] In fact, the sole redeeming feature of the fragment is the true lection of the apophthegm prefixed to the Annals, Mei est incipere, Dei est finire. Afterwards the original became illegible; whence the infelicitous guess Tui (for Dei).

[F,— errors and suggested author of.] F, a few and not the worst instances will sufficiently show, is of a piece with E. A.D. 438. Senchus Mor was written, A ; multi Annales editi sunt, F (p. 434), A.D. 453. Cathroineadh, defeat (literally, battle-rout) A ; proelium apud Roined, F (p. 438). A.D. 485.

Ultoniensibus. Confer Usserii Primordia, p. 855 (edit. 4^o), cum his Annalibus, p. 436, ad A.D. 444. Confer etiam Warei Scriptores cum p. 442 horum Annalium ad ann. 467 et 468 et alibi.

¹ Iiii. cccc. iiii.—This, it is but fair to add, must yield to iiii. m. cc., made in a transcript of Tigernach (Revue Celtique, Jan. 1896, p. 26) out of uu. cc., attached to the consuls in the entry relative to the Nicene Council taken from the Chronicon of Bede. The same error is found in two of the Chronicon MSS. (Migne, P.L., xc., 555). The curves of uu being abraded or indistinct, the four strokes were mistaken for thousands!

From the Bodleian MS. in question, O'Connor (R.H. SS. II. 63) rightly read VV. CC. In the Tigernach Fragment (of which hereafter) bound up with H.1.8, the reading is correct: Paulini et Juliani, uirorum clarorum (fol. 4a).

Noigiallaigh, (of Niall) of the nine hostages, A ; cogno-mento regis novem populorum, F (p. 446). Whence we shall probably not widely err in attributing F to the author of D.]

The Annals to 1131 were printed, with a Latin version and Notes, by Rev. Dr. Charles O'Connor, in the fourth volume¹ of his Rerum Hibernicum Scriptores Veteres. His text is taken from B, which, without examining A, he pronounced² offhand to be the original! Whoever has had to toil through this work must admit that the severe judgment of Reeves³ respecting O'Connor's Tighernach applies with still greater justice to his Annals of Ulster. "It is so corrupt, so interpolated, so blundered, that it is extremely unsafe to trust the text, while it is certain mischief to follow the translation." His rendering, in fact, though he is careful to conceal the fact, is mainly derived from C.

A single typical instance will suffice. At A.D. 815, the pillaging of Clooncraff⁴ (co. Roscommon) is recorded. Orgain (pillaging) C took to signify the taking away of the organs. This O'Connor turned into *direptio organorum*⁵; whilst, to prove that such an entry does not prejudice the authenticity of the Annals, he subjoined second-hand references to early writers who mention the employment of organs in church services. Thenceforward, the organs of the church of Clooncraff were accepted as well established by the crowd of second-hand writers on early Irish Church History. It never seems to have occurred to the discoverer or those who

Another entry (the death of Osbran, its bishop-anchorite, at 752) exhausts mention of the place in the Annals. It may be the Clooncraff mentioned in the Tripartite (Part II.) and the Irish Index of the Book of Armagh (fol. 19a).

In the *Chronicles*¹ of the Picts and Scots, Skene gave the entries relating, in his opinion, to Scotland, from 434 to 1362. Apparently following O'Connor, he erroneously assigned first place to B, with which he collated A. An English version, without annotation, is supplied. Some Scottish items escaped his notice; others, given as Scottish, do not belong to that country. Text and translation respectively betray imperfect acquaintance² with Irish palaeography and linguistic.

Annalistic
constituents.

The Annals present five distinctive features: (I.) the ferial incidence of Jan. 1; (II.) lunar incidence of same; (III.) Mundane Reckonings; (IV.) A.D. numeration; (V.) and entries. Their respective origin and contribution towards the formation of the Chronicle are to be set forth.

I.
Ferial numbers,
origin of.

I.—The Ferial Numbers denoted the week-days on which the month-days, commencing with Jan. 1, the beginning of the Julian year, fell. 1 was Sunday, and so on, to 7, Saturday. That, for liturgical purposes, the early Christians adopted a modification of the Jewish system and named the days of the week, beginning with Sunday, by the nos. 1 to 7, appears from the Paschal Lunar Table of Hippolytus, drawn up in 222. Thenceforward, without intermission to the present day, the numerical has been the prevailing week-day designation in the Church.

² Imperfect.—At A.D. 560, secundum alios is read fere alios, the contraction for the preposition being mistaken for fere (p. 344. Cf. present ed., I. 56, n. 2). A similar, but worse, error occurs at A.D. 583, which it would take too much space to rectify (p. 345. Cf. this ed. I. 69, n. 10). At 918, the Annals are made to state that the Waterford Foreigners were expelled from Ireland. The original is that they left Ireland (do deirgiu Ereann). They went, in fact, to fight the battle of the Tyne (p. 363. Cf. this ed. I. 437, text. In note 3 on p. 436, another error of Skene is rectified).

A Julian Calendar¹ dating, according to one of the two extant fragments, B.C. 19, had (prefixed to, and in manifest imitation of, the Roman nundinal letters, a—h) the series a—g. The insertion was intended to mark the recurrence of the Sabbath. This being the seventh day, the letters would in time serve likewise to designate the Christian week-days. But even had they been known to Hippolytus, to incorporate them in a Greek document would be too incongruous.

In a Julian Calendar transcribed by Furius Dionysius Filocalus (known otherwise as a calligrapher in connexion with Catacomb Inscriptions²) and included in the Chronography of 354 (a collection of historical tracts chiefly ecclesiastical), the sole Christian feature (with exception perhaps of the Lunar Letters, of which hereafter) is the insertion³ (side by side with and preceding the nundinals) of a—g, in fifty-two series, with a opposite Dec. 31, to denote the days of the Christian week.

In a Julian, and mostly Christian, Calendar arranged by Polemius Silvius,⁴ in the consulship of Postumianus and Zeno (A.D. 448), the two series no longer appear. With the imperial abolition of the eight-day week¹ under Constantine, the nundinals lost all significance; with planetary names (Sunday, etc.) in civil, and numbered feriae in church, life, hebdomadal letters became equally superfluous. Imagine the deacon announcing in St. John Lateran, on the first Sunday of Lent, that the Station would be held at St. Peter ad Vincula, on feria B; at St. Anastasia, on feria C! At what date they were reintroduced for the purposes mentioned below, appears uncertain.

Ferials serve to indicate the week-day incidence by calculation and by inspection. The first method requires data such as those given in Diagram A; the second, a Calendar. Less laborious, the ocular process would naturally supersede the mental. A glance down two columns—one, the hebdomadal; the other, the menstrual, notation—twelve times juxtaposed, of the *Calendar of Charlemagne*² (A.D. 781) will suffice to explain how numerals came to be replaced by letters. probability, an independent invention. Ferial letters, however, serve their chief function in the domain of Technical Chronology. To what extent they have been made available can be estimated from the fact that, with all their eminence in Mathematical Chronology, neither Petavius nor Ideler constructed a reduction Table!

Sunday being the first and chief day of the Christian week, the letters have been generally named Dominical, though Ferial Letters is the correct designation. If New Year's day falls on Sunday, the Dominical Letter of the year is A, and every day before which A stands is Sunday, including the final day. Next year will thus begin on Monday, and the first Sunday will be Jan. 7, having the letter G, which becomes the Dominical of the year. In this way, in marked contrast with the Feriats, the Dominicals are used in retrograde order.

Dominical
Letters,

In connexion with the Feriats, numbers 1 to 7 were likewise employed to denote the week-day concurrence of March 24 with Jan. 1. These—perhaps a Western invention, dating, it may be, from the time when the earliest Roman Easter was March 25—were called Concurrents, and arose from the Julian year as follows. When Jan. 1 is Sunday, March 24 will be Friday. Friday being the 6th week-day, this is Concurrent 6 = Dominical Letter A. When Jan. 1 falls on Monday, March 24 will fall on Saturday, giving Concurrent 7 = Dominical Letter G. So on with the other days, the difference between Ferial and Concurrent being uniformly 5, except in leap-year, when the additional day makes it 6. The four series are the following:—

If every year consisted of only 52 weeks and a day, the foregoing would all recur each 8th year, forming hebdomadal cycles. But the sequence is interrupted by the insertion, every 4th year, of the Julian bissextile day. This gives a recurrence of 28 (7×4), as in the subjoined Diagram, or Rota, in which No. 1 represents A.D. 1.

Rules to find Ferials,
etc.

(1) To find the Ferial No., Concurrent and Dominical Letter of any A. D., divide the given year by 28: remainder is the soli-cyclic No.; if 0 remains, 28 is the No. In the section denoted by the No., stand the required criteria, in the order in which they are here named.

(2) To find the Concurrent, divide the A. D. No., plus the even fourth, plus 4, by 7: remainder is the Concurrent; if 0 remains, 7. E. g. (A. D. 27 + 6 + 4) ÷ 7 leaves 2, the requisite Concurrent.

(3) To find the Dominical Letter, take the Concurrent (found by Rule 2) from 7, the difference denotes the Letter in the direct order, A—G. In A. D. 27, for instance, $7 - 2 = 5 = E$ (fifth letter). (In leap-year, the next following is the Dominical for Jan. 1—Feb. 24.) If the Concurrent is 7, the Letter is G.

The chief use of the Ferials, in addition to marking ^{Ferials,} the Sundays, is to find the week-day, or the moon's age, ^{use of.} of a given day of any month. In connexion herewith, as a mnemonic aid, a continuous numeration of the days of the year was made, by Kalends, Nones, Ides, and last days of months. The earliest known instance is found in the Irish spurious Anatolius, hereafter described. The computation, minus the D and E columns, is given (copied, most likely, from this "holy man") by Bede, who describes it as handed down on the authority of elders.¹ Tabulated it is as follows:—

Calendas dierum, luna vel feria dignoscenda repertum, aliquante quidem gravius ad discendum, sed

For verifying the notation, solar and luni-solar, of the Annals, this Table has the great utility of enabling a Calendar to be dispensed with. The solar Rules are :

Rules to reduce month-to weekdays.

(1) From the figure in the A, B, or C column, if the required day is Kal., Non., or Id., subtract 1, otherwise subtract the No. (2, 3, etc.) by which it precedes Kal., Non., or Id., add the ferial (found by Table A), plus 1, after Feb. 24, in leap-year, divide by 7: what remains, or (if 0 remains) 7, is the requisite feria, or week-day, of the day of the month. E.g., A.D. 919, Niall Black-knee was slain, in the battle of Dublin, on the 17th of the Kalends of October, 4th feria. Oct. in Kal. $274 - 17 = 257$. Adding the ferial, 6 (No. 23, Table A), and dividing by 7, we have remainder 4, i.e., Wednesday (Sep. 15).

(2) When the day of a month is reckoned directly, add its number, minus 1 (except in leap-year, after Feb. 24), to the figure of the same month in column D, and proceed as in Rule 1. E.g., to find the week-day of Sep. 15, 919: In ii. Kal. Sep. $243 + 14$ (i.e., $15 - 1$) $= 257$. Addition of the ferial, 6 and division by 7 give remainder 4, or Wednesday.

Erroneous Chronology of the Four Masters.

This example supplies a typical illustration of the manner in which such data have been dealt with by the Four Masters. According to them, Niall was slain Wednesday, Oct. 17, 917. To test it: In ii. Kal. Oct. $273 + 16 = 289$. Adding the ferial, 4, of 917 (No. 21, Table A), and dividing by 7, we get 6 as remainder. In 917, namely, Oct. 17 was Friday. The original was vitiated by the unwitting omission of Kal. from xvii. Kal. Oct., and the compilers saw no incongruity in maiorum tamen nobis auctoritate contraditum, atque ideo minoribus nostra æque solertia tradendum (De temp. rat., xxii.).

The transcript from a MS. in the Ambrosian Library, Milan (Muratori, Anecdota Ambrosiana, Patavii, 1713, III. 118) was most probably by an Irish hand. Whether it was later than that in Bede is doubtful. Of other copies, it will suffice to mention one in a Florentine Calendar of 817 (Bandini, Catal. cod. Lat. Bibl. Laurent., Florentiae, 1777, I. 287-8).

placing October 17 on Wednesday, in 917. Ultra posse non est esse. The lamentable result is that in these so-called Annals, every date from 494 to 1019 is erroneous.

(3) A third Rule¹ is based on col. E, which gives the remainders of the numbers of col. D divided by 7. These Regulars denote, with the leap-year exception mentioned, the week-day incidence of D, when the Ferial is 1. The Ferial of New Year's Day being always given, no Regular is assigned to January. To find the required day, proceed as in Rule 2, substituting col. E for col. D. In the case of Sep. 15, 919 : $14 + 5$ (September Regular) $+ 6$ (Ferial) $\div 7$ leaves 4, namely Wednesday.

The Ferial Numbers having been superseded in Calendars by Dominical Letters, a Table of the latter (an expansion, it will be seen, of column B; itself the D.L. circuit of Diagram A) is necessary in connexion with Paschal Tables.

To find the Concurrent and Ferial No. of an A.D. by C and A, find the D.L. or D.LL. of the year by Table C: over the Letter or Letters, are the requisite Concurrent and Ferial No., in the order named, in Rota A. E.g., 919 has D. L. C; C has (in A) Concur. iv., Fer. No. vi.

¹ Rule.—Ideler's rule (which occupies 26 lines=two-thirds of the present page, Handbuch, II. 183-4) is to divide the no. of days from the beginning of the Christian Era to the given date by 7: remainder 1 is =Sat., 2=Sun., and so on. The method will sufficiently appear from the example, Nov. 8,

1825, according to the Old Style. $(1825-1) \div 4$ gives an even quotient 456: 456×365 [i.e. the days of the bissextile period]=666,216. Add 304 (ib. I. 103=In ii. Kal. Nov. 304, Table B, col. D)+8 days of Nov. Hence, 666,216+30+8=666,528 days $\div 7$ =remainder 2=Sunday!

Rules
to find Dominical
Letters
by Table.

The Dominical Letter of an A.D. under 100 is the next to the right: A.D. 1, 29, 57, 85 have B. The Dominican Letters of the centuries are respectively next overhead: A.D. 100, 800, 1500 have ED. The Letter of an A.D. over 100 is that at which a line from the given 100 meets a line from the A.D. less than 100: A.D. 101 has C; 728, DC. In Easter Tables, the second of the Dominican Letters is employed. As the Old Style, with which alone we are concerned, was changed in 1582, the centuries are not given beyond 15.

With their unwieldy numbers, A.M. Eras necessitated solar and lunar cyclic reduction in the matter of Easter calculation. The technical cycle of 28, like the technical cycle of 19, was accordingly an invention of the East; whilst, in practice, it was confined to Eastern reckoning, whether Paschal or chronographic. Perhaps the earliest instance of a Rota, such as Diagram A, is that inserted in the preface of a Paschalion falsely attributed to Peter, bishop of Alexandria, which is prefixed to the Paschal Chronicle (a compilation in its present form of between 630 and 641). Though the text states the cycles of 28 and 19 will be placed before the Festal Cycle of 532 years, Petavius¹ omitted them without mention; whilst neither in the two editions by Du Cange,² nor in the Bonn reprint by Dindorf,³ is any explanation supplied.

Chronicle

Overhead is: Cycle⁴ of the eight-and-twenty-year-period, reverting on itself, showing throughout in each year the epacts of the sun. Underneath, are three described.

¹ Petavius.—He merely states that the second part of the Fragment is the preface to a Paschalion, or Paschal computus, which its author reduced to tables, to which he had accommodated the Victorian Cycle of 532 (De Doctrina Temporum, Venetiis, 1757, III., p. vii.). But in the Appendix of Paschal texts in vol. II., he had given Prologue of Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria, to the Emperor Theodosius, the forged title prefixed to the translation of the textual title of this second part; thereby dating it 385, just 72 years before Victorius wrote! (II.501.) See p. liv.-v., infra.

It has to be noted that, in the third volume, the Uranologium (astronomical and computistic texts) and Various Dissertations (of the author) are paginated severally,—a most inconvenient arrangement.

² Du-Cange.—Paris, 1688 (a splendid folio), p. 15, and in the Corpus Historiae Byzantinae, Venice, 1729 (second edition), IV. Chronicon Paschale, p. 11.

³ Dindorf.—Bonn, 1832, II. 26. The whole reprint is in sad contrast with the fine tomes, white paper and wide-spaced double columns of the folio editions.

⁴ Cycle, etc.—Κύκλος τῆς ὀκτωκαι-εικοσαετηρίδος τοῦ ἡλίου εἰς ἑαυτὸν ἀνακυκλοῦμενος, πάντοτε σημαίνων [τάς] ἐν ἑκάστῳ ἔτει ἑπακτάς τοῦ
ἡλίου. (C. H. B. IV. 11.)

concentric right-to-left series of numerals in capitals, with B (Bissextile) over every fourth number. An inscription in the centre states that the outer numbers denote the 28 years; the inner, the week days of March 1; B marking leap-years. An irrelevant exposition of bissextile incidence and cause fills the rest of the space, to the exclusion of explaining what the innermost mean. They indicate the feriales of March 21, in accordance with the textual statement that the years of the two cycles commence on that day, the Equinox. Reduction to Diagram A proves that the first cyclic no. of each series is 17, forming a C-cycle, the 13th of which corresponds to A.D. 1 (col. C, Table C). This belongs to A.M. 5501 = A.D. 1,—an Era which may be called the Pseudo-Incarnation, and the origin of which will be explained below.

(C-cycle,

tion Era.)

Maximus,
described.

(1) A tripartite *Computus*¹ ascribed to Maximus, monk and martyr, written A.D. 641, gives a similar Rota in Part I.² The outer nos. are the feriales of March 31 (the Paschal year beginning on April 1st); the inner, 1—28 with (the Greek) BICEK in a line (I under B, and so on) towards the centre from every fourth.

(1) In Part III.,³ the Rota is repeated (BIE not radiating, but in a third inner circuit), enlarged to admit the septizodium, or square of seven by seven feriales, for finding the week-days of the Julian months named, some on the right, some on the left.

(1, 2) In Part II.,⁴ it is still more extended, to make room for a second 1—28, and, inside this, five circles of 28 bipartite sections, the left portion of each section containing the solar, the right, the lunar, year or years wherein a 19-year cycle with 11-year Saltus differed from the predominant (Alexandrine) in Paschal lunar days.

tavian Tables: C, identical with the Roman Capital C, and Σ .

The initial no. of the series given thrice is 25 in (1) Diagram A, forming a G-cycle, the 5th of which (G-cycle corresponds to A.D. 1 (col. G, Table C). This belongs to (Alexandrine Era),
A.M. 5493 = A.D. 1,—the Alexandrine Era.

The initial no. of the series given once is 9 in A, forming (2) an F-cycle, the 21st of which corresponds to A.M. F-cycle

years, the nos. of which are consequently placed underneath, in a fifth line (ib. 201).

² States—Τῇ [τᾷ] εἰς ὥσαύτως ἀναλύσαντες εἰς φλβ' εὐρίσκομεν περιόδους δέκα καὶ λοιπὰ νῆσ' ἐτη. Ταῦτα εἰσενέγκαντες εἰς τὸν τοῦ πάσχα τόμον, εὐρίσκομεν τὴν ἰδ' σύμφωνον τοῦ Φαμενώθ κθ', ὃ ἐστὶ τοῦ Μαρτίου κέ'. τὴν δὲ κυριακὴν Φαρμοῦθι γ', τοῦτ' ἐστὶ Μαρτίου κθ' (C. H. B. V. 28).

Vicennalia of Constantine (A.D. 324), that division of 5816 by 532 shows 10 periods and 496 years of the 11th period have elapsed. Going with this remainder to the Paschal Tome, we shall find, we are told, the 14th of the moon on March 25; Easter on March 29. Divided by 28, dividend and remainder respectively leave (cyclic No.) 20. Next, $5816 - 324 = 5492$ (i.e. $5493 = \text{A.D. } 1$). The Era used was the Alexandrine the 20th year of its cycle (G) agreeing with the 16th of Diagram A and col. B of Table C, and thus having Dominical Letters ED.

(b) Byzantine Era
(19-year
Rota);

The central inscription of a 19-year Rota in the Paschal Chronicle at the (otherwise vacant) consulship of Leontius and Salustius (A.D. 344), states that the cycle began¹ in the 59th [60th] year of Diocletian, under these Consuls, March 21, A.M. 5852. To deal, for the present, with the solar criteria, divided by 28 this number leaves 0; i.e. the cyclic No. is 28. Again, $5852 - 344 = 5508$ (i.e. $5509 = \text{A.D. } 1$). The Era employed was consequently the Byzantine; the final year of its cycle (F) corresponding with the 8th of Diagram A and col. B of Table C, with Dominical Letters AG. Hereby for chronistic purposes can be rectified the capricious Paschal arrangement whereby the (solar) year began on March 21.

(c) Pseudo Incarnation Era;
origin of,

We are now in a position to explain how the Era A.M. 5501 originated. The same Paschalion of Anianus has it that the Nativity² was in 5501; the Resurrection on Sunday, March 25, 5534. This requires Dominical Letter G. $5534 \div 28$ gives cyclic No. 18. The cycle which

² Nativity, etc.—Τὴν ἑκδοσιν Ἀνιανοῦ . . . ἐν γ' τὴν θείαν σάρκω-

σιν τῷ εἴφ' πληρουμένῳ καὶ ἀρξαμένῳ τῷ εἴφ' ἀποδείκνυσι, τὴν δὲ ἁγίαν καὶ ὁλόφωτον ἡμέραν τῆς ἀναστάσεως καὶ τοῦ παρὰ Ῥωμαίοις Μαρτίου μηνός, τοῦ δὲ παρ' Αἰγυπτίοις Φαμενώθ κθ', ἣν καὶ πρωτόκτιστον ἡμέραν ἐν τῷ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ συστάντι πασχαλίῳ τῶν φλβ' ἔτων. διεσάφησε τῷ εἴφδ' ἔτει τοῦ κόσμου ἀρξαμένῳ κατὰ τὴν αὐτὴν ζωοποιὸν τοῦ πρώτου κυριακοῦ πάσχα ἡμέραν (ib. V. 27).

has the requisite Letter (G) attached to 18 is the G (col. G, Table C); in other words, the Era is Alexandrine. Consequently, 5534, minus the Mundane Period (5492) of the Era, gives A.D. 42 as the Passion year,—the second of Claudius, instead of the fifteenth of Tiberius! To eliminate the absurdity, Anianus subtracted the age of the Lord, 33, and fixed the Nativity in 5501; heedless, or perhaps unaware, of the fact that his fabricated Era fell eight years short of the accepted Incarnation reckoning. For 5534 in the Pseudo-Incarnation or C-cycle is (18) C, which corresponds with A.D. 34. Notwithstanding, the reckoning was adopted by Maximus, Syncellus, Theophanes (758—818), Cedrenus (1050) and some hagiographers.¹ error of 8 years in.

With regard to Concurrents, in A.M. calculation, add the Concurrent of the year that is immediately before the first of the cycle employed. For instance, A.D. 324, as we have seen, is Alexandrine 5816. This A.M., plus the fourth, divided by 7, leaves 4. G being the cycle, the Concurrent of BA, 6, is to be added and 7 deducted, giving 3 = ED. Then, 7 - 3 = 4 = ED. (d) Concurrent A.M. calculation: General rule,

The exception is the F-cycle, Concurrent 1. For example, the same year is Byzantine 5832. The A.M., plus the fourth, divided by 7 leaves 3 = ED; 7 - 3 = 4 = ED (as in the previous reckoning). Such is the rationale of the Rule to add 4 in A.D. reduction; that number being the final Concurrent of the cycle that is next previous to the B, or Incarnation, cycle. exception F-cycle. A.D. computation rule for.

This was one of the "Egyptian" Rules² which Dionysius appended to his five Paschal Cycles. But, as will be seen, it failed to suggest to him seven by four. A.M. reckoning having been omitted from the Alexan- Rule to add 4, given by Dionysius, Concurrents explained by Bede;

Explaining Solar Epacts, or Concurrents, Bede states the circle¹ consists of 4 times 7 years, as it cannot be completed until the bissextile falls on the feria in the following order: Sunday, Friday, Wednesday, Monday, Saturday, Thursday, Tuesday. The calendar week ending on March 24 makes this plain.

Rota transcribed by

The Concurrents in the circle, he continues, indicate the feria of March 24.² Omission to claim authorship³ is clear proof that the circle existed before his time. It is given in the *Ephemeris*⁴ (in the Dubious and Spurious Didascalics), and is the same as series 3 of Diagram A, commencing at no. 20, with B above nos. 1, 5, 9, 13, 17, 21, 25. Such is the commonplace origin, which Petavius admitted his inability⁵ to discover, of the so-called Vulgar Cycle, beginning at B.C. 9. Whence the egregious rule to add 9 to the A.D. before dividing originated

by 28. One fact is decisive: in every authentic cycle, the leap-year, for an obvious reason, is denoted by 4 going even; in this, by 4 and 1 over. Fitting factor in that most useless and misleading of all fictitious Periods, the Julian!

March 24, Bede proceeds,¹ was denoted, that, being placed rather close (propius) to the beginning of the Paschal festivity, the Concurrents may most easily indicate the feria of the 14th of the moon, and thereby facilitate the finding of Easter. But, if so, why were they not fixed on March 21, instead of three days later? This apparently insuperable objection still awaits satisfactory solution.² Perhaps they had their rise in connexion with Western Paschal computation, when the earliest Easter was March 25. Notwithstanding the partially proleptic character, the advantage of a common calculation would lead to adoption at Alexandria, whilst East and West still adjusted their Easter differences. They appear for the first time in the Athanasian Paschal Chronicle, written after the death of Athanasius. They were not included in the Theophilan 100-year List. Insertion in the Cyrillan cycles (A.D. 447) took place when the Alexandrines insisted on the exclusive use of their own system.

Suggested origin of.

II.—The lunar notation used is what is known as that of the Alexandrine 19-year, or Decemnovenal, Cycle. The presence thereof in the Julian year; the aid afforded thereby in rectifying the A.D. error of these Annals; and the textual entries relative to the advent of Patrick, Easter of 455, Victorian Cycle, Dionysian Cycles and Paschal change in Iona render it incumbent to explain the principles of Paschal computation and systematize the Paschal Cycles. This becomes all the more

II; Lunar notation.

On the other hand, L'Art de verif. les dates (Paris, 1818, I. 76) gives A.D. 20 G. F. as the first year of the Solar Cycle.

Proceeds.—De temp. rat., c. liii. His words are freely translated in the text.

Solution.—The laboured theory of Van der Hagen, to prove that the Concurrents were fixed on August 29, and the arbitrary, complicated rules to find Easter founded thereon are based on pure conjecture (Observationes in Prosperi Aquitani Chronicon, etc., Amstelodami, 1733, p. 206-10).

necessary, as hitherto, although every known Cycle is either based on, or accommodated to, the Julian year, no serious effort has been made to reduce any, save the Alexandrine,¹ to the Julian Calendar; whilst, as regards the Paschal controversy brought to a close in 716, to set forth the main outlines of the rival systems, as derivable from original authorities, is an admitted desideratum.²

Paschal
computation :—
principles
of :
luni-solar
reckoning.

Paschal Computation was based on the luni-solar year, i.e., lunar days and months adjusted to, and reckoned by, the days and months of the fixed solar year. A synodical lunation, or the interval between two consecutive new, or full, moons, consists of 29d., 12h., 44m., 3s. For practical purposes, however, the Greeks³ and Romans⁴ had, of necessity, to employ round numbers. Hence, as the bimestral period, omitting hours, minutes, and seconds, contained 59 days, they divided it into ¹ Alexandrine.—Petavius (VII. viii., vol I., 354) gave a Table of the Dionysian Great Cycle, apparently (p. 353) compiled by himself.

The first vertical line contains the Dominical Letters; the second, the nos., of the Cycle, beginning with G F. The first and second horizontal lines give the Paschal Terms; the third line has the D. L. of same; the fourth, the 19 Golden Nos. The Easters are arranged in 532 squares (28 x 19). It probably did not occur to him that they could be lessened by one-fourth (19 x 7).

² Desideratum.—"The Alexandrine [Cycle] of 19 years, as amended [sic] by Dionysius Exiguus, was adopted by the Roman Church; whereas the Celts continued to use an older cycle of 84 years. What amount of divergence might arise from this cause I do not know" (Bede, H. E., ed. Oxon. 1896, II. 350).

³ Greeks.—"Εστι δὲ ὁ μὲν ἀκριβὴς μηνιαῖος χρόνος . . . ἡμερῶν κθ' $\frac{\alpha}{\beta}$ $\frac{\alpha}{\lambda\gamma}$. οἱ δὲ πρὸς τὴν πολιτικὴν

ἀγωγὴν ὀλοσχερέστερον λαμβανόμενοι μηνιαῖοι χρόνοι εἰσὶν ἡμέραι κθ' $\frac{\alpha}{\beta}$, ὥστε τὸν δίμηνον χρόνον γενέσθαι ἡμερῶν νθ'. ὅθεν διὰ ταύτην τὴν αἰτίαν οἱ κατὰ πόλιν μῆνες ἐναλλάξ ἄγονται πλήρεις καὶ κοῖλοι· διὰ τὸ τὴν σελήνην δίμηνον ἡμερῶν εἶναι νθ' . . .

Ἐζητεῖτο οὖν χρόνος ὑπὸ τῶν ἀστρολόγων, ὃς περιέχει ὅλας ἡμέρας, καὶ ὅλους μῆνας, καὶ ὅλους ἐνιαυτούς (Geminus: Introduction, c. vi. (on the months), Pet. Uranol. III. 18).

a month of 30, and a month of 29, days. The first was called full (πλήρης, plenus); the second, hollow (κοῖλος, months, cavus). Twelve synodical lunations make up a luni-^{full and hollow.} solar year of 354d., 8h., 48m., 36s. But, for the same reason as before, the three fractional items were neglected, and eleven days added, to complete 365. These were named *epacts*¹ (ἐπακταὶ ἡμέραι), or *embolismal*² days (ἐμβόλιμοι ἡμέραι). Assuming the solar and lunar ^{Epacts} years to commence on Jan. 1, the latter year has epact 1; will end on Dec. 20; be twelve days in advance (i.e., have epact 12) on next Jan. 1; 23, on the third New Year's day; 34, on the fourth. The 34 make up an embolismal full month of 30 days, with four over: which four become the epact of the fourth year. In this way, by increment of 11 (with exceptions hereinafter noted) and deduction of 30, luni-solar reckoning was effected.

The earliest Christian evidence on the subject is con- Evidence of Paschal reckoning; tained in the Hippolytan luni-solar Heading and Table; which only lacks completeness owing to non-mention of the hollow month. In the Filocalan Calendar, A—K ^{Lunar Letters.} were used to denote the alternate full and hollow months. The first was done by placing the letters at double-day intervals³; the second, by having but a single day between E and F. The two series, each recurring six times, thus respectively ended on Nov. 21 and Dec. 20; Dec. 21 had A; Dec. 30, D (Dec. 31, D^{II}). For conjectures respecting the manner of their employment to find the moon's age, when the epact was other than 1, the authorities⁴ mentioned at foot are referred to.

As January and February have 59 days, the March ^{Months neglected in Paschal reckoning.} and April lunations (with exceptions to be mentioned) respectively correspond, as far as April 28, with those of the two previous months. The first-named months can accordingly be passed over in Paschal luni-solar computation, and epact signify the moon's age on March 1, as well as on Jan. 1. Similarly, the intercalary (bissextile) day was left out of account (February moon being taken as 30); but, of course, it has to be added in making out the true equation of the solar and luni-solar years. Lunar months are regularly named from the solar in which they end.

cycle.

A luni-solar cycle consists of a number of years, at the expiration of which the same epacts recommence. How the recurrence is effected will appear in dealing with the various cycles. In mediæval Calendars, the numerals from I. to XIX., denoting the consecutive years of the Alexandrine Cycle, were placed on the margin, to mark all the days whereon the new moons of the respective years fell. They were designated Golden, either from supposed excellence, or, most probably, from having been rubricated. By natural extension of meaning, Golden Number came to signify an Alexandrine cyclic year, and can be used to indicate the year of any luni-solar cycle. The sole practical use of the Numbers lies in the construction of Tables for finding Easter.

Age of moon, rule
to find.

To find the age of the moon on a given day of the year, the general Rule is: to the number of the day (found by Table B, Rule 1) add the epact of the year and divide by 59: remainder, if under 30, is the age. If over, take 30 from it, what remains is the age. If 59 goes even, 30 is the age.

Paschal
Tables:— (technique of) Hippolytan
Tables:

These general principles premised, we proceed to the technique of the Paschal Tables. The earliest known extant Tables are engraved on the sides of a marble chair, whereon is seated a (supposed) bishop. The monument was found near the church of St. Laurence outside the Walls, in 1551, and is preserved in the Lateran Museum. Eusebius¹ mentions that Hippolytus

Eusebius.—‘ Ἰππόλυτος συντάτ- | ται σύγγραμμα, ἐν ᾧ τῶν χρόνων
των . . . τὸ περὶ τοῦ πάσχα τιποῖη- | ἀναγράφην ἐκθέμενος καὶ τινὰ καν-

composed a work on Easter to which he prefixed a 16-year Easter Canon, beginning with the first year of Alexander (A.D. 222). On the back of the chair, is a list of works, some of which Hippolytus is known to have written. Furthermore, one of them is entitled: Exposition¹ of the times, as [given] in the [Paschal] Table. The Headings and Tables on the sides of the chair tally with the description of Eusebius; whilst the times, with two exceptions, are Old-Law celebrations of the Pasch, mentioned in the Table of Paschal 14th-moons, on the right side. Whence it is manifest that the long-lost Hippolytan Canon (lunar Table and Easter Table) has been brought to light. The numerous and warmly disputed questions connected with the author do not fall within the scope of the present inquiry.

On the right side (left, to the onlooker in front), is a Heading: In² year I. of the kingship of Alexander, autocrat, the 14th of the Pasch was on the Ides [13th] of April, Saturday; an embolismal month having passed. It will be in the future years as it is arranged in the Table. It was likewise in the elapsed [years] as it is marked [in the Table]. Fasting is to be ceased from when Sunday occurs. (1) ^{luni-solar Table: heading,} Underneath, down along what may be called the ^{arrangement,} margin, are 12 contractions (6 in duplicate), of which more anon. Next, is a column of 16 Roman month-days, on which the Paschal 14th-moons fell in 16 respective years. The rest of the space is occupied by seven 16-item columns of Greek numerals, 1—7, indicating the ferial incidence of the respective month-days, on the first and every seventeenth year thereout, based (correctly, according to Diagram A) on the Julian year.

ment to Julian
Calendar.

To adjust to the Julian Calendar, it has to be pre-mised that the second 8 dates of col. 1 are a replica of the first; making the second 56 (8×7) week-days a repeat of the first. The lunar cycle, we have thus discovered, was octennial; the Greek Octaeteris, described by Geminus¹ and Epiphanius,² and idly theorized upon by Petavius.³ Given moon 14 on April 13, and counting back, we get new moon on March 31. The previous lunation, we learn, was embolismal, i.e., had 30 epactal days: giving new moon on March 1, and showing that March 1 and 31 have the same lunar age. This method produces the results classified in the following Table.

² Epiphanius.—Heres. lxx. (de schismate Audianorum: ed. Petavius, Paris, 1622, I. 825). The Petavian Paschal commentary, so often referred to by the author (in the Doc. temp.) and other writers, is in vol. II. 297 sq. The technical portion is as obsolete as that of the later work. E.g. the Octaeteris had embolism in the 3rd, 6th and 8th years

³ Petavius.—The 8th chapter of book II. (54 sq.), conjectures as to Columns 3, 4, 5, are taken from the Table, which they partly compose. Em. stands for ἐμβόλιμος, embolismal; referring, the Heading shows, to the pre-Paschal month, and signifying that it was made up of epacts. The large Greek episimon, or cypher for 6, closely resembles the Roman Capital S. Whence the digraph SS. (= δισεξτος), like Bis., marks the Julian leap-years.

The epact column reveals the structural data of the cycle. By the Rule of adding 11 and deducting 30, when the sum exceeds 30, the results would be:—

Epact	...	1	12	23	4	15	26	7	18

Structure
of :

This arrangement gives 88 (8×11) epacts, i.e., 2 embolismal months and 28 days. Hereby, however, the recurring epact of Golden No. 1. would be (not 1, but) 29; whilst the 8 years would not form a luni-solar cycle, which requires, in this case, epact 1 (or new moon on March 1 and 31). The defect was supplied by adding 2 to the epacts, completing the embolismal month and the cycle. This was effected by shortening the luni-solar year and increasing the epact: i.e., the final bimestral period was twice made to consist of 58, instead of 59, days; having, namely, two hollow moons in succession.

Saltus,
nature of,

the Greek Octaeteris, and the 60th (109 sq.), Scaliger's opinion on Octaeteris, are mainly barren disputation. The 61st (110 sq.), a refutation of Scaliger concerning the Hippolytan 16-year cycle, gives a Table of Hippolytan and Nicene (i.e. Alexandrine) new-moons, 14th-moons and Easters, from A.D. 222 to 240; the former portion: cujusmodi in vetere marmorea statua colligitur, quam in appendice describemus. The errors, some thrice, some twice, repeated, are, with reference to Table D:—III.col. 4, Mar. 21, 22, for Mar. 21; col. 6, Mar. 8, 9, for Mar. 8: VIII.col. 6, Mar. 11, for Mar. 12.

But these are cast in the shade by the statement made in reference to the Dionysian Octaeteris (of which hereafter) and the Hippolytan, that the new moons do not return to the same weekdays until after 112 years! Post primam octaeteridem [Dionysii] deinceps neomeniæ ad eosdem dies redeunt; non tamen ad easdem ferias, quod non assequitur nisi post annos cxii., hoc est hecædecaeteridas vii (p. 110). Reliquæ octaeterides [Hippolytanæ] eosdem in Juliano mense terminos repræsentant, non tamen easdem ferias, quæ non nisi post annos cxii. redeunt, sive hecædecaeteridas septem (p. 111). Needless to add, the promised description did not appear in the Appendix.

of.

In the Julian Calendar, which alone we are concerned with, the lunar month ending in December began, for this purpose, on what would otherwise be the 30th of the month ending in November. Thus, in Table D, (a) to give epact 24 (in place of 23) to III., new moon fell on Nov. 10 and Dec. 9 (not Nov. 11 and Dec. 10); (b) to give epact 9 (in place of 8) to VII., new moon fell on Nov. 25 and Dec. 24 (not Nov. 26 and Dec. 25). Such omitted days the Greeks¹ termed exemptile (ἐξαιρέσιμοι ἡμέραι). To judge from a passage in Cicero² explanatory of these words, the Romans, in his time, had no practical knowledge of the system. The method was styled moon's leap (Saltus lunæ: i.e., salit in retro) by the computists who wrote in Latin. To avoid the anomaly of a bimestral period of 57 days, which would ensue here, were 13 (i.e., the epact 11+2 days of Saltus) to be added, a Saltus of one day was respectively inserted in two years.

caused by.

The Saltus occasions an exception to the Rule for finding the age of the moon on a given day. If the day in question falls within the December and January Saltus-lunations, 1 is to be added to the age as found by the Rule.

Hippo-
lytan Octae-teris :—
equations of: luni-solar,

The equations of the Hippolytan Octaeteris are the following:—

In luni-solar equation:—

8 Julian years = 2922 days.

8 luni-solar years (with bissextile increment) of 354½ days each + 88 epacts = 2922 days.

ut . . maxime ex æquo dierum exemptilium administratio fieret. Per dies igitur 63 oportet unum exemptilem facere diem in eadem periodo, neque semper fit exemptilis dies tricesimus, sed is, qui post 63 dies cadit, exemptilis dicitur (c. vi. ad finem, ubi sup., 23).

² Cicero.—Est consuetudo Siculorum ceterorumque Graecorum,

In mathematical:—

99 synodical lunations = 2923d., 12h., 40m., 57s.: mathematical ; in round numbers, one day and a half in excess of the cyclic sum. The resultant error could be detected by eyesight. In the first year of the second octennial cycle, the Hippolytan new and full Calendar moons would fall six and thirty hours before the true ; in the first of the third, three days: by which time, to use the cycle would be out of the question. In fact, to judge from the Cyprianic cycle given below, it lasted but 22 years (to A.D. 243).

On the left side of the chair, is the Heading: In¹ the Year I. of Alexander Caesar [is] the beginning. The Sundays of Easter year by year. The marginal punctures [omitted by the graver] denote the Bissextile. (2) ^{Paschal Table} Underneath, arranged in seven columns of 16, to correspond with the lunar columns, and respectively headed with the Greek numerals, 1—7, are the Easter Sundays derived from the 112 14th-moons of the right side. As in the lunar Table, the second 56 Easters are a repetition of the first.

222 ÷ 8 leaves 6: hence, to find the Hippolytan Golden No., add 3 to the given A.D., and divide by 8: what remains is the Golden No. If 8 goes even, itself is the Golden No. The Numbers can be found by inspection in the following Table. ^{Golden Nos., rules to find.}

To find the Hippolytan Easter, having got the Easter, Dominical Letter by Table C and the Golden No. by rules to find by Table E, the required date will be found in the square Tables. where a line from the D.L. (the second in a leap-year) meets a line from the G. N. (The figures under the Easter dates denote the respective Easter lunar days.) A.D. 222 (the initial year) is F I., Easter, April 21, moon 22; 333 (the final year) is G VIII., Easter, April 1, moon 21.

In the Hippolytan Cycle, the Paschal Term (14th data, of the moon) fell from March 18 to April 13; Easter, from March 20 to April 21; the Easter lunar days were and dis- 16—22. It has to be added, as additional proof of early use of, and complete disuse, that no instance of the Hippolytan cycle. lunar reckoning has been found in epigraphy.

Cyprianic The radical defect¹ of the Hippolytan Cycle being the Octaeteris, luni-solar anticipation, the remedy lay in adjusting the object and epacts to the observed or calculated new or full moons, date of. at the end of every sixteen years. An attempt of the kind was made in a Table of 112 years, drawn up in the consulship of Arrianus and Papus (A.D. 243), extending from 241 to 352, and attributed to St. Cyprian.
In this, the epacts were decreased² by three, thereby giving correspondingly later Calendar new moons; one of which, however, for the reason assigned below, produced an untoward result. From the data appended to a Paschal treatise³ of the same reputed authorship, the Golden Numbers and Easter Table can be established with certainty⁴.

¹ Defect.—See Browne: Ordo Saeculorum (London, 1844), p. 477 sq., for the cycles of observation on which the Hippolytan and Cyprianic Octaeterids were based.

² Decreased.—De Rossi, unaccountably, states the very contrary: lunam vero, quae Hippolyto prima est, quartam numerat et sic reliquas (Inscriptiones Christianae Urbis Romae, 1861, p. lxxxii.). The synopses following Table H (p. xliii., infra) show the error very clearly.

³ Treatise.—Migne, P.L. IV. 942-66. The Paschal Table follows (967-71). Why the cycle was made to begin with 241 is explained in the Ordo Saeculorum (p. 478), which likewise gives a Table similar to the Hippolytan (p. 479).

⁴ Certainty.—Paschae computum, cum novis praesidiis nullis emendare possem, ex Oxoniensi editione ad verbum fere in hanc receptam esse nemo vituperabit (Corpus Scriptor. Ecclesiasticor. Latinor. Cypriani Opera Omnia, ed. Hartel, Vienna, 1871, Vol. III. Pars. I. p. lxiv.).

In striking contrast with the Oxford edition and Vienna reprint is the reconstruction of the Cyprianic Table in question by Dr. Krusch, which is accurate throughout. (Der 84jährige Ostercyclus, 189-92.) Apparently, however, the learned author has failed to discover that, beginning with 297, the solar, luni-solar and Paschal criteria repeat themselves to the end.

241 ÷ 8 leaves 1: hence, to find the Cyprianic Golden No., divide the A.D. by 8: what remains is the Golden No. ; if 0 remains, 8 is the No. The Rules to find the Nos. by Table (G) are the same as for Table E.

The Cyprianic Paschal 14th-moons were March 17—April 12; Paschal Calendar days, March 19—April 20; Easter lunar days, 16—22. Like the Hippolytan and, it may be concluded, for the same reason, the luni-solar reckoning is not met with in Inscriptions.

The differences between the Hippolytan and Cyprianic systems appear in the following synopses. For the reason given above, the fourth year of the former corresponds with the first of the latter, and so on throughout.

The deviation in the Cyprianic Saltus incidence took ^{Saltus} place in order to secure uniform decrease of 3 in the ^{deviation.} epacts. The result was, the Easters in 21 years were one week later; in 7 years, one month earlier, than the Hippolytan. The alteration thus extended to one half of the Paschal Table.

Very notable is the change from April 15—21 to March ^{Cyprianic} 19—25. New moon of the first cycle being on March 31, ^{early} the Paschal of the second, to be consistent, should be that ^{Easters,} which fell on April 2¹, three days later; giving Easter on April 17—23. The previous lunation was, however, chosen instead: new moon on March 4, Easter on March 19—25. For this radical modification, which, to the extent ^{cause of,} noted above, aggravated the error it was intended to Petrine tradition. correct, no reason can be assigned except the Petrine tradition (hereafter mentioned) held by the Romans,—not to celebrate Easter after April 21.

Octaeteris, chief value of. These authentic Hippolytan and Cyprianic data are of the utmost value, proving, as they do, that the Alexandrine principles, (a) Paschal Term (on or after the received Egyptian Vernal Equinox), March 21—April 18; (b) Easter (after same Equinox), March 22—April 25; (c) Easter lunar days, 15—21, are utterly at variance with the oldest Paschal Cycles.

Dionysian Octaeteris. The publication of the Cyprianic Cycle, to all appearance, it was that caused Dionysius, bishop of Alexandria (248–266), to state in a Paschal Letter that Easter should not be celebrated before the Vernal Equinox, and to insert in same an Octaeteris¹ for the necessary computation. If the Equinox intended was March 21, of which, however, there is no proof, the Cyprianic, with the April replacing the March lunation in the sixth year, would be a Cycle of the kind. That the Octaeteris was followed, in some places, for a century longer, appears from the chapter of Epiphanius' work against heresies already referred to.

19-year Cycle : The next known Paschal Cycle was the work of Anatolius, bishop of Laodicea about 280. He employed (not the 8-year, but) the 19-year cycle, called the Metonic, from the inventor, Meton,² a Greek mathematician (5th cent. B.C.). The cyclic technique is:—

inventor, technique, $19 \text{ years} \times 11 = 209 \text{ epacts} = 6 \text{ embolismal months and } 29 \text{ days. One Saltus (in the 19th year) completes the month and the cycle.}$

² Meton.—Geminus ascribes the origin of the cycle to Euctemon [B.C. 408], Philip [B.C. 292] and Calippus [B.C. 330]: ἐτέρων περιόδον συνειστήσαντο τὴν τῆς ἑννεακαίδεκαετηρίδος οἱ περὶ Ἐυκτῆμονα καὶ

Φίλιππον καὶ Κάλιππον ἀστρολόγοι (Pet., Uranol. III. 23). Whereupon Petavius observes: Mirum de Metone tacuisse Geminum, cui tamen præcipue inventum illud decemnovennalis cycli tribuitur (ib.).

All that is known of the Anatolian Cycle is contained in an extract³ from the Prologue preserved in Eusebius. New moon of the initial year is placed on Phamenoth 26, i.e., March 22; on which day, it is added, the sun has not alone entered, but is passing through, the 4th day of the first zodiacal Sign (Aries). This fixes the Vernal Equinox at March 19. The previous Sign, it continues, is the last of the planetary period; whence they err egregiously who make that the first (Paschal) month and compute pursuantly the 14th of the Pasch.

Anatolian
Cycle :

New moon on March 22 requires epact 10. This being, as will appear, the Alexandrine epact of A.D. 277, the cycle, it has been inferred, began with that year. But it remains yet to be proved that the Alexandrine cycle existed at the time. Before 276, the Audiani accused the Catholics of having abandoned the Octaeteris in favour of another system. Had this been the Alexandrine, the basis of which was Equinox,

March 21, would an alumnus of Alexandria, such as Anatolius was, have adopted different equinoctial incidence ? The Anatolian was accordingly prior in time and manifestly alluded to by the Audiani. Taking the Equinox to be March 19, the bishop carried the Dionysian injunction into effect by means of the more accurate lunar cycle. The foregoing and a fact to be mentioned and hitherto unnoticed refer the opening rather to 258. (The two years have the same number in a decemnovennal cycle.) $258 \div 19$ leaves 11; hence, to find the Anatolian Golden No., add 9 to the A.D., what remains is the No. ; if 0 remains, 19 is the No.

The epacts thus present no difficulty. What is purely conjectural is the determination of the Paschal lunar Terms. On the not unreasonable assumption that]the only changes introduced into the Anatolian method by the framers of the Alexandrine consisted of such as were necessary to make the earliest Easter fall on March 22 and the latest, consequently, on April 25, the following Paschal Table is constructed. The Saltus is in the 19th year; i.e., 12 (instead of 11) are added to 28, to produce 10 (40-30), not 9, as epact of the initial year.

[According to Duchesne (La question de la Pâque au concile de Nicee: Revue des Questions Historiques, xxviii., 5sq.), in stating that the sun was four days in Aries on March 22, Anatolius seems to fix the Equinox on the 18th, which is in contradiction with the context. [2] All that is required is a "slight palæographical correction"—τετάρτην ἡμέραν for τετάρτην ἡμέραν; i.e., the sun was $\frac{1}{4}$ th of a day in the Sign on the 22nd. [3] In Hipparchus' time (B.C. 141) the Equinox was March 22; and [4] the precession of the Equinoxes, at 50s. per an., gives for 418 years (to the time of Anatolius) very nearly 6 hours, $\frac{1}{4}$ th of a day.

But [1] there is an ominous error in limine: $22 = 4$ gives 19 (not 18) = 1. [2] Apart from the extreme dissimilarity between ν and ϵ , the "slight correction" assumes that the feminine adjective can be used like the neuter! [3] Ptolemy states (Ideler, Handbuch, I. 34) that Hipparchus found the Vernal Equinox of B.C. 146 on March 24, 11 a.m., in the meridian of Alexandria. Whence it fell on the same day, at 10.4 a.m., in B.C. 141. [4] The anticipation in question falls $11\frac{3}{4}$ m. short of 6 hours (Cf. Pet. De doc. temp. tom. III. Dis. Var. 1. I. c. iv., p. 5). The difference represents 14 years, dating the Anatolian Cycle at 291, instead of 277, the year adopted by Duchesne!]

That the Cycle was likewise intended for the Roman church is proved, as in the case of the Alexandrine cycles, by the equation of the Egyptian month-day with the Julian. Independent confirmation, which also shows that it was drawn up before 269, is found in a luni-solar date in a Catacomb epitaph¹ of 269: Nov. 5, Friday, moon 24. This has hitherto been inexplicable by any known lunar system. But it is derived from epact 11, which is that of A.D. 269 (Golden No. XII.) in the Anatolian Cycle.

That it continued to be employed for nearly a century longer in Rome is established by proof of the same unimpeachable authenticity. An Inscription² of the year of consuls Jovian and Varronianus (A.D. 364) has May 8, Saturday, moon 20. No other cycle has the required epact, 11, except the Anatolian, in which 364, like 269, is Golden No. XII.

But the main interest of the excerpt given by Eusebius centres in the fact that it gave occasion and furnished data to an unscrupulous partisan of the Irish Paschal system to fabricate a new solar cycle and a new cycle of 19 in the name of Anatolius. Fully to expose the fraud, which will be found described in the account of the Irish Paschal controversy, the pseudo-Anatolian Solar Cycle and Paschal Table have been drawn up³ from data supplied in the forgery.

¹ Epitaph.—I.C., p. 18; Epitaphs of the Catacombs, p. 19 (where the whole of this remarkable inscription is given from the I.C. in a woodcut). The year is of Consuls Claudius and Paternus. The letters, except in the Roman numerals, are Greek capitals. The phonetic can be estimated from the luni-solar portion: ΝωΝΕΙC | ΝΟΒΕΝ-ΒΡΕΙΒΟΥC ΔΕΙΕ ΒΕΝΕΡΕC ΛΟΥΝΑ ΧΧΙΙΙ (Nonis Novembribus, die Veneris, luna xxiii.).

After stating that the data cannot be explained by the Hippolytan and Cyprianic cycles, De Rossi observes that they correspond most accurately to the calculated epact of 269, which, at Rome, according to Secchi, was 10d. 2h. 24m. "Whether the Romans, in the year 269, computed the lunar months so well by the aid of any and of what cycles, I candidly know not" (I.C. p. lxxxii.). The Anatolian, the inscription proves, it was that afforded the requisite assistance.

The next cycle of 19 was perhaps the Alexandrine. To find the Golden Nos., about 385, Theophilus, patriarch of Alexandria (385—412), drew up a list of 14th-moons and Easters for 100 years, beginning with A.D. 380) the first consulate of the emperor Theodosius, to whom it was dedicated. $380 \div 19$ leaves 0 : hence, to find the Alexandrine Golden No., add 1 to the A.D., divide by 19, remainder is the G.N.; if 0 remains, 19 is the G.N.

Epacts,

As the work of Theophilus is lost, the epacts have to be found otherwise. The Chronicle prefixed to the Syriac Version of some of the Festal Letters of Athanasius (of Alexandria, 328—373) states¹ that in 328 Easter was April 14, moon 18. New moon thus fell on March 28, giving G. No. VI.=(Roman) epact 4. The (Alexandrine) epact, the Chronicle adds, was 25. As this was the moon's age on March 22, it gives VI.=25. Pursuant hereto, G. No. I. has Roman epact 9 (reckoned, namely, from March 1) and Alexandrine, 30 (reckoned from March 22). The proleptic computation was due to the adjustment to the Julian year. The two series are.

¹ States.—According to the Chronicle, the first epistle was written (for the following Easter) in the year 44 of the Diocletian Era; Easter, Pharmuthi 16 [19], Ap. 14, moon 18. His predecessor, Alexander, died Phar. 22 [Ap. 17], Athanasius succeeded Payni 14 [June 8], Indiction I,

Consuls Januarius and Justus [A.D. 328], epact 25, Concurrent 1 [lit. 1st (feria) of the Gods; i.e. the planetary deities, Sun, etc., presiding over the respective week-days. March 24 fell on Sunday in 328 G F, hence Concurrent 1]. (Mai: Nova Patrum Bibliotheca, Romae, 1853; t. VI, pp. 1, 2.)

The Saltus is placed in the last year (i.e. 12 are to be Saltus, added to the 27 and 18 of XIX. in order to respectively obtain the Roman epact 9, and the Alexandrine 30, of I.). Ogdoad ('Ογδοάς) signifies the eight first years; Hendecad ('Ενδεκάς), the eleven last. The terms, which have no Paschal or chronographic value,¹ are sometimes found on the margins of the Western Cycles, to identify their years with the Alexandrine.

The Paschal computation is derivable from the letter of Proterius of Alexandria (452—458) to Leo the Great on the Easter of 455. The Paschal month (14th of the moon) began on March 21, the Vernal Equinox.² If it fell on Sunday, the feast was to be put off³ to the next Sunday. The lunar days were thus 15—21.

As to the Calendar days, the initial year of the Paschal Letters of Cyril of Alexandria (412—444) has Easter on March 22⁴. This was A.D. 414=XVI. D. In 387, Proterius states that moon 14 was on April 18; Easter on April 25⁵. This year was VIII. C. The Calendar limits were accordingly March 22—April 25.

Athana-
sius,

The earliest known user of the system was Athanasius, as shown, with the exceptions and for the reasons hereinafter mentioned, in the *Festal Letters*¹ preserved in the Syriac. In the Chronicle, are given the Easters, in Egyptian and Roman month-days, of 328—373, with Easter lunar days, Alexandrine epacts, Indictions, Concurrents and Consuls and Prefects of Egypt. The Letters have headings, giving the respective Easters, omitting some of the Chronicle items, but adding the years of Diocletian, found in the Chronicle only at the first year (A.D. 328 = 44² of the Diocletian Era).

(Irish Athana-
sian fabrication.)

Knowledge, whether at first, or more likely at second, hand, furnished occasion to an Irish fabrication, the Tractate of Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria, on the Paschal system, hereafter described.

Theophi-
lus,

The next was Theophilus. His 100-year List was kept in the Curia for reference, as we learn from the Letters³ of Pope Leo on the Easter of 455, in which it is styled Adnotatio, Adnotatio Centenaria and Centenaria Supputatio. The Greek portion of the Prologue (the Latin, addressed to Theodosius, is manifestly genuine) is the second part of the pseudo-Petrine Paschal tract, as given in the Paschal Chronicle,⁴ Petavius⁵ and Bucherius⁶. It was added from the first-named source by a redactor (Petavius felicitously suggested Dionysius "Exiguus," of whom below), who gave a Latin version, with Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria, pre-

² 44.—The first of Diocletian was Aug. 29, 284—Aug. 28, 285; the Easter falling in the latter year. Hence, in Paschal reduction, 284 is to be added to the no. E.g. 44 + 284 = A.D. 328.

³ Letters.—Adnotatio in letter to Paschasinus of Lilybaeum; Centenaria Adnotatio and Centenaria Supputatio, in letter to Marcian.

⁴ Chronicle.—C.H.B., IV. 15.

fixed to the original heading, and the textual (moon) 13, 14, 16 rendered by 14, 15, 17 ! But neither all this, nor the incongruity of a document written partly in Latin and partly in Greek, awakened suspicion in the editors.

The third was Cyril, nephew and successor of Theophilus. His Paschal Letters¹ from 414 to 442 have been preserved. In addition, although 44 of its years were to come, owing, not improbably, to the meagreness of the Theophilan List, Cyril compiled a Table of 5 decemnovennial cycles, from the 153rd to the 247th of Diocletian (A.D. 437—531). The annual numeration of the List was replaced by the Diocletian years; Indiction, Epacts, Concurrents, and Lunar Cycle (with the same Paschal Terms as, but beginning three years later than, the decemnovennial) were prefixed to the dates of the 14th-moons; and lunar days added to the Easters. The so-called Prologue, which imposed upon every writer on Paschal subjects from Petavius to Ideler, Mommsen and De Rossi, is now proved to be a fabrication² of probably Spanish origin, dating from the seventh century. A similar patchwork of the same attribution, but of Irish authorship, the Epistle of Cyril, will be dealt with in due course.

Bede was apparently the first to call him abbot (abbas Romanæ urbis, De temp. rat. xlvii.); but his fellow-student, who survived him, we may be sure, was well aware of his monastic position. Perhaps, as Jan suggests (P. L. LXVII. 519), the title was honorific, as in the Rule of St. Columbanus, which mentions 1000 abbots under one archimandrite (c. vii. P. L. LXXX. 213).

The greeting of the first epistle is: Domino beatissimo et multum desideratissimo [!] patri, Petronio episcopo, Dionysius exiguus; of the second: Plurimum venerandis Bonifacio, primicerio notariorum et Bono, secundicerio, Dionysius exiguus salutem (Pet., De doc. temp. II. 498-9; P. L. LXVII. 483, 513).

Table were still to run, he drew up five 19-year cycles,¹ from 532 to 626. Prefixed were two explanatory epistles and appended the Proterian Letter on the Easter of 455 in a Latin version and Egyptian computistic Rules. The opening sentence of the first epistle contains one of the most audacious falsifications² on record. In elucidating

So, likewise, in five of his other prefatory epistles (P.L. LXVII. 9, 139, 231, 345, 407). Perhaps because addressed to an abbot, the sixth salutation has not the adjective (ib. 417).

When, by a ludicrous blunder, he has been styled Dionysius Exiguus (not, however, by Bede), Denys le Petit, Dionysius the Little! The word, the context shows, is used in the self-depreciatory sense peculiar to correspondence, denoting quality of mind not body. Statura pusillus, exiguus meritis. St. Ambrose had distinguished long before. As well may the terms be applied to his contemporary, the Carthaginian Deacon, because, in the salutations of his fourth and sixth Epistles, he styled himself Ferrandus exiguus (P.L. LXVII. 908, 921); or to St. Boniface, because he subscribed: Hoc autem indiculum sacramenti ego, Bonifacius exiguus, manu propria subscripsi (Neues Archiv der Gesell. für ält. deutsche Geschsknde., IX. 24).

Jan's suspicion that, of the Rules, §§ 11-16, both inclusive (503-8), were later additions is fully confirmed by the Vatican MS. 5755, which has, after § 10: Finium argumenta paschalia titulorum (fol. 2b. Zimmer: Gloss. Hib. 260).

According to Krusch, Cassiodorus most earnestly recommended the Pinax, or Easter Table, of Dionysius to his monks. "Cassiodor in den 'Inst. divin. litt.' seinen Mönchen den 'Pinax' des Dionysius—so werden Ostertafeln schon vom 3 Jahrh. an genannt—, angelegentlichst empfiehlt" (Neues Archiv, etc., IX. 113). This is an aggravated case of work at second-hand, which Rühl (Chronologie, etc., 1897, p. 131), improves upon by giving c. xxiii. of the Inst. div. litt. as the authority.

The chapter in question is xxv., headed Cosmographia a monachis legenda (P.L. LXX. 1139-40): Dionysius is Periegetes, the geographer. After recommending the libellus of Julius Orator and Marcellinus' four libelli, descriptive of Constantinople and Jerusalem, the text has: Deinde Pinacem Dionysii discite breviter comprehensum, ut quod auribus in supradicto libro percipitis, pene oculis intuentibus videre possitis.

This is taken from the Proterian Letter, with 318 Nicene Pontiffs substituted for our most blessed [Alexandrine] Fathers of the original! The attempt thus made by Dionysius and laboured to the utmost by Bede to make the Alexandrine Cycle infallible, it has to be observed in passing, was frustrated in advance by the Conciliar and Papal testimony hereinafter cited.

which imposed on Bede.

Dionysius employed the Incarnation¹ years instead of those of Diocletian. Where he found them presents little difficulty. Why the 95 years do not perfectly repeat themselves arises, according to him, from the Concurrents². These form a 7-year circuit, wherein you add 1 in common, and 2 in leap, years. Thus demonstrably ignorant of the solar cycle of 28 (7×4), Dionysius was still less acquainted with the luni-solar of 532 (28×19) and could not have determined the Incarnation years by proleptic application of a system unknown to him. The A.D. he verified by reference to a Consular Catalogue, such as the Fasti of the Chronography of 354, containing an entry³ of the Nativity. So little, in fact, did he and of Leo.

In 616, eleven years before the expiry of the Dionysian Table, an abbot Felix² added 95 years, to run from 627 to 721. But he knew nothing of a great cycle of 532. Writing on Paschal computation in 626, a monk Leo³ showed a notable improvement⁴ on the knowledge of Dionysius, in assigning the solar cycle of 28 as the obstacle to the Theophilan 100 years and the Cyrillan 95 forming perfect cycles; yet was not led thereby to combine 28 and 19. The first mention of 532 in connexion with the system occurs in a letter on Pasch and tonsure, addressed in 710 by Coelfrid, abbot of Jarrow, to Naiton, king of the Picts, given and most likely revised by Bede.⁵

Finally, Bede states⁶ that himself composed a great cycle from A.D. 532 to 1063. His scholiast, Bronchorst (Noviomagus), carried it back to A.D. 1 and forward to 1595, in 84 19-year cycles. These 84, he bids it be known, can be arranged in a cycle of 532, with a triple series of years. In the Dubious and Spurious Didascalics appended¹ to the Genuine Didascalics of Bede, are 86 19-year cycles from A.D. 1 to A.D. 1633 (i.e. with two cycles, 1596—1633, added by another hand), and (presumably by Noviomagus) 3 Great Cycles, in parallel columns, from B.C. 1 to A.D. 1595,—all swarming with typographical errors throughout. Bronchorst rashly foretold² that, after 1595, there would not be wanting studious persons to prolong the cycle. The prophecy was fulfilled before the time and in the manner he least intended. In 1582, the continuation was drawn up on modified solar and lunar principles, under the title of the Gregorian or New Style. Alexandrine Cycle modified.

With reference to the Paschal Mundane Eras and the so-called Lunar Cycles, Alexandrine and Byzantine, the following Table will serve for explanation. B is the *Rota*¹ at A.D. 344 in the Paschal Chronicle. The G.N. is the outer circle; Ep., the next; L.P., the innermost. The last is likewise given in Syro-Macedonian and Egyptian month-days, enabling some few errors² of transcription in the Roman notation to be corrected. The Ep. is also in a previous *Paschal Chronicle Rota*³, 5492—5510. The outer circuit has the A.M.; the inner, under each year, (a) solar epact, (b) lunar epact, (c) ferial of Sep. 1 (=a), (d) lunar day of c (which cannot be reconciled with b), (e) Bissextile at 6th, 10th, 14th, and 18th years (the B. of the second year being omitted). The A.M. represents B.C. 1—A.D. 18, in the Alexandrine Era; B.C. 17—A.D. 2, in the Byzantine; A.D. 11—29, according to a and c! The solar data are consequently unreliable.

Not so the luni-solar. (1) 5493 being A.D. 1, and G. No. 2, this A.M. computation is called the Alexandrine, because its Golden Nos. are the same as the A.D. Nos. of that system. It was employed by Anianus, as shown in the instance already quoted of 5816 = (532 × 10) + 496; the last no. having moon 14 on March 25, and Easter on March 29, in the Paschal Tome. In other words, A.M. 5816 and A.D. 324 are II. ED. The originator, Panodorus, wrote between 395 and 408, whilst Athanasius composed his first Festal Epistle for 329. The Mundane calculation, it would thus appear, was based on the Paschal.

(2) 5509 is Byzantine A.D. 1, G. No. 18, corresponding to the Alexandrine 5493, G. No. 2, of the Rota. The two solar and lunar systems accordingly differ by 16 years; No. 19 = 3, 20 (sol.), 1 (lun.) = 4, and so on.

³ Rota.—C.H.B., IV. 158.

If, as there is no reason to doubt, B dates back to 344, this Mundane computation is older than the Alexandrine. The central inscription shows how the 16-year interval was deviated from in the Rota B. 5852 is given as the terminal¹ year. This is accurate; the A.M., divided by 28 and 19, leaving 0. The year, it is erroneously added, is likewise an initial,² and the Rota is drawn up accordingly. In other words, the year is made to end on the day on which it should commence.

C, Rota of Petrine
Paschal Tract.

The correspondence with A is correct in C, the lunar *Rota*³ of the pseudonymous Petrine tract prefixed to the Paschal Chronicle. In the outer circuit, are (a) the Golden Nos.; in the next, (b) the Roman months of the L. P.; in the third, (c) the days of b; in the innermost, (d) the epacts of Jan. 1.

Rules to

P.T. and L.M.

The P. M. is the Epact + the P. T. (less 1 in March) — 30: e.g. I., $9+5=14$; II., $20 + (25-1)-30=14$. The L.M.⁴ is the Epact + the L. P. (plus 1 in April) — 30: e.g. B XVIII., $7+6+1=14$; XIX., $18+26-30=14$. Consequently, though not having a single epact in common, A and B had the same Paschal Terms, same Easters, and same Easter lunar days, with two exceptions: B XVIII. E gave (4) Easters on April 13, instead of the April 6 of A; B XIX. A, (4) Easters on April 2, instead of the March 26 of A. On the other hand, although C had the same epacts (save, owing to the Saltus, in XVII., XVIII., XIX.) and the same

From the sum 30 is to be deducted. (C.H.B. IV. p. 61, 160, 169, 172, 173 (bis), 177, 813.)

Paschal incidence as A, the L. P. rule caused the Easter lunar days, with the exceptions named, to be 16—22.

Considering the uncompromising attitude of the Alexandrines, a system that extorted their official recognition must needs have had influential support. Under the circumstances, it was ingenious to insert only the Golden Nos. of the Byzantine in the Alexandrine cycle, as if the divergence extended no farther. But that the difference was not unknown in the West is proved by the first letter of Pope Leo to Marcian on the Easter of 455, in which he requests the emperor to cause his scruple to be removed by the Egyptians, or others, if such there were, having knowledge of the supputation.

As regards the East, D is one of the proofs that the device did not secure uniformity. The G. No. is col. 3 of the left-hand Table under the solar *Rota*¹ in Part II. of the Computus of Maximus; the Ep., col. 4; the months of L. P. are col. 3 of the right-hand Table; the days, col. 4. Maximus states² the users employed the outer (F) circle of his 28-year Rota. This identifies the system as Byzantine. As the chapter devoted by him to the confutation is, to a large extent, textually defective, and the marks³ therein mentioned as denoting the grades of divergence are not found in the Rota circles referred to, no adequate result is attainable by tabular reduction. But the L. P. rule obtained. For XVI. is quartum; the circle in question being the fourth of the Rota on his preceding page (183). The equivalence can be verified in Table C : 1 of F-cycle = 13 of G-cycle, 2 = 14, etc. Vice versa, 1 G = 17 F; 2 = 18, etc.

³ Marks.—They (most probably, points) were : 1, denoting m. 16-22, with E. before L.P., in leap-years; 2, denoting same in common years; 3, for m. 17-23 (cap. II. p. 184).

given as an example¹ of the L. P. on April 17, moon 16 (i.e., $28 + 17 + 1 - 30$). The year in question, we are told, had April 16 on Sunday; whence, it is stated, the Christian Pasch was fixed before the Jewish. Celebrations accordingly took place on the L. P., when it fell on Sunday. Elsewhere, the Easter is said to be on the 23rd² of the moon.

D thus presents two peculiar Paschal Terms; Easter on the Alexandrine Paschal Term; and three series of Paschal lunar days, 15—21, 16—22, 17—23. Were it worth while, a Table embodying these principles could be readily compiled.

We have now an explanation of the entry in Theophanes,³ which has hitherto baffled solution, relative to the Easter of 546. The people of Constantinople were to celebrate on April 1; the emperor decided for April 8. The year was XV. G in A: Easter Term, Ap. 1, Easter, April 8; XII. G in D: Easter Term and Easter, April 1.

A decade before Maximus wrote, Western⁴ advocacy, misled apparently by the Lunar Cycle section of the Dionysian cycles, had declared that, except amongst a few on the extreme bounds of the earth, the decemnovennal system was universal. But, for all their isolation, some of those in the remotest isles of the

The passage is thus rendered in the Miscella: Anno imperii Justiniani decimo nono . . . eversio die sancto Paschae et coepit vulgus abstinere a carnibus mense Februarii die quarto. Imperator autem praecepit alia hebdomada carnem apponi, et omnes carniū venditores occiderunt et apposue-

Feb. 4 was the beginning of the Eastern Lent (i.e. the Western Sexagesima Sunday) for Easter on April 1. The disregard of Justinian's decree not to commence until Feb. 11 had the result that the people had to fast, in addition, during the first week of April; the Imperial Easter falling on the 8th.

ocean came to learn of the existence of another. Just two centuries later, they went to the Eastern capital to acquire full¹ and accurate comprehension of the Paschal method there followed.

The earliest cycle of Western origin consisted of 84 years. The solar portion was made up of three cycles of 28. Western

The great advantage of the cycle lay in the fact that, in addition to being tolerably accurate, the ferial and Paschal recurrence, unlike that of cycles whereof the lunar portion was decemnovennial, was the same every 85th year: making the Cycle perpetual. advantage of,

To obviate a bimestral period of only 53 days, the Saltus, as in the Hippolytan and Cyprianic Cycles, was inserted at intervals. The most natural distribution would be every 14th year ($84 \div 6$). This was adopted in the older cycle. A less congruous method would be every 12th year. This was the characteristic of the more recent cycle. The first Cycle may be called the 84; the second, the 84 (12). method of two characteristics, attested by independent evidence.

That the Cycle which formed the subject of the Irish Paschal controversy brought to a close in 716 was of 84 years, is proved from Columbanus,² who mentions it 84, Ir.sh

The Britons and Irish, Bede writes⁷, celebrated from the 14th to the 20th of the moon,—which calculation is contained in a cycle of 84 years. The spurious *Anatolius*⁸ placed the Saltus of his 19-year cycle in the 14th, instead of the 19th, year,—being the position with which he was most familiar. The 84 (12), as will be seen, had Easter from the 16th to the 22nd of the moon, and the Saltus in every 12th year. The 84 is thus shown to have been the Cycle used by the Irish.

84, on the other hand, so completely, outside the remotest parts of Western Christendom, did the cycle fall into disuse and oblivion, no Table, to our present knowledge, has been handed down. Under the circumstances, it may be deemed not inappropriate that a system so tenaciously adhered to in the Early Irish Church should be reconstructed⁹ from data set forth in

⁹ Reconstructed.—A Carthaginian Computus of 455 mentions an Augustalis as having composed a Paschal Table of 84, the first year of which had: Jan. 1, ep. 20; m.

14, M. 25; E., M. 28, m. 16 (Krusch, ubi sup., p. 290). The true lection, according to Krusch, "must have been": ep. 19; m. 14, M. 26; E., M. 28, m. 16 (pp. 7, 9, 175). To this Augustalis he attributes the Laterculus of the Munich Computus; dates it 213—312 (pp. 12, 13), and reconstructs it (p. 10—17), with a table (p. 17—19), from data given in the latter.

But the Carthaginian does not write at random: he quotes textually (sicut ipse suo adloquio profitetur, p. 290), and appeals to ocular testimony (perfacile est
... oculis quoque testibus conprobare) to prove that Augustalis gave a Passion day, quod omnino nullatenus congruit veritati (p. 290). The data thus vouched for are said, nevertheless,

the work of an Irishman,—data all the more reliable from the fact that they receive ample confirmation from the most trustworthy independent sources.

The Munich Latin Codex¹, 14,456 (Em. E. 72), is a recon- bibliotheca, or miscellany, of various contents and dates, structed hitherto best known as containing the so-called Greater from Annals of St. Emmeram of Ratisbon, published in the Munich
*Monumenta*² Germaniæ Historica. From folio 8a to Computus folio 46a is occupied by a *Computus*³ of St. Augustine, St. Codex of Jerome, St. Isidore, St. Dionysius, St. Cyril, Greece, and described:
others. The writing space is $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches long by $4\frac{1}{4}$ in structure, width; ruled in 24 lines, in the damp, and bounded on script,— each side by a space defined by two lines a quarter of an prepara- inch apart, the outer line of the outside column being tion for,
drawn on the punctures made by the ruling guides.
The material is so fine (herein much resembling the Marianus Scotus MS. in the Vatican), that the long heavy up and down strokes not infrequently appear on the opposite side of the folio, sometimes to such an extent, that, in the photographic reproduction, the reading is rendered obscure.

The script is Caroline Minuscule⁴. It was the work of an character to have been those of the 17th year of the Table of the Carthaginian (pp. 175, 290)! A theory based on what the propounder attributes to the computist in question, "subjective view rather than certain matter of fact" (p. 8), can hardly claim serious notice.

The Vatican Codex, 5755, already mentioned, (p. lvi.) has Irish glosses on fol. 2a, b, c (Glossae Hibernicae, ed. Zimmer, Berlin, 1881, p. 259-61). The contents of 2c are given on fol. 46b of the Munich MS., which is thus shown to contain the Argumenta Paschalia, beginning with § 14 of the Hist. Cyc.

Dion. edition (P. L. LXVII. 505). To set forth the omissions and corruptions of the V. text as discovered by collation with M. would require parallel columns.

² Monumenta.—Vol. 1. (Hanover, 1826), p. 92-3. As the greater Annals occupy not quite two pages and the minor (ib., p. 93-4), still less space, Minores & Minimi would more accurately respectively designate them.

expert penman, but of one whose illiteracy in Latin was on a par with that of the scribe who (in the same, but larger and coarser, hand) incorporated¹ in the text of the Irish Collection of Canons part of an Irish homily that chanced to be lying in his exemplar. An Irish pilgrim, possibly the author, carried the Computus with him and either donated the work to, or allowed it to be copied in, the monastery of St. Emmeram, of Regensburg (Ratisbon), whence it was brought to Munich.

The work is a medley of computistic data, cast for the greater part in the mediæval form of Interrogation and Response. The ambitious title is, to say the least, misleading; the slight foundation being that detached sentences are attributed to the sources indicated. Augustine is the Irish author of the De mirabilibus Sacrae Scripturae; Cyril, the pseudo-Cyril already mentioned; the Alexandrines are denoted by Greece.

The first 24 sections loosely correspond with, and have pretty much the same value as, the *Book*² on the divisions of Times in the Dubious and Spurious Didascalics in Bede. Of the bulk of the contents, the chief³ are: the year (seasons), sun, bissextile, moon and epacts, Easter, embolism, Saltus, and cycles.

That the author was Irish, appears from internal evidence. "The days⁴ of the whole year," he lays down, "are common to the epacts" (i.e., epacts can be reckoned from any day); "but the Greeks rightly count epacts from March 22. The Romans, however, numerate the epacts on Jan. 1. Wherefore, the Romans and not less the Irish compute" (a proleptic equivalent of) "the Greek observances on Jan. 1. Hence, we commence the epacts from the viii[i].th day" (of the moon) "on Jan. 1." That we meant the Irish, not the Romans, is proved by the following:—

(1) Singularis, employed throughout with the numeral adjectives to denote from the first to the ninth of the moon, inclusive, is a literal equivalent of the native uathad, oneness, singularity, used in the same way and with the same computistic meaning. proofs of,

(2) The Acts of the Council of Cæsarea, an Irish fabrication, are cited¹ and given as source² under the title Theophilus (which imposed upon Bede); whilst the opening is quoted anonymously,³ in a short recension.

Such identity of such absurdity reveals at a glance the spurious Irish Anatolius as the source.

CICLUS XI. Undecimus, a consulatu Paterniet Torquati ad nostra usque tempora decurrens, extremo anno moriente Manichaeo [Manichaeo] inter ceteros sapientes, peragitur.

DE CICLO XII. Et duodecimus, nunc tertium annum agens, ad futurum scientiam se praestans, a nobis qualem finem sit habiturus, ignoratur. (Fol. 46a, l. 14-19.)

(Aug. opp., ed. Bened., Paris. 1680, III. p. 306.)

Manichaeo has given rise to a most extraordinary error, which shows the danger of dealing with historical data without adequate information. According to Krusch (Neues Archiv, V. 158-9), the author of the De mirabilibus, who was hostile to the Irish [!] and employed the Gallican Paschal Use, noted the death, in the last year of the eleventh Cycle, of the "Irish Manichean, that is, no other than bishop Aidan of Holy Island, who, in fact, died in 651. He was the most prominent representative of the old Irish tradition, and thus the adherents of the Roman-Frankish system could have rejoiced at his death, had not his successor, Finan, followed entirely in the way of the deceased." [!] But the final year was 652; the Manichean, Manchene, abbot of Mondrehid, near Borris in Ossory, Queen's Co. ! The other sages who died in the same year are named in the present Annals.

years before. The second is: *The Saltus*¹ in the Book [Cycle] of Victorius from the Creation are 280 [282] to the Consuls Verus and Bradua. This is the Victorian Passion year 130 = A.D. 157; which, in the intended recurrent Great Cycle of 532, is = A.D. 689.

The main object of the work was to recommend and ^{intent.} explain the Alexandrine 19-year cycle, accepted finally in Iona and Ireland two years previously. In illustration of the subject, the solar and lunar characteristics of the following cycles are given:—84 (12), (Hippolytan) 112, 84, Victorian of 532, Greek of 95. To show his knowledge, the author took the last, by which he meant the 5 cycles² of Dionysius, to form a solar cycle. The so-called proofs, too long to be quoted here, are based on confusion of the Ferials and Concurrents, with the result that, according to him, every leap-year in the 95 years is wrong, and A.D. 628 is the same in solar incidence as 532!

The 84 known to the author was contained in a Cycle of Laterculus, or List, of 100 years. The initial year has ^{84:}

¹ Saltus.—Saltus in libro Victorii a principio mundi numerantur cclxxx [ii.], sub Bero et Bardua [Vero et Bradua], CC (fol. 41b, l. 11-12).

That is, $282 \times 19 = 5358$, the A.M. of A.D. 157.

² Cycles.—Ciclus Grecorum, xcv. anni, quinque vicibus convertitur in ciclo Victorii. Sed sunt alii anni superflui in eo probemus, id est, iiii. feria in fronte kali [kalendarrum (i.e. annorum)] Dyonisii super viiii. Kl. Apr., et haec iiii. feria post bissextum (fol. 45a, l. 16-19).

In fronte, the scribe wrote fl, saw the mistake and made the lower end of l part of r, without deleting the upper. The reference is to the first year of the Dionysian cycles, A.D. 532 (DC), which had bissextile Concurrent 4; that is, as the computist rightly took it, Wednesday, March 24; this Wednesday being after the insertion of the intercalary day.

Krusch took the Peiræus for a man. "The designation of Dionysius Exiguus as 'frontekalidyoniisii' points to the fact that the author of the (Munich) Computus knew the Chronography of 354." A note explains that Furius Dionysius Filocalus was the calligrapher who illustrated the Chronography (Der 84jährige Ostercyclus, p. 13).

Whilst dubious about the conjecture respecting Filocalus, Mommsen apparently has no misgiving respecting the existence of the hypothetical Table, 213—312, of Augustalis: Ut dubium est quod coniecit Kruschius in corruptela illa Filocali nomen abscondi, recte idem videtur demonstravisse laterculum paschalem centum annorum, ab a. 213 ad a. 312, memotatum cum in computo illo [Monacensi] a. 689 [recte 718], tum in antiquiore Carthageniensi anni 455 (etc. M. G. H., Auct. Antiquiss. IX. Chron. Minora, p. 34).

Victorius, according to the Computus, commences¹ with the second year of the (Alexandrine) Hendecad, that being his Resurrection year, pursuant to the opening of his Table: Jan. 1, Thursday, moon 19. (No. 1, col. V. in annexed Table.) The List (col. L. in Table) agrees with Victorius for the first revolution (of 19), after the Resurrection, (and) from moon 8 to 19 (Nos. 19 and 1, cols. V. and L.) Each² has moon 14 on March 26; Easter on March 28, moon 16 [i.e. from epact 19]. They coincide³ to the year of epact 12 (No. 14 in Table): here the Saltus of the List separates them, — from moon 12 to 24; then, from moon 5 to 16 (Nos. 14, 15, 16, 17, col. L.), where (owing to insertion of the Victorian Saltus, Nos. 16, 17, col. V.) they again become identical.

Initial
A.D.,

The Ferial of col. L. No. 1, would have readily identified the A.D. Its omission limits the agreement, such as it is, to the epacts. The year in question has therefore to be discovered otherwise. Victorian (col. V.) No. 1 is A.D. 28, DC. In the 84 years (312—395) of a 100-year List¹ of Easters (312—411) given in the Chronography of 354, 392 is the only one of the three DC years² that has Easter on March 28³. The Victorian Easter is the same, but on moon 19,—which excludes the year. This proves that DC were not the Dominical Letters of the first year of 84.

Of the nine⁴ C years, two,⁵ 370 and 381, have the requisite Easter in the Chronography List. It remains to decide which is intended. A Catacomb Inscription⁶ of 397 has Wed., Feb. 25, moon 12. This requires epact 16 = No 17. of the L. column. Now, 397 D being No. 17, 381 C (with every corresponding 85th year backward and forward) is No 1. $381 \div 84$ leaves 45; the difference between remainder and divisor being 39. Hence, to find the Cyclic No. of the 84, to the given A.D. add 40, and divide by 84; what remains is the Cyclic No.; if 0 remains, the No. is 84. The Nos. will be found by inspection in Table N.

With regard to the luni-solar structure, the Saltus⁷; we learn, is prepared in xii[i.] years, and occurs in the 4th year of the (Alexandrine) Ogdoad (cols. A, L, 14, 15) in a common (i.e., not embolismal) year, in November, thus:—1st, from moon 12 to 24, on Jan. 1; 2nd, from m. 17 to 29; 3rd, from m. 22 to 4; 4th, from m. 27 to 9; 5th, from m. 2 to 14.

Respecting the omission of the 6th, from m. 7 to 19, the words of the Computus are to be considered “Others¹ compose a cycle of 100 years: in which cycle the moon revolves 5 times and there are 5 superfluous years; therein the sun revolves thrice, and there are 16 superfluous years. Thence it is incongruous according to sun and moon. In this cycle, the Saltus takes place in the 14th year. In which number [of 100 years], the sun exceeds the moon by five days.” In addition to the fact that it required but slight computistic knowledge to discover that the “cycle” here described had seven Saltus, one conclusion seems unavoidable. Nobody who made the accurate twofold comparison of the 100 years with the Dionysian 95 could have failed to perceive the transition 7—19, instead of 7—18, in the very first of the years (85th, initial of 2nd cycle) which he rightly named superfluous. Whence it was the continental scribe, we must infer, that passed the words over. These data, exemplified, in the matter of the first Saltus in col. L. of the preceding Table, enable the epactal arrangement to be reconstructed with certainty.

The epacts will be found in Table O. The following is the conspectus of the Saltus.

leaves nothing to be desired; the incidence of the Initium, or first Sunday of Lent, being likewise supplied. The two series are given, according to the Greeks (Alexandrines), Victorius and Latercus. (The order shows the estimation in which the systems were respectively held by the Compiler.)

The Easter Calendar days remain to be determined. The Athanasian Chronicle states that the Easter of 349 was on March 25, moon 19. This agrees with the Easter of the List in the *Chronography*¹ of 354, and with the solar and lunar reckoning of the 84. The reason why the feast was not held on April 23 (the Alexandrine date) was because the Romans refused,² saying that, on account of the tradition received from the Apostle, Peter, they could not celebrate later than Pharmuthi 26 (April 21), nor earlier than Phamenoth 30 (March 26). The Phamenoth number should be 29 (March 25), as proved by the Chronography List, which has Easter on March 25 at 316, 322, 395 and 406.

(Petrine

This notable deference arose from the fact that the Petrine tradition was sanctioned in the Council of Sardica, held, we learn from the *Chronicle*³, in 343. In the Letter

¹ Chronography.—Limenio et Catulino [A.D. 349], vi[i]. Kl. Apr (Mommsen, p. 625; p. 63).

² Refused.—Phamenoth 30, [=] 7 Kl. Apr., [lunâ Paschae] 17, Deorum [scil. Concurrente] 7, Indictione 7. Sed [ita celebratum est] cum renuissent Romani, dicentes se, ob traditionem a Petro apostolo acceptam, haud progredi ultra diem 26 Pharmuthi [Ap. 21], neque citra 30 Phamenoth [26 Mar.], lunae 21 . . . (heic [scribit editor] lacuna brevis in codice, qui postea prosequitur) 7 Kl. Ap., Coss. Limenio et Catulino . . . [pascha celebratum est] (N. P. B. VI. (Chron. Athan.), p. 9).

“But” [Easter was on this day, not Ap. 23] “because the Romans refused, for they said they had a tradition from the Apostle Peter not to pass the twenty-sixth day of Pharmuthi, nor the thirtieth of Phamenoth, on the twenty-first day of the moon * * * vii. Kal. April” (Cureton: The Festal Letters of Athanasius, London, 1848, p. lvi.).

³ Chronicle.—Consulibus Pla-

& *Festal

tradition).

respecting the Easter of 346, Athanasius, after directing the Alexandrine priests and deacons to publish, according to ancient custom, that the feast will be on March 30 (the *Chronography*¹ and 84 date), proceeds.² "Let no one doubt concerning the day, or contend, saying Easter ought to be March 23 [the Alexandrine day], for the question was discussed in the Holy Synod, and all decided that the festival was to be held on March 30."

Uncan-
onical
Easters,
how obvi-
ated.

Of still greater significance is a third instance from the same source. In 333, the computed Easter of the two systems was April 22. Yet, no doubt, in compliance with the Petrine tradition, the feast was held on (the day given in the *Chronography*³) April 15 (moon 14,⁴ in the Alexandrine; moon 13, in the 84, cycle). Whence we find that cycles did not always furnish canonical Easter days, and that, in such circumstances, deviation was adopted, regardless of the age of the moon. The Calendar Paschal days of 84 were consequently March 25—April 21.

N.B.—Items omitted in §§ B, C, D, E are the same as in the respective corresponding Golden No. §§; e.g., Cyclic No. 20 has Golden No. I., Epact 19, new moon on March 13, as in § A, cols. I., II., V.; 34 has Golden No. XV., Epact 24, as in § A., cols. I., II.

N.B.—Items omitted in §§ B, C, D, E are the same as in the respective corresponding Golden No. §; e.g., Cyclic No. 20 has Golden No. I., Epact 19, new moon on March 13, as in § A, cols. I., II., V.; 34 has Golden No. XV., Epact 24, as in § A., cols. I., II.

A.D. 100 is 56; 200, 72. The No. of any other A.D. is where a line from the 100 meets a line from the A.D. less than 100: 101 and 185 are 57; 129 is 1; 157, 29; 884, 84. As there is no mention¹ of the use of the 84 later than the middle of the ninth century, the Table ends with A.D. 899.

PASCHAL CYCLE OF 84.

The Cycle is arranged according to the 30 Golden Numbers (the days of a full lunar month), some of which, owing to the incidence of the Saltus, recur before others are employed. (The same takes place in the 84 (12).) In Cycles of 84, accordingly, Golden Nos. denote the consecutive positions of the epacts, or luni-solar years, in the sequence of first occurrence. For example, XX. denotes that 19 luni-solar years were used before epact 29 found a place. These 19 were distributed amongst 28 cyclic years. The Golden Nos. being 2 in excess of the Solar Cycle, 6 of them (those passed over in the Saltus) occur but twice in the 84.

To find the epact of any A.D., multiply the Cyclic No. of the A.D.-1 by 11: to the sum, add the epact of the first Cyclic No. + 1 to 5, if, and according as, the Cyclic No. is over 14; divide by 30: remainder is the epact; if 0 remains, the epact is 30. E. g., A.D. 716 is No. 84, $(84-1) \times 11 = 913$. $(913 + 19 + 5) \div 30$ leaves 7, which is the epact. In connexion herewith, the Table furnishes undesigned corroboration of the accuracy of the 19-year cycle: 1 Saltus giving to every 20th year the same epact; in other words, making a decemnovennial recurrence: 1, 20, 39; 29, 48, 67; 46, 65, 84, etc., as in the Table (K) of Alexandrine Golden Numbers.

Cyclic No., in col. VI. For example, Tigernach¹ states that St. Columba died on Pentecost Eve, June 9, 596. This identifies the year according to the Alexandrine system, which Tigernach applied proleptically: Pentecost, June 10=Easter, April 22. On the other hand, the Saint had declared² he did not wish to sadden the brethren more by departing within the Paschal festal period. Now, at length, we are enabled to test whether he kept his word. 596 has cyclic No. 48, which has Easter on April 15, with Pentecost on June 3. The death thus took place well after the termination of the Paschal Days.

Petrine
tradition,
result
of,— Easter on moon
14—20.

Finally, what is of great importance, the 84 Cycle shows how the Petrine tradition of Easter from March 25 to April 21 necessitated the lunar days 14—20, and March and April lunations of the same epact. For instance, Cyclic No. 4 has epact 22, new moon on March 10; moon 15, Sunday, March 24,—a calendar day too early: moon 22, Sunday, March 31,—a lunar day too late. No option remained but to pass to the next lunation: new moon, April 8. Of this, the 14th, Sunday, April 21, had to be taken; otherwise, the feast would fall on moon 22, April 28—1 lunar day and 7 solar days too late.

Uncan-
onical
Easters,
how obviated.

Only in two years did the computation fail to give canonical Easters. Nos. 37 and 64 had Easter on April 22, 23, respectively. In these years, we learn from St. Athanasius and the Chronography List, in the case of A.D. 333 already cited³, the previous Sundays were selected.

Luni-solar
criteria,

In confirmation of the luni-solar calculation of the 84 from historical monuments, the following are to be

¹ Tigernach.—K. iii. [i.] Quies Coluimcille in nocte Dominica [e] Pentecostes, v. Ed. [Id.] Iuin. (O'Conor, R. H. SS. II. 159.)

(3) The Chronography of 354 has Consular Fasti from B.C. 509 to A.D. 354. Each year has attached the Roman-named week-day of Jan. 1 and the epact of the 84 (12). At A.D. 1, the text gives² the Nativity on Dec. 25, moon 15. The epact of the 84 (12) is 13; the requisite epact is 11, which is that of No. 41 (A.D. 1) of the 84.

(4) An undated Catacomb epitaph³ has Thursday, May 10, moon 15. This indicates Dominical Letter G (or AG), epact 4,—a combination not found in the 84 (12). But it occurs in the 84, Cyclic No. 43, and determines the A.D. to be 255 or (far more probably) 339.

(5) Two instances from the Paschal Centennial List in the Chronography of 354 will suffice. For 317, the List has April 14.⁴ This is the 84 date, moon 15; the 84 (12) has April 21, m. 22. For 330, April 19⁵ is set down in the same. The 84 is in agreement, with moon 14. The 84 (12) has March 22, m. 16.

(6) As the Patrician Table was, in all probability, drawn up in Gaul, the account of a lunar eclipse of 560, in the Chronicle of Marius, bishop of Avenches, is of interest in this connexion, as showing that neither the 84 (12) nor the Victorian led to immediate or general supersession of the 84.

Of the two lunar eclipses¹ of that year (May 25, Nov. 19), Indiction 8 proves the first was intended. Moon 16 on May 25 is = new moon on May 10, April 10, March 12 = epact 20. This is the epact of 560 in the 84; in the 84 (12), the epact is 21; in the Victorian, 19.

To reduce the 84 to a Paschal Table, the arrangement in Table P will be found useful. It is to be employed in connexion with Table Q by the following rule.

To find Easter by Tables.

The Cyclic No. of the A.D. being found by Table N, and the corresponding Dominical Letter and Golden No. by Table P, the Easter will be found in the square of Table Q, where lines from the two last meet. E.g., 397, des Historiens des Gaules, etc., par Dom Bouquet, Paris, 1739, t. II. p. 17B; P.L. LXXII. 798).

¹ Eclipses.—L'Art de vérifier les dates, etc., Paris, 1818, I. 305. Krusch, who states that the November eclipse is intended (the Victorian epact giving m. 16 on the 19th of that month), has a ready way of dealing with the awkward Indiction 8. It coincides, he concedes, with the greatest part of the year 560; but, accidentally, all the events recorded under the year fell in the time after Sep. 1, and, consequently, in Indiction 9; a circumstance which the author took no account of [!].

“Die vorangestellte 8 Indiction deckt sich mit dem grössten Theile des J. 560; zufälligerweise fallen aber alle unter diesem Jahre erzählten Ereignisse in die Zeit nach dem 1 Sep. und folglich in die 9 Ind., welchem Umstande der Verfasser keine Rechnung getragen hat” (Neues Archiv, 127).

But the only events recorded under the year (the revolt, capture and burning, with his wife and children, of Chramnus by Clothaire, his father) are preceded, not followed, by the account of the eclipse! The event accordingly happened within Indiction 8,—identification quite sufficient, irrespective of the month-day.

* * It remains to observe that the Vaison Inscription of A.D. 470, Oct. 26, moon 17 (Le Blant, Inscriptions Chrétiennes de la Gaule, t. II, Paris, 1865, no. 496, pp. 231-3; De Rossi, I.C. Prol. § 8. Krusch, Neues Archiv, 123), cannot be assigned exclusively to the Victorian cycle. The requisite epact is 14, which likewise belongs to 470 in the 84,—the cycle most probably employed.

The original of the part in question is: Sub Die XIV. Kl. Novembris Die Lunae Luna XVII. The emendation, XIV. VII.] is due to De Rossi (p. xciii.) His inferences, however, are based on assuming here and elsewhere (p. lxxxvi.) what is demonstrably untenable,—that the cycle observed in Gaul before the Victorian was the year in which St. Ambrose died, on the morning of Holy Saturday¹, has Cyclic No. 17. This No. has D XVII. in Table P, which give Easter on March 29 in Table Q.

The death consequently took place on March 28, not March 28. That the 84 was observed at the time has been shown above⁴ by a Catacomb Inscription of the very year; whilst its astronomical accuracy is fully attested by the lunar eclipses⁵ of Feb. 28 and Aug. 24, which require epact 16.

Cycle of 84 (12) :
year.

As regards the Cycle of 84 (12), the initial year¹, Paschasinus of Lilybaeum, in his letter on the Easter of 444, states, fell in the consulship of Antonius and Syagrius (A.D. 382). $382 \div 84$ leaves 46, the difference between remainder and divisor being 38. Accordingly to find the Cyclic No., divide the given A.D. + 39 by 84: what remains is the No.: if 0 remains the No. is 84. The Numbers will be found by inspection in Table R.

structure;

With reference to the lunar structure, it is unnecessary to give a full cycle: a Table (S) of Dominical Letters, Cyclic Nos., and Golden Nos., and a Paschal Table (T) will suffice. The epacts and Saltus are those given in the Consular Fasti of the Chronography of 354. The former will be found in the proper column in the Paschal Table T. The latter are:—

The earliest Paschal new-moon was March 5² (ep. 27): the latest, April 2 (ep. 28). The Easter Calendar days were March 22—April 21. The Paschal lunar days were the Hippolytan and Cyprianic, 16—22.

April 25, m. 22. Why March 21 was chosen is explained¹ in a notice appended to a Table of the 84 (12) in an Ambrosian Codex. (IX. D has M. 22, m. 20 and A. 19, m. 19, in the same MS.; but the first date is a computistic error.) In XVII. A, the days explain themselves; in XVII. G, March 25 was naturally preferred to April 22. Of the duplicates, the selection,² we learn from the same authority, was reserved to the Pope. As the years were the sixth and sixty-third, the prerogative was but seldom exercised.

The Cycle of Victorius³ of Aquitaine was an attempt to reconcile the Eastern and Western systems. A dedicatory epistle to Hilarus, archdeacon of Rome (and Pope in 461), whose letter of request precedes, is followed by an explanatory Prologue, which proves that in cyclic technique the writer was somewhat to seek. Paschal divergence chiefly arose from different lunar computations and rules for defining the initial month. To illustrate the first, the variety of Saltus explained.

¹ Explained.—Nullum sane permoveat eo quod quintus annus de ciclo designatum diem paschae habeat, hoc est, xii. Kl. Apl. die dominica, luna xvi. Hoc semel in annis lxxxiiii. faciendum est, hac ratione, eo quod violentia lunae vel lex paschae prohibet, ne die v. Kl. Apl. aliquis presumptive estimet se pascham facere, qua diae [sic] erit luna xxii. et super semisse. Maxime, cum lege sit cautum, ne modum lunae sta[tu]tum aliquis excedat et in gravem offensionem incurrat. Sed potius est, ut die xii. Kl. Apl. celebretur pascha, ubi levis reprehensio est quam criminis nota, sicut et in veteri laterculo continetur (Krusch, Der 84jährige Ostercyclus, p. 240).

To explain fifth year of the foregoing, the Heading states the 84 (12) began (dates being in consular notation) A.D. 298, ended 382; began 383 and 467. Table R shows the last three should be 381, 382, 466. The Ambrosian computist is accordingly one cyclic no. in arrear; his 1 should be 2, and so on.

The old list that had Easter on March 21 was either the Hippolytan, Cyprianic, or Anatolian.

² Selection.—Et hoc necessario oportuit intermittere, esse quosdam annos in qui[bus] duplices paschae in unum annum veniunt, et, quia una observanda est, erit in arbitrio summi sacerdotis conferre cum presbiteris qui die[s] elegi debeat, dummodo omnes unanimes ipsum diem paschae in unum convenientes celebremus (Krusch, ubi sup., p. 240).

* * For the Zeitz Paschal Table, a modification of the 84 (12), see Mommsen : Abhndln. der Kön. Akad. der Wissen. zu Berlin, aus dem J. 1862, p. 539-66; id. M. G. H. SS Antiqss. IX. 503-10 (a second and less satisfactory edition by the same editor); Krusch, ubi sup., p. 116-29.

³ Victorius.—For calculator scripturatum, Vol. I., p. 16, note 1, of the insertion in the 84, 84 (12), (Cyrillan) 95, and (Hippolytan or Cyprianic) 112 is mentioned. In the last-named, the lunar increments are added, he states¹, after every 16 years! As regards the second, the Latin—84 (12)—Paschal data (new moon, Mar. 5—Ap. 3; Term, Mar. 18—Ap. 15; lunar days, 16—22), and the Alexandrine (as set forth by Theophilus) are given.

Design :
original,

actual,

His original design was to digest² the years from Creation by the Bissextiles and by the truer³ 19-year system of the Egyptians, whereby the 1st and 20th years are identical. But, as this immense work was one for greater leisure, he supplied a breviate⁴ of 430 past and 102 future years, after which the whole series present edition, read calculator scrupulosus (exact computist).

² Digest.—Omnes a mundi origine usque ad Constantinum et Rufum, praesentes Coss., vdelviii. referuntur anni: quibus, ob veritatem certius indagandum, bissextos etiam copulavi. quo manifestius appareret utrum sibi vel bissextorum ratio vel dierum . . . continuata disputatione concineret . . . Restabat inquiri si lunae dinumeratio . . . transactis praesentibusque temporibus consonaret . . . iuxta Aegyptiam disciplinam, qua evidentissime deprehensum est quod, xix. annorum porrecta curriculis, in semet semper iisdem would recommence. This, it is hardly necessary to observe, reveals no acquaintance with 4×7 ; otherwise, the 28 would not have failed to be contrasted with the 19. Whence it follows that his great Cycle of 532 was not derived from an Eastern source. The author, namely, worked by quadriennial period, and found the solar and lunar data recurring after the 133rd. The Victorian Period was accordingly 133×4 . To call it Great Paschal in the sense that it was consciously based on the formula 28×19 , or $19 \times 4 \times 7$, is a complete misnomer.

vestigiis se revolvens, annum quem vigesimum inchoat, hunc eadem metiatur et primum (p. 682; p. 505).

The initial A.D., as already stated, is 28, his Passion A. P., Year (A.P.); the final A.D. is $559 = \text{A.P. } 532$. Hence, to equate the Victorian A.P. with the A.D., 27 has to be added to the A.P. As the Cycle was issued in A.D. 457, the prospective part was practically the familiar 100-year Table. The Prologue gives a Mundane period of 5201 (i.e., $5202 = \text{A.D. } 1$) as the solar basis. From one year and its criteria¹ there given the technique can be readily made out. A.M. 5658. Constantine and Rufus, Consuls [A.D. 457], Jan. 1, Tuesday, moon (epact), 20; March 25, Monday moon 14. First, in solar calculation, $5658 \div 28$ leaves 2. This No. 2 = Tuesday agrees with A.D. 457, F. The preceding A.M., 5657, is accordingly = A.D. 456. Whence the first Victorian solar year is bissextile, AG. $5657 \div 4$ leaves 1 and is leap-year,—additional proof against an Eastern origin. The Alexandrine, Byzantine, and Pseudo-Incarnation Eras made the divisor go even. On the other hand, in the Hieronymo-Eusebian Era² adopted by Victorius, which was chronographic, not Paschal, remainder 1 denoted the bissextile years.

In luni-solar computation, $5658 \div 19$ leaves 15. Golden No. XV. has consequently epact 20. To find that of

I., $(14 \times 11) \div 30$ leaves 4: the difference between which and 20, i.e., 16, is the required epact. Next, to find the epact of XIX., $(18 \times 11) \div 30$ leaves 18: $(18 + 16, \text{the epact of I.}) \div 30$ leaves 4. The difference between 4 and 16, i.e., 12, is made up of epact 11 and the Saltus. The moon's leap thus occurs, as was to be expected, in the final year. But the decemnovennial year first employed (at A.D. 28) corresponded to A.M. 5229, which latter, when divided by 19, gives (remainder) Golden No. IV., epact 19. This led Petavius¹, Bucherius² and all subsequent computists, who apparently neglected the data of the Prologue, to take this 4th to be the 1st year and to place the Saltus in the 16th, instead of the 19th. But a matter of the kind could not escape the vigilance of such a master of the science as Ideler³, by whom it was rectified.

The Cycle consists of the cyclic years, numbered consecutively, with B. before the first and every fifth; Consuls (in part erroneously) to 457 (later hands supplied them to the end); week-day incidence (denoted, except Saturday and Sunday, by ferial) of Jan. 1; epact of same; Easters, and Easter lunar days.

² Bucherius.—De doc. temp., p. 149-50. This supposed position of the Victorian Saltus (respecting the cause of which a conjecture is given, of a kind with most of the author's Paschal theories, p. 150) was the foundation of the Bucherian Golden Nos. Of the 56 pages devoted to the cycle, every 2 are occupied by 19 years: the left page containing the editor's additions, as detailed above; the right, the text, with Indictions rectified and added for the recurrent period (p. 14-69).

Bede merely mentions that Victorius deemed fit to make the insertion in the 4th year towards the end of the Ogdoad; i.e., in the 6th of the Alexandrine cycle (De temp. rat. xlii.). To this bald statement Petavius devotes a whole column of futile disquisition (I. 333).

³ Ideler.—Handbuch, II. 281. On the same page he unconsciously furnishes conclusive proof of the accuracy of the 84, in the time of St. Patrick. The Victorian epact, 20, of 457 agreed, he states, with the mean new moon, 456, Dec. 13, 7. 35 a.m., Roman time. The 84-year cycle, on the contrary, in its corresponding 76th year, [Golden No. XXV] had epact 22; i.e., new moon 2 days too early. This cycle, however, was the 84 (12); the (77th) year of the 84, on the other hand, had epact 20 (Golden No. XII.).

dition by Bucherius¹. He prefixed to each year eight items: Eusebian A.M.; A.D.; the so-called solar Cycle (beginning with GF) and Dominical Letter or Letters; Alexandrine lunar cycle; Varronian A.U.C.; correct Consuls; years of Roman Emperors; and lunar cycle. He also corrected and completed the Indictions which had been added, perhaps at various dates, to the Cycle. But the tome is so scarce, that only two² copies are known to be in Ireland.

Another edition is given³ in the Scriptores Anti-quissimi, the supplementary series of the Monu-menta Germaniae Historica, by Mommsen. Save in the abundance of MS. material, this does not gain by contrast with the work of the Jesuit. Oedipus explicet, in fact, is the motto for the 532 crabbed lines of text,⁴ alternating with 532 still more crabbed lines of variants⁵,—all the former and most of the latter extending across two quarto pages. Neither editor has tabulated the Cycle. The deficiency is supplied in the following.

² Two.—One, in the National Library; the other, in the Library of Trinity College.
